OFFERINGS IN FEBRUARY.

The offerings at the Morning Service will be:

Septuagesima, (Feb. 6.)—For General Charities.
Sexagesima, (Feb. 13.)—For Diocesan Missions.
Quinquagesima, (Feb. 20.)—For Sunday-schools.
Ash Wednesday, (Feb. 23.)—For Missionary Box Committee.
First Sunday in Lent, (Feb. 27.)—Deaf Mute Mission.

THERE ARE MANY THINGS which the Rector of a Parish wishes to say, and which his people ought to hear, which cannot well be said from either pulpit or chancel. An endless string of announcements makes an unseemly break, and often introduces a false note in the services. Besides, they are quickly forgotten, and consequent confusion arises. The pulpit acknowledges a prescriptive obligation to deal only with weighty matters, and in a sober style. There are many things which occur in parish life which cannot be made dignified. There is much information which the people ought to have for which there is no suitable vehicle of conveyance.

THE PARISH NEWS proposes in ST. STEPHEN'S to take this place, and something more. It will contain standing notices of the organizations in the Church. It will report to the congregation, month by month, what has been done. When the people contribute to any object they wish to know how much has been secured for the object, and where the money has gone. They have a right to know. When pressing claims for help come, these claims will, as far as possible, be stated in this paper. Times and places of meetings will stand here staring people in the face, so that they cannot forget them. Something will be told of what is going on in the Church at large. Instruction will be given, as well as may be, in matters which pertain to practical questions of Church manners and Church doctrine. In a word, this paper is intended to do a Deacon's work.

It will be sent to every parishioner, and, in addition will be distributed in the pews. It is not an experiment, but the introduction of a piece of machinery which has been thoroughly tested elsewhere.

SOME MONTHS AGO the clergy of all Churches of all names in this city came to a determination to try some extraordinary method to get the ear of the large class of people who never go anywhere to church. The method agreed upon was to hold a week of simultaneous, free, popular services in every church in the city. The time agreed upon was the second week in January. It was regretted by Churchmen that some week in Lent should not be chosen instead, but they were not strong enough to have their way. Accepting, therefore, the time agreed upon, the Bishop issued a letter strongly approving the attempt, and urging the parishes to join in it. Some did so, among them our own. The Rector believed and still believes that our Church cannot afford to even seem to be indifferent when the whole Christian community moves in any matter. A district was assigned to us: from 7th to 10th streets and from Market to Walnut. The Rector called together the gentlemen and submitted the scheme to them. They divided up the district among themselves and undertook to make a house to house visitation, asking every soul to come to Church some evening during the appointed week. The clergy were at their post, and the full choir did their work as they do on Sundays. Have the services been a success? That question is difficult to answer—it depends on what one means by success. On Monday evening about one hundred people were present. The attendance steadily increased until it reached about three hundred. They were mostly strangers, many of them evidently people not familiar with our service. They were attentive and devout, and whether they were benefitted thereby God knows. From all we learn, the attendance throughout the city was about the same as with us. Something at any rate has been gained.

First, Our own people have been brought face to face with the fact that they are surrounded by a great multitude who have little or no interest in the things which we count valuable, and that in some way—this way or some other—these people must be reached.

Second, These people themselves have learned that the Christian people of the city are not indifferent to their religious welfare. The Saturday advertisements in the Ledger ought to have taught everybody long ago that there is no foundation whatever for their excuse, that they "do not go to Church because they are not wanted." If they are not wanted, why are these advertisements paid for? But now that every house has been visited and its inmates personally asked to come, this ought no longer to be heard.

Third, In the aggregate, many thousands who have not been in the habit of doing so have been induced to hear the "foolishness of preaching," which is the ordained way to bring men to Christ and His Church.

THE RECTOR OF EVERY LARGE PARISH laments continually that he does not know his people, and cannot get to know them. That personal relation of priest and people, and of which the best preaching grows, seems to be impossible. In this parish there are more than seven hundred families represented. They are scattered from Camden to 49th street, and from 1500 north to 1500 south. The Rector has made it a rule to pull every door-bell in his parish at least once a year. Occasionally he gets into a house in this, his capacity as parish priest, but more frequently not. The gentlemen are down town at their business. The children are at school or in the nursery. Frequently he has a very pleasant chat with the lady —about the weather, about mutual acquaintances, and when he can bring it about, concerning the religious life of the family. But it is all very unsatisfactory. When he goes into the pulpit he is very much in the dark as to what he should say. Of the difficulties in faith and in right living which may be exercising his people he knows almost nothing. He is tempted to envy the Methodist who has learned something in Class-meeting, or the Roman Catholic who has learned in the Confessional what the people are thinking about.

It is not very clear just how this state of things is to be bettered. With the reticence of good breeding we shrink from the naked exposure of soul which is encouraged before a Presbyterian "Session," or a Methodist Class-meeting. The Confessional, for well or ill, we have abolished, and cannot set it up without being disloyal as Churchmen, and running a risk beside, which experience has proven to be too great to think of.

At the same time, it cannot be too much insisted upon that it is the chiefest part of the priest's office to give counsel and help in religious and moral perplexities. The ability to do this varies, of course, with different men, but it may be assumed that all are qualified to a degree to do this. It is incredible that after years of study and experience with just such matters any Minister is not able to do this. He can at any rate bring the sympathy of an honest and earnest mind—and he can keep secrets.

THE PEWS IN THE CHURCH are rented. This is done because long experience has shown that it is, upon the whole, the best way to carry on a Church. It is the simplest, most straightforward and honest, and produces the best results both spiritually and temporally. The support of a Church with its benevolent and charitable machinery costs money, as does everything else that is worth having. We do not believe that the American people can ever be reached or won by asking them to take the Church in forma pauperis. It is not the "free" churches which are filled with worshipers, but pewed ones. It is they also who support the Church's general charities. This can not be done where the Offertory is always needed for parish expenses. We had the opportunity not long ago to compare the offerings of this Church with those of probably the first, and certainly the most successful free Church in the country; our average offerings for charities are more than theirs for all purposes put together!

But it does not follow that because the pews in a Church are rented, strangers are therefore not welcome. As a matter of fact they are, and they have the opportunity to purchase a right to their presence by contributing as they are able to the good works which we are trying to do.

But, again, some arrangement is necessary whereby those who have pews can use them, and at the same time strangers he hospitably received. Our plan is, that all seats which it is known will not be occupied are filled by the Verger at the beginning of the Service. When the Psalter has been reached, (i. e., about eight minutes after service has begun), wherever a seat remains vacant it is filled, and the occupant of it is as welcome as he would be in his own chair in his own house.

FOR SEVERAL YEARS a special offering has been made in this Church for Missions. Two years ago it was for the "Missionary Enrollment Fund," and amounted to about $1500. Last year it was for Diocesan Missions, and reached $1200. It is based upon the supposition that each member of the parish will contribute an average of $5. A band of ladies have acted as collectors of this amount. They visit every family, receive the amount, and on the third Sunday in February put it into the alms basins. These ladies do not ask any one for an offering. They simply carry about the books for the Rector. They will do the same this year. Each one has a half dozen families, of people who live near together, whom she visits. She does not go on her own responsibility at all, but representing the Church. With the exception of two or three ill-natured persons who do not intend to do any thing for Church purposes, and who will not be asked again, and whose room in the Church is worth more than their company, they have met with a kind reception, even when the people visited did not see their way to give the amount asked.

When one does not think he is able to contribute for any purpose asked, he should say so, and that is the end of it. We suppose he is honest when he so says, and he ought not to be pressed.

The collectors will meet at the Parish House on Wednesday, Feb. 9th, at 12 o'clock.

We need half a dozen more in order to make the work lighter. If any lady or gentleman who can give two or three hours to this work will serve, they will be of the greatest use.

THE LADIES OF THE PARISH HOUSE COMMITTEE have undertaken to keep a limited number of poor ladies who are compelled to work for their own livelihood. They try to provide for them quietly plain or fancy work to do, and will put on exhibition at the Parish House such articles as they may wish to dispose of. The first display of this kind will be at the Parish House on Tuesday, February 8th, from 11 to 1 o'clock. The ladies of the congregation will find it interesting to look in.

THE FOLLOWING ARE SAMPLES of the cases which the Missionary Box Committee supply:—

BUENA VISTA, COL., Easter Monday.

DEAR MISS L——.

My husband has given me your note to answer, not that he fails in warmly appreciating its welcome promise, but that he knows the blessing of a box comes nearest the heart of the house-mother. Perhaps the delay you speak of has made me more thankful than if it had come earlier in the season, since I had entirely given up any hope of the kind, supposing that the number of boxes had not held out to reach so far westward.

It is delightful news indeed that such help is on the way. I rejoice especially over the stitches saved, for my eyes trouble me greatly, and the Spring sewing is a great bugbear. My husband thinks it will be as much as three weeks before the box can reach us, but as soon as it does, I will write again.

Meanwhile I can only thank your Society, and I do so most heartily, for the work of love you have been doing for us—the great benefit it will be to us.

There is no doubt of my finding use for the articles you mention. There is no lack in this western country of people needing such help.

Sincerely and gratefully,

BUENA VISTA, COL.

DEAR MISS L——.

I am glad to be able to report at last the safe arrival of the box. We have unpacked it, and enjoyed greatly the appropriation of the various gifts by the different members of the family. We shall be reminded of the kindness of St. Stephen's Church, or rather of the ladies connected with that Church, for many a day to come. May they be blessed in so abundantly blessing others!

Sincerely and gratefully yours,

St. Augustine, Texas.

My Dear Miss L——.

The box has come safely at last, and I must say it is an agreeable surprise to find so many valuable things in it—all so useful and good—much more than I expected, especially the fine clothing. I was just planning to get some nice clothing, and now these come in exactly. The pants, vest and coats are just what I wanted; and how thankful my heart was as I took them out of the box you may imagine.

They all fit very nicely, except I fear I wasn't quite particular enough, or else not quite skilful enough in measuring my arms, as the sleeves of the fine coat, particularly, are about two inches too short. The other coat will do well enough. But I wonder if you could find enough of the same material to make the sleeves longer? I think it could be done here, or to make the best job of it, it ought to be fixed by the tailor that made it. If you can give me the name I can send it back and not trouble any one. It is a great pity I didn't know well how to measure. But I did not think of getting such fine outer clothing, and perhaps was not careful enough about measuring. Can you take the trouble to write me? Give my kindest Christian regards to all concerned. I pray the Lord to reward them all fourfold for their truly Christian care for one of His unworthy servants.

Yours kindly and truly,

St. Paul's Rectory.

Mrs. ——.

The coat and box came to hand safely. The coat was a trifle large for Mr. ——, but I have opened the seams, refitted it, and it is splendid—so warm and comfortable in this northern climate. The shoes for each were a perfect fit. The remaining things are useful, just what we most needed—good quality. And it remains for us to send our sincere thanks to the good ladies of St. Stephen's Aux. for this substantial aid. And as you have shown your faith by your works, we will show our faith by the more faithful performance of duty to God.

Please accept thanks coming from thankful hearts, and be assured that we appreciate your labor of faith and love.

Very respectfully,

To Secretary of St. Stephen's Missionary Box Committee.

Dyerville, Iowa, Dec. 6, 1886.

Dear Madam:

I have received a letter from the Secretary of St. Stephen's Guild, asking me if there was anything else, not mentioned in my letter, that I would like added to a missionary box your Guild would so kindly send me. I believe I asked for a pair of Winter boots, No. 8, last D; Winter underwear, size 44; socks 10½, and a suit of clothes. I have not had a new suit in over three years. I have had old ones re-made, and vests made out of the skirts of coats. I would like some pocket handkerchiefs, large size, and a light overcoat for Spring. I ask for this as I am obliged to drive a great deal. I have, besides this place, charge of Farley, 7 miles east; Lareda, 8 miles south; Manchester, 16 miles west. Besides, my congregation live, some 11 miles west from here, some 12 miles south, some 11 miles east; I visit them constantly, and during this year I have driven over 3000 miles.

My principal work is here and at Farley; on Sunday I have service here in the morning, drive to Farley, have Sunday-school and service, and return here for evening service. The next Sunday I go to Farley, have Sunday-school and service in the morning and service in the afternoon, and service here in the evening. So I have three services, Sunday-school, and 14 miles drive every Sunday.

I find the most economical way of living is to keep house; that is, I have a house, have my rooms on one side and a man and his family on the other. She attends to my rooms, and I supply my own table, she doing the cooking and serving my meals in my study. I have a hesitancy about asking for more than I have already done, but I am emboldened by the letter I received to say that, if it comes within the province of the Guild, canned vegetables would be very acceptable, as they are very dear here. I merely make this suggestion, and will not be at all disappointed if they are not sent. With many thanks for the kind letter I received, and begging you will not think I ask too much,

Very respectfully,

Dyerville, Iowa, Dec. 31, 1886.

Mrs. ——, Secretary S. Stephen's Missionary Box Committee:

Dear Madam:

The box which your Guild so kindly sent me was received yesterday. Everything is most acceptable. The suit fits me perfectly. The stockings are the right size, and the cloak will prove very useful. The shirts and collars are too small for me, as also the coat and vest, but I have two needy parishioners to whom they will be God-sends. I can not thank your Guild sufficiently for their liberality; nor grateful enough to our Heavenly Father for raising me up such kind friends to help me. I shall remember you in my prayers, that heaven's greatest blessings may be thine in this life, and in the one to come the greatest blessing of seeing the Master's face and of hearing His loving words, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye did it unto Me."

I am thankful for the liberal donation of canned vegetables. I shall enjoy them, and they will remind me of the thoughtfulness of S. Stephen's Guild. I will be glad if you will return to them, at your meeting, my unfeigned thanks for what they have done for me.

Very respectfully,

I enclose the freight bill, although I feel it is trespassing on the liberality of the Guild, and that I ought willingly to pay the charges, but at your request I send them.

SPEAK OUT FOR THE CHURCH.

"From all sides, from all denominations of Christians, people are turning their thoughts to the Church's claims, and worship and history. Almost every month the writer of this meets with some new worshiper, who is just learning the Church's ways. Every year some other body of Christian people takes a step in search of the 'old paths.' People who used to denounce the Prayer Book most bitterly are quietly appropriating many of its beauties. Holy Days are winning their way to the approval of all—Christmas and Easter need no apologies now. Good Friday is remembered more and more widely. The Te Deum and Gloria Patri are sung often in congregations where they were once shut out as Romish.

"The patience, the firmness, the strong conservative fidelity which have held fast the old apostolic truths and worship, however unpopular, are finding their reward.

"But the Church and Churchmen must remember that they need to do something more than 'hold fast.' They must 'speak out.'

"'Why don't you let people know what your Church is?' is the question often asked by those just learning to love it. 'This worship,' said one, lately, 'is what I have been longing for for years. It has been described to me as a mere formality; I find it full of life and earnestness.' Said another: 'I have long joined in the popular cry that your Church was so exclusive. Now I know for myself that no other body of Christians has such liberal terms of communion. Why don't you take pains to show that fact to all?' And yet another recently asked the writer, 'Why are you Churchmen so close-mouthed?' You go about your business, and don't seem to care for what others think. If you would only speak out for your Church, as others do for theirs, you would do better."—Rev. Wm. M. Barker.

ON SUNDAY evening last the Arch Street Opera House held more than 1700 attendants. The Rev. Frederic Palmer preached the sermon, and although several hundred persons stood during the service, not one went out.

These services, which are now in their sixth year, have aroused a generous rivalry on the part of the Presbyterians, who use the same theatre for similar purposes every Sunday afternoon. One of the city armories is also open every Sunday night for religious services. There is no sensible diminution, however, of the numbers in attendance at the Opera House. The Rector of this Church is announced to preach there this evening. Last Sunday evening all those who had been in a church within the last six months were asked to remain standing after one of the hymns. Only 169 out of the 1700 present stood up!

THE COURT OF APPEALS of the State of New York has rendered a decision in the case of the suit of the Rev. S. D. Hinman against Bishop Hare, reversing the action of the inferior tribunal, which awarded damages to the amount of $10,000. Bishop Hare is to be congratulated upon the decision.

CLASS FOR HOME BIBLE STUDY.

Lecture and Examination Papers. 2d Tuesday in each month, 3.30. Parish House.

THE OFFERTORY FOR DIOCESAN MISSIONS, as reported above, is in every way gratifying. Upwards of twelve hundred dollars is a large sum of money for this purpose. It is all the more gratifying because it was almost entirely made up of small sums. It sets St. Stephen's this year where we were last year, the foremost in the Diocese in this work.

THE MISSIONARY BOX COMMITTEE reports that five boxes have been sent this Winter by the Committee: One each to Texas, Iowa, Wisconsin, and two to Virginia, one being for Freedmen. All of these have been gratefully acknowledged. The Committee have received $157.42, but owing to donations of partly worn clothing and discounts the value of the boxes amounted to $351.83. The Committee are trusting to the Lenten-offerings to enable them to send other boxes for which they are pledged. One of these being for a hospital in the West, clothing suitable for the sick, and old linen will be gladly received and may be sent to the Parish Building.

THE LADIES OF THE PARISH HOUSE COMMITTEE, as was announced last month, have undertaken to aid needy gentlewomen by receiving the work which they are able to produce, and putting it on sale at the Parish House. The number of such women is incredible. Well bred, well nurtured, and in consequence unable to compete in the hard grind of competition to make a living, they go to the wall. They have never learned the tricks of the trade. Still there are some things which they can do better than professionals. This sort of work the ladies take charge of, take orders for and sell as far as they can. One public exhibition and sale has been already held with a success really astonishing. Another will be held in the Parish House on March 24, from 10 to 5 o'clock, of which further notice will be given in due time.

MANY MEMBERS OF THE PARISH will learn with regret of the death of Mrs. Leason, formerly a "Parish Visitor." For some years she did very faithful work in the way of visiting among the poor, and in looking after the children of the Sunday-schools, and such work. The present Rector conceiving that such work should be done by the clergy themselves, did not think well to continue the office which she held, and was able some years ago to secure a place for her in the employ of the City Mission, where she did the same work for the same salary. Gradually, however, her health and strength failed until she was compelled to give it up. The kindness of ladies of the parish who were interested in her provided for her necessities. Six months ago she was, at her own wish, removed to her old home in Maryland, where she died. Her life was a hard one, but she lived it bravely, and is now at rest and peace.

THE BOARD OF MANAGERS of the Benevolent Society beg to inform the Congregation that they fear they will be obliged to send the poor women away earlier than usual, for lack of funds. And also to state that they have on hand a great number of household articles for sale, such as sheets, pillow-cases, etc. Can you not buy some of these? They have also unbleached muslin garments. The Selling Committee is on duty Wednesday, 12 M., at 1124 Girard street.

THE BISHOP HAS APPOINTED the Sunday after Easter, at the Morning Service, for Confirmation. This rite is the one by which, as the phrase goes, one "joins the Church." Of course, the phrase is misleading, as everybody knows. Every man, woman and child who has been baptized is already a member of the Church. Being confirmed does not make one any more a member than he was before. Nevertheless, the popular phrase does designate a real fact, as such phrases always do. It assumes that by Confirmation one does come into a new relation to many things concerning religion. What is it for, therefore? Who is it for? What results may fairly be expected of it?

In the first place, it is the public declaration of one's citizenship in the kingdom of God. The Church does not conduct her affairs in a corner. A man or woman comes to us, let us say, from another Church. He brings his certificate of membership with him. We accept that certificate in all courtesy. It is sufficient witness to the fact that the bearer "believes the articles of the Christian faith, and intends to lead a sober, righteous, and godly life." These are all the qualifications which the Church demands, and all that her priests are allowed to require.

But the man so coming intends to become and to be known as one of us. We welcome him, and let him come from where he may we believe before God that he gains enormously by coming. If he come from Rome, he finds freedom and sweet reasonableness; if he come from Protestantism, he finds order and spiritual support. These things we believe. That others believe so, too, is proven by the experience of the Rector of this Church, in which experience he is not singular. Of all those, whom in the course of his ministry he has presented for Confirmation, nearly two-thirds have been born and reared in other Churches!

When they come to us, therefore, we welcome them with both hands,—but, we ask something of them. We are about to become publicly responsible for them; they must on their part publicly assume their place among us. There must be nothing secret or underhanded about it. They must be admitted by the only rite which we possess for that purpose—they must be Confirmed.

But this is the lowest possible ground upon which to explain the rite. The Scripture, and the unbroken custom of the overwhelming majority of Christians have found infinitely more in it than this. They have found in it the Gift of the Holy Ghost! The phrase is a mighty one, but the thing which it signifies is true. Religion is the gift of God to men. He is lavish in this as in all His gifts, but here, as elsewhere, His gifts are habitually given in certain well defined methods. The conditions must be fulfilled. In sober truth, the condition of a certain grace is the "Laying on of the Apostles' Hands." It is idle to argue that the connection cannot be traced between the means and the end; or that the means are so commonplace that such stupendous consequences cannot depend upon them; or that other people seem to get on without the rite at all. The reply is, this is God's way—ordained arbitrarily if you will, but still ordained.

Ordained for whom? For those who are qualified to receive it. Moral faculties, e. g., cannot be given to an animal for the reason that there is no place in its nature upon which to fasten them. So the Gifts of God in Confirmation can only be given to those whose spiritual nature has been otherwise developed to the point of receiving them. It is the experience of all that this is a point for which no date can be fixed. It is simply for those who have ceased to be children, and have come to be "discreet." Up to that time they are under cover; God's gifts are held in trust and doled to them by those whom God has set over them. This is meant to be so, for sake both of the child and its parents. If they allow it to go empty, it must suffer the loss—and "better for them that they had never been born!" But now the child,—having passed through the ferment which attends the change from the boy to the man, from the girl to the woman—is to be brought by the parents, not driven, but "brought to the Bishop to be confirmed," as the parents solemnly promised at the child's baptism to do. There is to be no compulsion here. There needs none. The youth or the maiden detects unerringly what their parents wish them to do in the matter, and that they usually do.

So, again, the rite is for that large class who are Christians in all their beliefs and habits, honorable men and pure women who revere the Master, who live as best they may by His rule, and expect to lie down in hope of His resurrection and be buried with Christian burial. For many reasons, lack of early opportunity, self-distrust, shyness which borders closely upon cowardice, from some speculative difficulty in an unimportant doctrine—from neglect, which at first may be venial, but which changes into a sin—from a hundred causes they have not yet done what they know to be their duty. Confirmation is for these. Do you believe the articles of the Christian faith as they are contained in the Apostles' Creed? Do you promise by the help of God to lead a sober, righteous and godly life? If so, then you are one of those whom the Bishop is coming to Confirm. Give your name to the Rector. Tell him where he may see you and when. Make any sign you see fit, and he will answer it.

A Class of Ladies for Bible study has been formed, which will meet at the Parish Building at 3.30 o'clock on the second Tuesday of each month, at which time the Rector will go over the outline of the section of Scripture which the members will study at home during the rest of that month. The lesson at present under study is Acts i. to viii. The questions for examination papers have already been distributed. In addition to these, the following topics may be written upon as briefly as possible:

1. What do you consider the most important event narrated in Acts i. to viii., and why?

2. State what you know of five of the following places, and the events connected with each.

(a) Mt. of Olives. (e) Gaza.
(b) The Beautiful Gate. (f) Ethiopia.
(c) Solomon's Porch. (g) Azotus.
(d) Samaria (City of.) (h) Cæsarea.

3. Explain any five of the following passages.

(a) A Sabbath day's journey.
(b) The ninth hour.
(c) Acts ii: 47. "Such as should be saved."
(d) Acts iii: 19. "When the times of refreshing."
(e) "The Grecians."
(f) "The Council and all the Senate."
(g) "The lively oracles."
(h) "Calling upon God and saying."

4. What do you understand the gift of tongues to have been?

The following letters are samples from a large pile which lies constantly upon the Rector's table—and upon his heart.

Quantico, Md., Jan. 25th, 1887.

My Dear Rev. Brother:

As you were once my rector at Middletown, Conn., I thought I might make an appeal to you, in behalf of my old church. I must raise $200.00 immediately. Will you not help me? It is my first attempt at building up the waste places of Zion. I have three old, but very poor, parishes. At one time they were not the least among all the tribes of Israel.

If God and my brethren will help me, I will try to raise to its former position in Maryland the ancient parish of Stepney.

I enclose two circulars and two blank pledges. I thought you might hand one of them to a brother clergyman.

Hoping that the year may be a happy one for you,

I remain, your brother in Christ,
F. B. Adkins.

Rev. S. D. McConnell.

Dear Sir:—Bishop Peterkin, last June, 1886, confirmed a class of ten for us and laid the corner-stone of our chapel named S. Stephen's. When we began we never expected to ask aid; but we are farmers, and on account of failure in crops we are helpless. We have no Bishop, and our Rector has left us, and while we are doing nothing our Sunday-school is suffering. We only need enough to finish inside, buy windows, doors, etc. We have raised all the funds possible by different kinds of entertainments, and now we must beg or give up. We are sixteen miles from our Parish Church, too far to attend. We have worked hard for two years in our Sunday-school with an occasional Church service, hoping to gather funds enough to build, and to see all go for nought is very hard. We are not trying to build anything fine, only a plain, little frame building; and if some of the large Sunday-schools would, in pity, think of us and take even a penny collection for us, we would be enabled to go on. I beg to refer you to Rev. Edw'd Woolten, of Seaford, Del., who will tell you of our hard struggle; also to Bishop Peterkin, of West Virginia. Very respectfully,

Mrs. M. M. Todd.
Federalsburgh, Caroline Co., Md.

He who is false to present duty breaks a thread in the loom, and will find a flaw when he has forgotten the cause.

THE FOLLOWING DECLARATION CONCERNING Church Unity was issued by the House of Bishops at the last General Convention, and stands as a statement of what our Church is ready to do to bring about unity in our divided Christianity.

WHEREAS, Many of the faithful in Christ Jesus among us are praying with renewed and increasing earnestness that some measures may be adopted at this time for the reunion of the sundered parts of Christendom!

Now, therefore, We, Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America, in Council assembled as Bishops of the Church of GOD, do hereby solemnly declare to all whom it may concern, and especially to our fellow-Christians of the different Communions in this land, who, in their several spheres, have contended for the religion of CHRIST:

(1.) Our earnest desire that the Saviour's prayer "that we all may be one" may, in its deepest sense, be speedily fulfilled.

(2.) That we believe that all who have been duly baptized with water in the name of the FATHER, and of the SON, and of the HOLY GHOST, are members of the Holy Catholic Church.

(3.) That in all things of human ordering or human choice relating to modes of worship and discipline, or to traditional customs, this Church is ready in the spirit of love and humility to forego all preferences of her own:

(4.) That this Church does not seek to absorb other Communions, but rather, co-operating with them on the basis of a common Faith and Order, to discountenance schism, to heal the wounds of the Body of CHRIST, and to promote the Charity which is the Chief of Christian graces and the visible manifestation of CHRIST to the world.

But, furthermore, we do hereby affirm that the Christian unity now so earnestly desired by the memorialists can be restored only by the return of all Christian Communions to the principles of unity exemplified by the undivided Catholic Church during the first ages of its existence; which principles we believe to be the substantial deposit of Christian Faith and Order committed by CHRIST and His Apostles to the Church unto the end of the world, and therefore incapable of compromise or surrender by those who have been ordained to be its stewards and trustees for the common and equal benefit of all men.

As inherent parts of this sacred deposit, and, therefore, as essential to the restoration of the unity among the divided branches of Christendom, we account the following, to wit:

(I.) The Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments as the Revealed Word of GOD.

(II.) The Nicene Creed as the sufficient statement of the Christian Faith.

(III.) The two Sacraments—Baptism and the Supper of the Lord, ministered with unfailing use of Christ's words of institution, and of the elements ordained by Him.

(IV.) The Historic Episcopate locally adapted in the methods of its administration to the varying needs of the nations and peoples called of God into the Unity of His Church.

Futhermore: Deeply grieved by the sad divisions which afflict the Christian Church in our land, we hereby declare our desire and readiness, so soon as there shall be any authorized response to this Declaration, to enter into brotherly conference with all or any Christian bodies seeking the restoration of the organic Unity of the Church, with a view to the earnest study of the conditions under which so priceless a blessing might happily be brought to pass.

BISHOPS POTTER AND LYMAN IN LAMBETH PALACE.—On February 4th, services were held in the Chapel of Lambeth Palace, commemorative of the Consecration of Bishops White and Provoost, one hundred years ago. The Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of London both took part in the services, as did also Bishops Lyman and Potter. Bishop Potter made the address, for a report of which we are indebted to the New York Herald. The American Minister, Mr. Phelps, and probably a hundred others were present.

YOU NEVER get to the end of Christ's words. There is something in them always behind. They pass into proverbs; they pass into laws; they pass into doctrines; they pass into consolations; but they never pass away, and after all the use that is made of them they are still not exhausted.—Dean Stanley.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL TEACHERS' MEETING for study of lesson, every Friday from 3½ to 4½ o'clock P. M., 1124 Girard Street.

THERE WILL BE TWO CELEBRATIONS of the Holy Communion on Easter Day, at 8 o'clock and 11 o'clock. At one or other of these, every communicant in the Parish will receive. It is inconceivable that any one who has the right to stay should turn his back on his Lord's table on that day!

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL EASTER FESTIVAL will be on the Sunday after Easter, at 4 o'clock, in the afternoon. The carols are sung by the children of the Burd Orphan Asylum, the Parish Day school and Sunday school. The offerings of the children during the year are at this service presented and devoted to the Home of the Merciful Saviour for Crippled Children.

THE BISHOP WILL CONFIRM at the morning service, the Sunday after Easter, April 17.

All those who expect to be Confirmed will meet the Rector on Friday in Easter week, immediately after the 5 o'clock service, to sign the Parish Register, and make final arrangements. The Rector begs to repeat that it will give him sincere pleasure to meet half-way, or the whole way, for that matter, any one who is thinking of Confirmation. He wishes also to point out that the question for every man and woman to ask is not "Why should I be confirmed?" but "What reasonable apology have I for not doing so?"

Seats will be provided for those candidates who have no regular places of sitting.

The time of the ceremony is immediately after the sermon, if there be a sermon, or if not, takes the place of the sermon. The ladies will leave their bonnets in their seats. The class will assemble at the chancel rail, and remain standing until the Rector gives them the signal to kneel. (The proper attitude for the congregation in the Confirmation office, is to stand until the Bishop bids them to prayer.) There will be a celebration of the Holy Communion immediately after, at which all the newly Confirmed are expected to receive. (It is one of the "lesser morals" of the Church, that the consecrated Bread shall always be in an open, ungloved hand.)

Those to be Confirmed will, by some means, find a little time on the Sunday morning before coming to Church, to be alone with God, and ask His blessing upon what they are about to do.

THE OFFERINGS ON EASTER DAY will be for whatever good object each person contributing may mark his gift. If he does not designate it for anything special, the Rector will distribute it among such Church and charitable objects as, in his judgment, may be most useful. It is the custom of the Rector, as of all rectors, to pledge his parish to do certain things, and then to ask his people for the wherewithal to redeem these pledges. It is understood, in all such promises, that he is only to do his best, and not make promises over and above what he may reasonably expect his people to do. Our memoranda of promises for the year beginning May, 1886, at this writing has the following aspect:

For Rent of Parish House . .	(Paid)	$950 00
" Furniture " " . . .	(Paid)	400 00
" Theatre Services . . .	(Paid)	250 00
" For Chapel at Lonsdale . .	(Paid)	100 00
Scholarship in St. Augustine's School for Colored Clergy, Raleigh, N. C. . . .	(Paid)	50 00
For Colored Clergy, Petersburg, Va. . . .		100 00
" " " through Rev. Mr. Perry, Balt.		50 00
" Building French Church, Phila. . . .		100 00
" Italian Mission, Phila.		50 00
" For French Mission in Wis.		25 00
" Mission at Northeast, Pa.		25 00
" Purchase of Convocation lot at 9th Street and Lehigh Avenue . . .	(Paid)	500 00
" Diocesan Missions . . .	(Paid)	800 00

Will somebody be good enough to redeem each of these unpaid promises at Easter? Sir, which will you take? Madam, which do you prefer? At what do you estimate this year your duty in sense of gratitude for your hope of resurrection?

At the Easter Services it will be impossible to keep the seats unoccupied after the time to begin services. The pew holders and regular attendants will be admitted through the north transept doors. The front doors will be opened five minutes before the service time, after which all pews will be filled as full as they will comfortably hold.

We are quite aware of the inhospitable look that this method has. Reasonable people, however, will see the reasonableness of it; unreasonable ones will not, but that cannot be helped. The vociferous complaint that he was not given a seat on Easter day is usually heard from the man or woman who has not been inside a Church since last Easter. He declines to identify himself anywhere, to do any work, to take any responsibility, and then when he concludes to go to Church once, simply and solely for his own entertainment, he is indignant because a seat is not reserved for him, and because those who go always do not make way for him. Still, there is not very many of him, and it is hardly worth while to be much disturbed by him. He can be set over against that other very rare individual, who looks inhospitable when strangers are shown to his pew. If it would only always happen that the two would get into the same seat!

Most of our visitors—who, we delight to say, are very many—are reasonable, courteous, and recognize the fact that we wish to treat them just as well as we know how—only we must be allowed to make our own rules for it.

The Women's class for Bible Study has been successful beyond all expectation. At the last meeting sixty ladies were present, and between twenty and thirty carefully written examination papers were presented. The attendance was not only from our own Parish, but many thoughtful women from elsewhere. The plan seems to meet such a general want, that it has been determined to widen and extend our methods.

The following is proposed, and, God willing, will be formally entered upon next autumn:

1. To enroll a class of about one hundred ladies, from this parish or any other, who have some time and leisure, and who honestly wish to be well informed in religious and ecclesiastical matters. The class having been formed (each member paying a slight matriculation fee, not exceeding $5), with the aid of one of the Professors in the Divinity School, a course of study will be arranged in four Departments: (1) The Scriptures, (2) The Prayer Book, (3) Church History, (4) Church Theology. Each lady will then elect which one or more of these Departments she will take. The Rector of this Church, and one or two others, will take charge of the various departments. A lecture will be given once a month, at the Parish House, in each Department, these lectures being open to all who join the organization.

It is confidently expected by this means to draw together a company of earnest and bright women, who by study will fit themselves to intelligently represent the Church wherever they may be. It is believed, also, that this sort of work is fully as valuable, and will produce quite as much result for the Church, as does very much of our "Church work."

The next meeting will be at the Parish House on Tuesday, April 12th, at 3.30 o'clock.

The lesson at present under study is Acts viii. to xi. 18.

Examination Papers will be submitted not later than April 5, on the following topics:

I. St. Paul. (1) Biography so far as before us; (2) Character.

II. Cause of Persecution by the Jews; Results of the Persecution.

III. Confirmation.

IV. Supernatural Gifts: their purpose and their limits.

V. The Gospel and the Gentiles.

VI. St. Peter. (1) Biography; (2) Character.

The Theatre Services in the Arch St. Opera House have been carried forward until now by the Rectors of Holy Trinity, St. Luke's, St Stephen's, and the Rev. Mr. Palmer, of Jenkintown. So far, little attempt has been made to do anything more than preach simply and earnestly to the crowds who go there, and who will not go to Church. Of course, innumerable cases have arisen where the services of the Church have been asked to baptize, bury, visit sick and relieve the poor. The attempt is now being made to secure some more tangible results. The Rev. Mr. Johnson, who first started the services, has been induced to come back from New York, and to take charge of that large congregation as, in some sort, his parish. He has already begun visiting, securing their names, and hopes to organize a sort of Guild, or Society in some such way as will bring him into the relation of Pastor to people who have no shepherd. Our Parish House has been put at his disposal evenings for headquarters for "Girls' Friendly Societies," and such other purposes as may be fit, and may help forward the work. The Rector has not hesitated to promise for our people that we will lend a helping hand in whatever way may be found the best.

The building of a Rectory for St. George's Church, 61st Street and Hazel Avenue, was begun last fall. The work was suspended for the winter, but is expected to be resumed in the spring. Almost $900 is still required to finish it. It was for this object that the fair was held at the Burd Asylum last year, in which so many of the ladies of the congregation took an active part. The Sunday on which the collection was made for it in St. Stephen's was so very stormy that many of the congregation were absent, and the amount contributed was not as large as was expected. The Rector will be glad to receive additional contributions for this most deserving object.

On Quinquagesima Sunday, Bishop Whitaker confirmed twelve persons in the Chapel of the Burd Asylum, ten of whom were pupils.

The attendance at the week-day services during Lent has been large, but there are many faces not seen there which ought to be. It is noteworthy that it is the busiest men who are most frequently there. Gentlemen, your business will not suffer if you take a half hour once or twice a week to say your prayers. Some people, not superstitious, think that in the long run it will suffer if you don't.

SELECTED.

A Word to Parishioners.—Parishioners are heard very often to complain that their clergyman did not come to see them when they were sick or in trouble. They think hard of him for it. They have felt themselves slighted, and are ready to accuse him of partiality and indifference to their wants. This is the fact in most all parishes.

Now, will people look at the other side of the matter?

How many of those thus afflicted are sure that their clergyman knew of their trouble? Every one will grant that a Minister ought not to be blamed for not attending to a case of which he is in perfect ignorance. Clergymen are human and not omnipresent nor omniscient. Their means of information are not supernaturally strained so that they can tell by intuition when a parishioner is ill or in need of spiritual care. Yet many people act as though they were. The fault in a large majority of cases lies with the people themselves. Their first duty, if they feel the need of a clergyman, is to send word to him; then he will come. Otherwise they may be ill a long time without his knowing it. If you send word of your condition, and your Rector does not come to you, then complain, for you have a perfect right to do so.

If you do not let him know that his services are needed, then you do him and yourself both a grievous wrong, and he is the one to complain of your neglect. Above all things don't argue that the minister ought to know the state of health of from a hundred to a thousand souls under his charge. He ought to know nothing of the kind; he can know nothing until he is told. The true Priest is ever ready; he is more ready, generally, to be of aid to his people than people are to claim his aid.

Cut this out to Keep.—"The general rule for position in the Church Service is to stand for praise, kneel for prayer, and sit for instruction.

"At baptism, standing is the right posture for the whole congregation, till the Lord's Prayer, which is said all kneeling.

"At the Marriage Service the people stand from the beginning to the end; the bride and bridegroom only kneeling at the blessing.

"At Funerals the people should stand throughout, except during the reading of the Lesson.

"At Confirmation the best rule—that which is also the most easily followed, as it is constantly marked by the eye—is to sit while the Bishop sits, rise when he rises, stand while he stands, and kneel when he kneels, except that both minister and people should remain kneeling while the Bishop blesses the newly Confirmed."

KNEELING IN CHURCH.—A writer in the Church Press says: "In a recent issue, under 'Church Properties,' people are urged on entering their pew to 'bow their head in silent prayer.' Is there any authority for recommending such a posture? It is a favorite one, doubtless, and adopted throughout the prayers with singular unanimity by entire congregations. But it seems hardly reconcilable with obedience to the rubrical direction that the people shall kneel. Sitting on the edge of the seat, drawing the shoulder up to the ears, and touching the forehead to the back of the pew in front, is certainly not kneeling. It is an attitude of prayer for which there is no authority in the Prayer-book; neither does the Bible give us a description of any like posture. As the Bishop of Central New York once wrote, with reference to this very thing: 'We are not told that Daniel hunched his back three times a day toward Jerusalem, but that he kneeled on his knees.'

"It is a curious fact that people who 'hunch their backs' are firmly convinced that that is kneeling, and as a general rule are indignant at any hint that it is not. It would be interesting to know when and how this misconception arose. When we Americans have occasion to use the English Prayer-book, the exhortation to the people to confess their sins to Almighty God, 'meekly kneeling upon their knees,' seems to us very unnecessarily explanatory; and our version, 'devoutly kneeling,' appears like a decided improvement; but it may be it had been better to have left it unchanged. Perhaps it is owing to the absence in our Prayer-book of that one unmistakable direction that, while English congregations kneel on their knees, American ones so often kneel on their foreheads."

STANLEY'S CONVERSION.—During a recent interview between Mr. Stanley and a newspaper correspondent, the intrepid explorer and founder of the Congo Free State said: "I have been in Africa for seventeen years, and I never met a man who would kill me if I folded my hands. What has been wanted, and what I have been endeavoring to ask for the poor Africans, has been the good offices of Christians ever since Livingstone taught me, during those four months that I was with him. In 1871 I went to him as prejudiced as the biggest atheist in London. To a reporter and correspondent, such as I, who had only to deal with wars, mass-meetings and political gatherings, sentimental matters were entirely out of my province. But there came for me a long time for reflection. I was out there away from a worldly world. I saw this solitary old man there, and asked myself, 'How on earth does he stop here? Is he cracked, or what? What is it that inspires him?' For months after we met I simply found myself listening to him, wondering at the old man carrying out all that was said in the Bible: 'Leave all things and follow me.' But little by little his sympathy for others became contagious; my sympathy was aroused; seeing his piety, his gentleness, his zeal, his earnestness, and how he went quietly about his business, I was converted by him, although he had not tried to do it. How sad that the good old man should have died so soon! How joyful he would have been if he could have seen what has happened here!"

COME OUT, JOACHIM! One day when Martin Luther was completely penniless he was asked for money to aid an important Christian enterprise. He reflected a little, and recollected that he had a beautiful medal of Joachim, Elector of Brandenburg, which he very much prized. He went immediately to a drawer, opened it and said, "What art thou doing there, Joachim? Dost thou not see how idle thou art? Come out and make thy self useful." Then he took out the medal and contributed it to the object solicited for. Have not some of our readers idle Joachims which they could send out to do good in missions at home and abroad?

THE EASTER SERVICES this year were an unqualified delight. What with a beautiful day, sweet music, a large and devout congregation and a very generous offering for charities, it was good to be there, as it was also to be at the Children's Carol Service, the Sunday after Easter. Good management and good teaching has marked the schools, this Winter, to an unusual degree.

THE RECTOR WOULD LIKE TO KNOW of a place for a young woman (she is a young lady, but prefers to sink the lady for the present). She is quite competent, having learned by a somewhat bitter experience to take care of a house, or to do whatever needs to be done in a household, and is, withal, a good tempered, nice girl.

THE LADIES OF THE PARISH HOUSE COMMITTEE held a sale, lately, of articles made by ladies who are compelled to earn their own livelihood. Sixty-eight ladies submitted their work, of which there were 1139 pieces. They consisted of all sorts of fancy and useful articles, from embroidered handkerchiefs to preserved peaches and five hundred other things. The articles sold brought in $756.47. The depositors put their own prices on their work, and the Committee simply expose it for sale, and charge no commission. No lady will be allowed to deposit her work for sale unless she is one who is compelled to earn her own liveli hood. The organization cannot be used by any one to earn an odd dollar for knick-knacks or luxuries. There is too much real honest need in the world to allow time to be wasted that way.

The lady offering her work for sale must in some way make herself and her needs known to some member of the House Committee, upon whose endorsement alone her work will be received. This work so far has been extraordinarily successful. The other ladies have come to the aid of the House Committee, and their friends, both in the parish and outside, have co-operated to good effect.

A LADY SIGNING HERSELF, "W. N. K," enclosed the Rector a small sum of money, to be used for a person in distress, in case it should be used. It is not needed, and will be returned to the lady if she will ask the Sexton.

LINES suggested by Sunday afternoon studies in the life of our Lord.

I want to have Thee in my heart, dear Lord,
  There to abide—no more a transient guest ;
Earth-love has dwelt there many a happy year,
  Twining its flowers and building safe its nest.

The very gifts that should have made Thee dear,
  Taking Thy room, leaving no space within
The temple for its rightful Lord and Priest.
  While giving lodgment there for care and sin.

Now love prevails, thy grace doth conquer me,
I yield; O, help me to fling wide the door;
Break sin's strong fetters, cleanse and set me free.
"Give me thine heart!" Lord, it is Thine once more.

It needs Thee more each moment of the day,
Waking would find Thee present in the night;
To hold Thy hand by fair or thorny way,
In darkest seasons finding strength and light.

I list the story of Thy patient grace;
Thy tears I see, the hand outstretched to save.
The dazed blind beggers gaze upon the light,
And Lazarus rises from his rock-hewn cave.

Hot fever flies before Thy cooling touch,
The loathsome leper is made clean and whole;
And she whose sin was loving overmuch,
Weeps happy tears, new life born in her soul.

Spirits of evil quail before Thy word;
At Thy command is stilled the tempest's roar;
All things, save man, obey creation's Lord,
He bars his heart when Christ stands at the door.

The outstretched hand—a pierced hand he spurns—
The eyes that wept o'er doomed Jerusalem,
Still sadly plead beneath the thorn-scarred brow;
It was for us He died, as well as them.

O, love divine! help, pity, strengthen me;
Nor let me go without Thy blessing given,
Until I feel that I am wholly Thine,
And earthly love is tinged with hues of heaven.

R. A. Williams.

SELECTED.

What Missionary Bishops do.—Bishop Walker, of North Dakota, thus gives some of his experiences during the past Winter in a letter written February 2d. "The weather grows worse with us. Trains are delayed—on many branch roads they have been abandoned. Blizzards are raging every few days. The thermometer registers 20 degrees below zero by day, and 35 degrees by night, almost all the time. It has shown the mercury at 42 degrees and even 48 degrees below zero, and it has touched even 56 degrees. One of our missionaries had both cheeks very severely frozen while about his work, walking ten miles to a station in the midst of a blizzard, to hold a service. Another, strange to say, had his nose frozen while in bed at night. He had gone to one of his stations on a Saturday night, with a view to holding service according to appointment on the following day. He was assigned a room to sleep in where there was no fire. The mercury stood at fully 25 degrees or more below. The result was the calamity referred to above. Another fact that will perhaps amuse you is this. I myself have had my feet frozen recently, while in bed, too. I was on a visitation, and was sent to bed in a fireless room in a hotel. The bulk of the building was unoccupied. It was saturated with cold. The mercury stood at about 30 degrees below. We have not the extreme luxury of the East in the frontier hostelries. Mine was a single bed. It was short in proportion. The bed clothes had the same characteristics, narrowness and shortness. If I pulled them over my head to prevent the face from freezing, as the Indian does, there was an uncovering at the extremities, and consequent peril there. I could not take in a reef by drawing my feet upward, because the blankets were narrow. It was a puzzle all night to know how to dispose of the extra five and a half inches of a six-foot three and a half inch man in a five-foot ten inch bed. At some period in the night when I dozed, I presume I cut the Gordian knot. The result was frozen feet in the morning. I have been a limper instead of a walker ever since."

The Arrival of Bishops White and Provoost in America.—Easter Day was the one hundredth anniversary of the arrival in America of Bishops White and Provoost after their consecration to the episcopate in the chapel of the Archbishop of Canterbury at Lambeth, England, on February 4, 1787.

In his "Memoirs," Bishop White says:

"We left London on the evening of the 5th of February, reached Falmouth on the 10th, were detained there by contrary winds until Sunday, the 17th, when we embarked, and after a voyage of precisely seven weeks, landed at New York on the afternoon of Easter Sunday, April the 7th; sensible, I trust, of the goodness of God in our personal protection and safety, and in His having thus brought to a prosperous issue the measures adopted for the obtaining of that episcopacy, the want of which had been the subject of the complaint of our Church from the earliest settlement of the colonies, and which, we hope, will be now improved to her increase, and to the glory of her Divine Head."

Missions.—Missionary work in West Africa has been wonderfully successful. The Gleaner, speaking only of that part of it which is connected with the Church Missionary Society, enumerates seven European missionaries and forty native clergy (one of them a bishop and two archdeacons,) with 9,000 communicants, and 7,000 scholars in ninety schools and seminaries; there were 1,228 baptisms in the past year. Yet the Bishopric of Sierra Leone was not founded till 1852; the Yoruba country was untouched till 1842; and the Niger district received its first missionaries only in 1857, when no one dreamed that the youth helping Mr. Kissling in Fourah Bay College would be known all over the Christian world in 1887 as one who, for a quarter of a century, has well filled the position of the first native African bishop since the days of the early Church.

A PRAYER.

BY A. W. THOROLD, D. D.

LORD BISHOP OF ROCHESTER, ENGLAND.

O Lord of Souls, who hast chosen and called me to service in Thy Church, all my trust is in Thee, for in Thee are the springs of my life. Abundantly give me of Thy Blessed Spirit, without Whom nothing is strong, nothing is holy; and use me as it shall please Thee for the glory of Thy Name. Make my will patient, my conscience pure, my temper bright. Empty me of self, and fill me with the meekness of wisdom. Increase my faith, mellow my judgment, stir my zeal, enlarge my heart. Let my life enforce what my lips utter. Do Thou choose for me the work I do, and the place in which I do it; the success I win, and the harvest I reap. Preserve me from jealousy and impatience; from self-will and depression. Make me faithful unto death, and then give me the crown of life.

All this I ask for Christ's sake. Amen.—Selected.

Gen. Lew. Wallace, author of "Ben Hur," then an unbeliever, was riding one day with Col. Robert Ingersol, the notorious infidel. In course of the conversation Ingersol said to the General, "If you want to have no doubt as to the falseness of the Bible, take it and read it with care." Acting upon this suggestion he did so, but it had precisely the opposite effect, and gave to the world the book Ben Hur.—Ex.

A gentleman was one day relating to a Quaker a tale of deep distress, and concluded very pathetically by saying: "I could not but feel for him." "Verily, friend," replied the Quaker; "thee did right in that thee felt for thy neighbor; but did thee feel in the right place—did thee feel in thy pocket?"—Ex.

The purpose of this Society shall be to foster a desire for the corporate reunion of all Christians, and to promote the same.

III. Principles.

This Society shall seek for reunion upon the following declaration of principles as set forth by the House of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the General Convention of 1886, viz:

(1) The Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament as the revealed Word of God.

(2) The Nicene Creed as the sufficient statement of the Christian Faith.

(3) The two Sacraments,—the Baptism and the Supper of the Lord,—ministered with unfailing use of Christ's words of institution, and of the elements ordained by Him.

(4) The Historic Episcopate, locally adapted in the methods of its administration to the varying needs of the nations and peoples called of God into the unity of His Church.

IV. METHODS.

To pray for the visible organic unity of all Christians.

To prepare and circulate publications.

To arrange for and hold public meetings in the interest of Church unity.

To arrange for and hold conferences with representations of other Christian bodies.

To secure such Diocesan action as may tend to bring about reunion.

V. MEMBERS.

Any baptized person may become a member by sending his or her name to the Secretary and paying not less than one dollar ($1.00) a year, or may become a life member by paying not less than twenty dollars ($20) at one time.

VI. OFFICERS.

The Officers shall be a President, Vice President, a Recording and a Corresponding Secretary, and a Treasurer, to be elected at the Annual Meeting.

VII. EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

There shall be an Executive Committee to consist of the Officers of the Society together with seven others to be chosen at the Annual Meeting, of which Committee five members shall be a quorum.

VIII. POWERS.

The powers of the Executive Committee shall be to have general charge of the affairs of the Society, and to promote its objects, to collect and disburse funds, to approve and print publications, and to fill all vacancies among its own members or among the Officers of the Society occurring between annual meetings.

IX. ANNUAL MEETING.

There shall be an Annual Meeting of the Society in May, at the call of the Executive Committee, to elect Officers, to hear the report of the Executive Committee and to transact other business.

X. SPECIAL MEETINGS.

Special Meetings shall be called by the Secretary at the request of the Executive Committee, or at the written request of fifteen members.

XI. NOTICES OF MEETINGS.

The Secretary shall give one week's notice of all meetings.

XII. AMENDMENT.

The Constitution may be amended by a three-fourths vote of the members present at any meeting, provided that the proposed amendment be first referred to the Executive Committee and that notice of the same be given in the call for the meeting.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

President,

RT. REV. WM. BACON STEVENS, D. D., L.L. D.

Vice-President,

THE ALTAR SOCIETY, whose work is included in the report published in this number, is one of the newer organizations of the Parish which deserves special mention for the thoroughness and efficiency of its work. It is a matter of the very first importance in the public services of the Church that everything should go forward smoothly and without jar or break. To this end it is necessary that everything should be arranged to the last detail beforehand. It is unseemly and distracting for the officiating priests to scuffle about looking for this book and that place. The Altar Society sees to it that everything is ready. The clergy can enter the Church without worry, and conduct the service without break, largely because the ladies of the Altar Society make it easy to do so. The work of the Society in the adornments of the Chancel speaks for itself. One has only to look at it. Nor has their work been confined to our own Church.

THE ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH WOMAN'S INSTITUTE or class for home study is finally arranged for. The first Lecture will be on Tuesday, October 4th, at half-past three o'clock, in the Parish House, 1124 Girard Street. The class will consist of one hundred ladies. The course of study will extend over two years. An entrance fee of $5 will be charged to cover the expenses of the school. The membership is not at all confined to our own Parish. There will be four courses of study:

I. The Bible—The Rev. Prof. Peters, Lecturer.
II. Church History—The Rev. S. D. McConnell, Lecturer.
III. The Prayer Book—The Rev. Wm. R. Huntington, D. D. (of New York) Lecturer.
IV. Church Theology—(Lecturer to be announced hereafter.)

After each lecture a series of questions for examination will be given out to the students in that course, but, while it is recommended to write and submit answers to the questions, it will be obligatory upon no one to do so. Each lady will be at liberty to attend any one or all the courses as she may elect.

A library of works of reference in the different courses will be collected as soon as possible, and placed in the Parish House for the use of the members.

There is every reason to believe that the work done by this institution will be good and lasting. There are many church women who have intelligence, leisure, and an honest desire to know more, and more accurately than they do the things which belong to their faith. Much of the knowledge which they do possess is scrappy and unsatisfactory. There was never a time when it was more desirable for the people to know just what the Church does teach than now. Such knowledge, diffused among the women of the Church, will be preserved and handed on. Schools for the higher secular education of women are springing up on every hand. It is proposed to provide for the higher religious education also. While the courses of instruction will be popular, so as not to be beyond any fairly intelligent woman, it is intended that it shall be systematic and thorough.

We felicitate ourselves especially upon securing the Rev. Dr. Huntington's aid. No voice in the Church can speak with so much authority or interest upon liturgies as his The course of study in his Department (which will also give an idea of the method in all the Departments) will be as follows:

Liturgies: The students are expected to have an American and an English Prayer Book; Barry's Teachers' Prayer Book, or The Prayer Book Interleaved. (These are all small and easily procured books.)

The lesson each month will be that portion of the Prayer Book considered in the preceding month.

The Course of Lectures will be as follows:

First year:

Oct. 25. The Origin of Liturgies.

Nov. 22. History of the English Prayer Book, including the American Version of 1789.

Dec. 20. Structure of the Daily Offices.

Jan. 24, 1888. The Lectionary and the Psalter.

Feb. 28. Venite, Te Deum, Benedicite, Benedictus, Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis.

Mar. 27. The Prayers.

Apr. 24. The Apostles' Creed.

May 29. The Litany.

Second year:

I. Structure and Purport of Holy Communion Office.
II. The Office as far as the Creed.
III. The Nicene Creed.
IV. Creed to End of Prayer of Consecration.
V. Remainder of Office.
VI. Baptismal Office.
VII. Occasional Offices

THE PARISH NEWS will print, from month to month, the names and pages of the various books to be read in connection with this and the other courses.

Ladies wishing to join the class will please address MISS ANNE SANDERS, Secretary, 410 S. 15th Street.

THE DIOCESAN CONVENTION, which met in St. Luke's Church in May, among other actions, did the following things:

The Bishop reported that 9 persons had been ordained, 2 deposed, 3 corner-stones laid, 3 churches consecrated, 2,149 confirmed.

The committee on the claims of lay deputies to seats reported adversely to the admission of Miss Addie C. Baker, of St. Luke's, Chadd's Ford, on the ground of its unconstitutionality. The report was adopted.

A resolution was reported by the Rev. Dr. Benjamin Watson, of the Committee on the Permanent increase of the Episcopal Fund, urging the need of a substantial increase, and the appointing a committee of five to devise means to secure an additional sum of $100,000.

The report of the Board of Missions was very encouraging, showing great activity in all the convocations. The receipts by the Treasurer of the Board was $12,447.53. Amount contributed outside the board for maintenance of diocesan missions and permanent improvement of mission churches, $28,700.00. Total receipts, $41,147.53.

By resolution attached to the Report of the Committee on the American Church Building Fund it was urged that each parish contribute to that fund once a year, and that an auxiliary commission of five clergymen and five laymen be appointed for this diocese.

The election for Standing Committee resulted in the following being chosen:

The Rev. Daniel Goodwin, D. D., the Rev. Benjamin Watson, D.D., the Rev. J. D. Newlin, D.D., the Rev. Thomas F. Davis, D.D., the Rev. J. De Wolfe Perry, D.D., Mr. W. W. Frazer, Jr., Mr. P. P. Morris, Mr. James S. Biddle, Mr. Edward Olmsted, Dr. John Ashurst.

Canon X. was passed, which provides that for the Episcopal and Convention Fund not more than four per cent. shall be assessed on the salary of the minister, including the use of rectory and current expenses, that is, fuel, lighting, music, bell ringing, care of the Church and grounds and ordinary repairs.

A Canon was passed relating to the trial of a clergyman, which provides that a court of ten clergymen shall be triennially elected for this purpose from the presbyters of the diocese entitled to seats in the convention (except members of the Standing Committee for the year who shall not be eligible). The accused shall have the right to peremptorily challenge five and may challenge any or all the rest for cause.

The court as chosen by ballot is as follows:

The Rev. Henry Brown, E. A. Foggo, D.D. T. C. Yarnall, D.D., J. B. Falkner, D.D., the Rev. Isaac Gibson, W. P. Lewis, D.D., W. F. Paddock, D.D., C. A. Maison, D.D., the Rev. George G. Field, the Rev. G. H. Kinsolving.

SELECTED.

SENDING CHILDREN TO ROMISH SCHOOLS.—The following words from a wise and devoted clergyman of our Church will bear serious pondering:

"This practice is growing among American Protestants, and has been forced upon our notice in our own parish in several instances within the past few years. We do not hesitate to condemn it thus openly and emphatically. If the Rector were more frequently consulted—as he ought to be—as to the schools away from home to which the children of his charge are sent, this protest would not be necessary. But so far as he is responsible before God for the souls of his people, he must protest against their exposing their children in this way to influences calculated to so largely undo the religious teachings of their own Church. It is one thing to respect the faith and views of those calling themselves Christians, who differ from us. This we heartily do. We recognize their rights of conscience and worship as fully as we maintain our own. But it is a very different thing to act as if difference in faith amounted to nothing, and to stultify our own faith by bringing in another which contradicts it. It is not the only point to ask whether children thus taught are imperilling their salvation. We do not need to ask or answer such a question. It is enought that they are thus exposed to what this Church calls "false teaching"—opposed to the Gospel—and that it is made the solemn duty of her clergy to "banish and drive away all such erroneous and strange doctrine" from her midst. As for the claim that no direct influence is used in these schools to pervert Protestant faith, it is answer enough that the indirect influences of this kind are strong and constant. As for the kind of education given, there is as good and, we believe, a better, sounder, and more thorough education to be had in Protestant schools, and we believe also, one far more valuable and practical, than the mere graces and accomplishments which are the main attractions of Romish conventual education. As for the cheapness of such education—no one will deny this; but it ought to be a very poor consideration and compensation in the eyes of those who ought to value their own faith and their childrens' more than all things else.

"We have spoken thus plainly out of a sense of duty. We wish to emphasize what we have said, too, with all the authority which belongs to our office. We beg our people to give good heed to what has been said."

"WILL PARENTS AND SPONSORS look into the Baptismal Office, and notice that it is their duty to take care that children are brought to Confirmation? With too many the initial effort is left to the Rector, when the Church places the responsibility for it with them. With some, the neglect of duty is so gross that they actually hinder the Rector in his work with the children; they will not suffer those who are entering the kingdom of heaven to go in. How many are actively engaged at this moment in preparing their children's minds for decision with reference to the Bishop's visit? With boys especially, it it needful that they "take sides" early.

A NOTABLE TILT.

Col. Ingersoll was thrown accidentally into the society of Henry Ward Beecher. Four or five gentlemen were present, all of them prominent in the world of brains. A variety of topics was discussed with decided brilliancy, but no allusion made to religion. The distinguished infidel was of course too polite to introduce the subject himself, but finally one of the party, desiring a tilt between the Colonel and Mr. Beecher, made a playful remark about Colonel Ingersoll's idiosnycracy, as he termed it. He at once defended his views in his usual apt rhetoric, in fact he waxed eloquent. He was replied to by several gentlemen in very effective repartee. Contrary to the expectation of all, however, Mr. Beecher remained an abstracted listener, and said not a word. The gentleman who had introduced the subject with the hope that Mr. Beecher would answer Col. Ingersoll, at last remarked:

"Mr. Beecher, have you nothing to say on this question?"

The old gentleman slowly lifted himself up from his attitude, and replied:

"Nothing. In fact, if you will excuse me for changing the conversation, I will say, that while you gentlemen were talking my mind was occupied with a most deplorable spectacle which I witnessed to-day."

"What was it?" at once inquired Col. Ingersoll, who, notwithstanding his peculiar views of the hereafter, is noted for his kindness of heart.

'Why," said Mr. Beecher, "as I was walking down town to-day, I saw a poor lame man, with crutches, carefully and slowly picking his way through a cesspool of mud, in the endeavor to cross the street. He had just reached the middle of the filth, when a big burly ruffian, himself all bespattered, rushed up to him and jerking the crutches from under the unfortunate man, left him sprawling and helpless in the pool of liquid dirt, which almost engulfed him."

"What a brute he was," said Col. Ingersoll.

"What a brute he was," they all echoed.

"Yes," said the old man, rising from his chair and brushing back his long white hair, while his eyes glittered with their old-time fire as he bent them on Ingersoll, "yes, Col. Ingersoll, and you are the man. The human soul is lame, but Christianity gives it the crutches to enable it to pass across the pathway of life. It is your teachings that knock these crutches from under it, and leave it a helpless and rudderless wreck in the slough of despond. If robbing the human soul of its only support on this earth—religion—be your profession, why ply it to your heart's content. It requires an architect to erect a building; any incendiary may reduce it to ashes!"

The old man sat down, and silence brooded over the scene. Col. Ingersoll found that he had a master in his own power of illustration, and said nothing. The company took their hats and separated.

THE QUEEN'S JUBILEE.

The programme for the jubilee service in Westminster Abbey on the afternoon of Tuesday, June 21, has been announced. The arrangements for fitting up and decorating the interior of the Abbey are to be on such an elaborate and extensive scale that the dean and chapter are to give possession of the building to the lord chamberlain on Monday, May 2, and it will be entirely closed to the public till Sunday, June 3, during which period the daily services are to be held in the adjoining parish church of St. Margaret's. It is intended to arrange the seats on much the same system as was adopted at the coronation; every place will be numbered and booked to the person who is to occupy it. There will be a wide passage up the nave from the west door to the choir-gates, along which the Queen, the royal family, the great officers, and the representatives of foreign courts will pass in procession. The difficulty of finding places for all the representative personages who must be invited is great. Everybody regrets that the Queen should have preferred the abbey to St. Paul's which is so admirably adapted in all respects for a state service of this kind. The whole service is to be comprised within an hour, by the Queen's command, and this sharp time limit makes the selection of the music a very difficult business, and will embarrass the Archbishop of Canterbury, whose sermon cannot possibly exceed fifteen minutes in delivery. The service is to begin with the Te Deum, which will probably be sung to the effective setting of Sir John Goss. This is the Thanksgiving Te Deum, which he composed for the service at St. Paul's on the occasion of the recovery of the Prince of Wales in 1872. Then will come a few prayers and collects, to be followed by Dr. Bridge's new "Jubilee Anthem." The archbishop's sermon will be next, and the service will conclude with Handel's "Coronation Anthem," "Zadok the Priest;" or with the "Hallelujah Chorus." Dr. Bridge's new anthem, which was performed before the Queen and Princess Beatrice in the private chapel at Osborne on January 28, when her majesty approved of the work and accepted the dedication, is set to words from II. Chron. ix. 8. The first part of this verse is introduced into the Coronation Service, and the second part was the text of the sermon which was preached in the abbey by the Archbishop of York at the coronation of George III. The melody of the National Anthem is introduced very effectively at two places in the accompaniment, and there is a chorale founded upon the tune of "Gotha," which was composed by the Prince Consort.

THE RECTOR REGRETS, more than he can say, that his wretched illness has broken in so much upon his work. He has gone away for a vacation of two or three months. He does not think that he needs it, but his friends say that he does, and said it in such a way as to convince him that they meant it, and so he is gone. The affairs of the Parish are in the competent hands of the Rev. Mr. Miller, who can always be found by going to the Parish House, 1124 Girard Street.

ONE OF THE NECESSARY DRAWBACKS to church work in a large city, especially one in the latitude of Philadelphia, is that everything has to come to a stand-still in the Summer. Not only is much time lost, but the enthusiasm flags and requires still more time to get things under way again. Practically everything ends at Easter. The Sunday-school goes on a month or so longer, but by the end of that time so many teachers have left town that it has to stop too. There is no use complaining of this. It is one of the has-to-be's. But some care needs be observed lest church people get the notion that a vacation in church work means a vacation in religion. There is no vacation in religion. The duty and necessity of receiving the Holy Communion, saying one's prayers, and hearing sermons is just as great at the seashore or the mountains as in the city. One's religion, if it be of any value, is not at all a matter of geographical locality, nor is it in any way affected by the thermometer. If it cannot stand the test of change of circumstances, there is something defective in its quality. A prayer book is a very small and convenient article of luggage, and any churchman or woman knows well enough how to use it to lead the devotions of a little group of friends in the parlor of a Summer hotel or out under the shade-trees. If there is a church in the place where one is, it is his business to go to it.

Religion, like every other activity, is largely a matter of habit. Habit is just as potent a factor in good things as bad ones. The habit of church-going is one which is readily broken. Summer is a perilous time for it. If suspended then there is always danger of its not being resumed, or of having lost its zest when the Autumn comes.

Then again, one cannot overestimate the importance which it is to the little local church or chapel for the Summer visitors to go to it. It brings hope and new life to the people who are always at home there. It is not what one puts in the alms basin alone—this is the small part of it. It is the evidence that the people who belong to the great world, the great world of business, of fashion, have not lost relation with the other world which is unseen. Then there is nearly always some local guild, or society, which one can look in upon and encourage by some touch of the Church's free masonry. In a word, if one's religion is good for anything in Winter, it will not shrivel and disappear under the changed circumstances of Summer. Is it too much to hope that wherever St. Stephen's people are seen this Summer, they may show by their conduct that the Church of which they are members is one which believes in earnest and steadfast duty?

THE ANNOUNCEMENT of the death of Bishop Stevens, of Pennsylvania, recalls a life of singular strength. Representing as he did the great Diocese of Pennsylvania, and especially the Church in the great City of Philadelphia, it is but a just tribute to his character to say that he proved himself eminently worthy of both. A firm gentleness, guided with a rare good judgment, marked everything he said and did. Pronounced in his views, fearless in expressing them, he yet had a winsomeness that kept him free from unnecessary personal antagonisms. His long episcopate has covered an era in the Church's development filled with stirring events and achievements, in many of which he himself was a prominent actor. At his death, after a long and weary illness, the whole Church joins in lamenting a good and a wise leader in the important field over which he presided.—The Churchman.

THE ANNUAL REPORT of the Board of Diocesan Missions has been distributed in the Parish. It states that the total amount contributed exceeds that of last year, which greatly exceeded the contributions of any previous year. The receipts from all sources were $12,447.53.

Appropriations were made and paid as follows:

TO CONVOCATIONS FOR GENERAL PURPOSES.	Appropriated.	Amount appropriated last year.
To Convocation of Chester.....	$3,000 00	$1,950 00
" " West Philada.....	800 00	770 00
" " Norristown.....	700 00	400 00
" " Germantown.....	2,800 00	2,700 00
" " Northeast Philada	1,200 00	850 00
" " Northwest Philad.	1,400 00	1,060 00
" " Southeast Philada	1,800 00	1,690 00
" " Southwest Philad.	800 00	800 00
Total appropriations for general purposes	$12,500 00	$10,220 00
Special appropriation to St. John's, New London, to clear debt church building.....	150 00
Grand total.....	$12,650 00

There is a balance of $1,850.80 carried forward to the account of next year.

The Convocation reports show that the financial part of the work has been thoroughly systematized, and that only seven churches in the entire Diocese failed entirely to make any contribution. Thus the support of Diocesan missions, on the basis of regular and systematic contributions from all the churches, may be said to be now firmly established. Moreover, the money paid into the treasury of the Board by no means represents all that has been raised for Diocesan mission work or church extension in the Diocese.

THE WORK of the Children's Country Week Association increases steadily as the years go by. The growing appreciation of this charity has brought larger revenues to its treasury, and in consequence nearly one thousand more little children have enjoyed the Country Holiday in 1886, than in any previous year. Those who have a bountiful share of the world's goods, and are away from the heated city, cannot do a kinder deed than to help this movement, which gives to those crowded in the courts and alleys a chance to breathe the pure country air even though but for a little while.

SELECTED.

A PRETTY anecdote is told of Queen Victoria and Mendelssohn. A short time before his death the great composer visited the Queen. He sat down to the piano, and played accompaniments while she sang some of his songs. When Mendelssohn rose to go, Victoria warmly thanked him for the pleasure he had given her, and said:

"'Now, what can I do to give you some pleasure?' expecting him to mention some gift or honor she could confer upon him. Mendelssohn at first declined to mention anything, but when her Majesty insisted, he frankly told her that he was a lover of little children, and that he desired to see the royal children in their nurseries. The Queen mother was much pleased, and kindly led him through the nurseries, and they spent a pleasant hour talking in a friendly way about their children."

MACAULAY once said, in conversation, "We are tormented by the little troubles of life, not its great ones. A great one calls forth our thought to overcome it, and is usually conquered; the small ones we allow to vex or depress us. If a thousand Megatheriums were let loose in Europe, they would all be killed and in museums in twenty-four hours." An excellent text is this—worth pondering, especially by those who mourn over "the universal wretchedness of human life."

CARLYLE once asked an Edinburgh student what he was studying for. The youth replied he had not quite made up his mind. There was a sudden lightning flash of the old Scotchman's eye, a sudden pulling down of the shaggy eyebrows, and the stern face grew sterner as he said: "The man without a purpose is like a ship without a rudder; a waif, a nothing, a no man. Have a purpose in life, if it is only to kill and divide and sell oxen well, but have a purpose; and having it, throw such strength of mind and muscle into your work as God has given you."

LOSSES.

Upon the white sea-sand
There sat a pilgrim band,
Telling the losses that their lives had known,
While evening waned away
From breezy cliff and bay
And the strong tides went out with weary moan.

One spake with quivering lip
Of a fair-freighted ship,
With all his household to the deep gone down;
But had wilder woe,
For a fair face, long ago,
Lost in the darker depths of a great town.

There were some who mourned their youth
With a most loving truth,
For its brave hopes and memories ever green;
And one upon the West
Turned an eye that would not rest,
For far-off hills, whereon its joy had been.

Some talked of vanished gold,
Some of proud honors told,
Some spake of friends that were their trust no more;
And one of a green grave
Beside a foreign wave,
That made him sit so lonely on the shore.

But when their tales were done
There spake among them one,
A stranger, seeming from all sorrow free—
"Sad losses have ye met,
But mine is heavier yet,
For a believing heart hath gone from me.

"Alas!" these pilgrims said,
"For the living and the dead,
For fortune's cruelty, for love's sure cross,
For the wrecks of land and sea;
But, however, it came to thee,
Thine, stranger, is life's last and heaviest loss."

—Francis Browne.

HAPPINESS.—Most people seem to consider that happiness is to be obtained by possessing the good things of this world, such as riches, grandeur, and power; but these, so far from procuring it, are very often the source of much misery to their possessor.

Indeed, the misery attendant upon riches has become a proverb; and how men, universally admitting its truth, should yet think that riches is the only path to happiness is perfectly astonishing.

Neither must we look for happiness in power or grandeur.

The kingly diadem often covers a brow oppressed with care; and the royal robes conceal a breast to which happiness is a stranger.

Yet people are still wedded to the belief that the splendor of a crown and the flattery of courtiers must make their possessor so supremely happy, that whatever miseries are attendant on his station must be swallowed up in the preponderance of his bliss.

It is this false idea that has incited men to wade through seas of blood and crime, in order to obtain what they consider to be the acme of happiness—a throne.

But, suppose such men do obtain the object of their ambition, suppose they do obtain the crown, the riches, the power, which they have so often coveted, do they procure, along with them, the happiness which they expected?

No; for they find nothing in all their power to allay the remorse which preys upon their mind.

Let us now look on the other side of the question.

Let us behold the unfortunate traveler who through life, in the midst of poverty and seeming misery, still maintains his inward peace of mind—still feels the bliss of being happy.

Though frowned on and scorned by the world—though despised by those on whom fortune has more profusely lavished her favors—though considered but as an outcast from society—still he will have more inward peace, more calmness of soul than those who, with riches, have to experience the pangs of a guilty conscience.

There is nothing, however, either in riches or poverty to make a man happy or otherwise.

Happiness and misery depend upon the mind—upon the inward soul of the individual.

Outward circumstances cannot control it; or, if they do, they do so in a very small degree; for we see that misfortune, that poverty, that all the ills of the world cannot make a good man miserable; and that splendor, riches, and all the good things of this life cannot make a bad man happy.

The single thought is a mine of comfort; it is a universal remedy for all the wounds which misfortune inflicts upon him.

OLD SUNDAY CUSTOMS.

Dr. Eggleston, in a paper on "Church and Meeting House before the Revolution," in April Century, says; "In Connecticut, perhaps more than anywhere else, Sunday was a sort of popular idol, nor did the rigor of its observance abate perceptibly until long after the Revolution. This extreme scrupulosity about Sabbath-keeping was doubtless the moving cause of the building of the 'Sabbath-day houses;' these were little shanties standing on the meeting-house green, each intended to accommodate a family during the interval between the two services. Some Sabbath-day houses were built with a stall at one end to shelter the horse, while the family took refuge in the other, where there was a chimney and a meagre furniture of rude seats and a table. Here on arrival, before the first service, the owners lighted a fire and deposited their luncheon, and to this camp-like place they came back to eat their doughnuts and thaw themselves out after their first long sitting in the arctic climate of the meeting-house. Sometimes two families had a Sabbath-day house together, sometimes there were two rooms in a Sabbath-day house that the sexes might sit apart—for nothing so agreeable as social converse between boys and girls was permitted during the consecrated time. But some parishes in Massachusetts, and perhaps elsewhere, had a common 'noon-house' for all comers to rest in. Fireside assemblages on Sunday, whether in the parsonage or the noon-house, were in danger of proving delightful to those who were prone to enjoy the society of other human beings, and hence the pastors 'were put upon their best contrivances,' to have most of the interval between the services filled up with the reading aloud of edifying books and other exercises calculated to keep the mind in a becomingly irksome frame."

UPSETTING MOSES.

One of the wits of the National Baptist has written a "Saw-mill Dissertation" on the subject of "Upsetting Moses," from which we take an extract, Jim Mahley began the talk: "I say, Deacon, Darwin's theory of evolution is a little hard on the 1st chapter of Genesis. Of course we don't know yet how it will turn out; but it looks a little as though they were going to upset Moses."

The Deacon gave no answer. He surely must have heard Jim's remark. Presently he was observed to be counting his fingers slowly, and with pauses for thought between each enumeration. After a while Jim ventured to ask, "Counting your saw logs, Deacon, aren't you?"

"No," said the Deacon; "I'll tell you. Your remark set me a thinking. I was just counting out how many times in the course of human history somebody has upset Moses. First of all, two old jugglers, named Jannes and Jambres, undertook this; but they failed. Then a certain king named Pharaoh went at the work of upsetting. He must have found it more work than he anticipated, for he has not reached home yet. Then three leaders of liberal thought, Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, went to the job. They failed in the upsetting party; but they secured a bit of ranche for themselves which they and their children hold quiet possession of until this day. Later on, a king named Nebuchadnezzar entered upon the upsetting business. He did not succeed either. He spent seven years chained to a stump; and when he had served out his time he had changed his mind and was a sadder and wiser man. His successor met with still greater disaster in a similar attempt. Since that time there have been no end of persons who have tried to upset Moses. Some ancient heathens, Celsus and Prophyry, and Julian the Apostate, and latterly those German critics, and these "scientific" people, and then that man Ingersoll, are at the same thing.

"Years ago, when I was in Boston, I heard of a meeting of Freethinkers, at a place called Chapman Hall. I could not resist the temptation to go just once and hear what they said. And what do you think they were doing? They were engaged in the old enterprise of upsetting Moses. And yet Moses hath to-day, in the synagogues of Boston, more persons that preach him than he ever had before.

"It is astonishing how much upsetting it takes to upset Moses. It is like upsetting a granite cube. Turn it on which face you will, there it stands as solid as ever. The cube is used to being upset, and does not mind it. It always amuses me when I hear a fresh cry from some new quarter averring that some man, whom nobody has ever heard of, has found out a sure way of doctoring what all others have failed. And now here comes Jim Manley; and Moses has to be upset again. Ah, well—" and the Deacon sighed.

There was a roar of laughter which made the rafters of the saw-mill ring, and all joined in it except Jim.

"IN THE NAME OF THE PROPHET, FIGS?"

"In the name of the Prophet, figs?"
  Through the drowse of the noon afar,
Came droning the Arab vender's cry
  As he threaded the thronged bazaar.
With the courage that comes of faith,
  He neither had thought nor care,
Though the lip of the scornful Greek might curl
  Or the insolent Frank might stare,

"In the name of the Prophet, figs!"
  A traveler loitering near,
Half screened in a niche's deep recess,
  Turned languidly round to hear.
But scarce had the Arab passed
  Ere a ripple that seemed a sigh
Blurred faintly the calm of his lip, and broke
  In a haze on his dreaming eye.

"In the name of the Prophet, figs!"
  He listened with downcast face.
"This Moslem," he said, "is brave to own
  His creed, in the market place;
While I, with supremest trust,
  And a hope that can know no shame,
Not once in the midst of this multitude
  Have thought of my Prophet's name."

"In the name of the Prophet, figs!"
  No vagueness about the way.
He honors the slow muezzin call,
  When his hour has come to pray.
It matters not where he be,
  His worship his faith reveals;
Would I have the manhood, amid these crowds,
  To kneel as the Arab kneels?

"In the name of the Prophet, figs!"
  It sinks to an echo sweet,
Yet floats to me back with a pungent sting
  Of reproach in this foreign street.
It bids that, with faith as bold
  As the Moslem's, I bravely do
All things whatever, or great or small,
  In the name of my Prophet, too!

THE parents of unbaptized children are reminded that they can have baptism administered at any service, by giving timely notice to the clergy of the church. It is not well to postpone this duty, but right that the children be brought to the church for Holy Baptism at the earliest opportunity.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH will be open all Summer, both morning and afternoon on Sundays, and at 11 o'clock every Festival and Saint's Day during the season. Last Summer it was closed for a month because the nature of the repairs required it.

ROBERT RAIKES in telling how he began to feel an interest in Sunday-schools, says: "The utility of an establishment of this sort was first suggested by a group of little miserable wretches whom I observed one day in the street, where many people employed in the pin manufactory reside.

"I was expressing my concern to one, at their forlorn and neglected state, and was told, that if I were to pass through that street on Sundays it would shock me, indeed, to see the crowds of children that were spending that sacred day of rest in noise and riot, to the extreme annoyance of all decent people. I immediately determined to make some effort to remedy the evil. Having found four persons who had been accustomed to instruct children in reading, I engaged to pay the sum required for receiving and instructing such children as I should send to them every Sunday. The children were to come soon after ten in the morning and stay till twelve, they were then to go home and return at one; and after reading a lesson they were to be conducted to church. After church they were to be employed in reading the catechism till after five and then be dismissed, with an injunction to go home without making a noise, and by no means to play in the street. This was the general outline of regulations."

One cannot but marvel at the change that has taken place, not only as to the time occupied in teaching, but also as to the purpose of the Sunday-school itself. There are but few who go to learn to read and write, except the Chinese who are within our land. The object of the school has been changed. The secular studies have been superseded by the religious, so that the school has taken so prominent a place that it is feared the children are led to think their attendance there does away with any need for taking part in the services of the Church. Many seem to think that the Sunday-school is the children's church. There are earnest voices warning against this tendency, and trying to show how that the school has a very valuable place, not in supplanting the Church, but rather in strengthening its hold upon the young by guiding them, in the critical age, to devote their lives to its service, and to love and avail themselves of the sacramental means of grace which our Lord has established.

The influence of the old system of teaching to read and write has not entirely passed away. There are men and women, at the present day, who say that all the learning they ever received was from the faithful teacher who, knowing there was no other way, took the children just as they were and patiently helped them to learn on Sunday what they could not find time or place during the other days of the week. But these cases are now the exception. Our public day schools and our Winter night schools give all opportunity to learn. Parents must be woefully indifferent to the interests of their children if they do not avail themselves of the privileges extended.

And so it is, the Sunday-school has drifted away from its first work. There is no need for such labor. But the other work is not taken from it, but rather it seems, as the years go by, the religious training of the young comes more and more heavily upon the Sunday-school teacher. Our public schools, from their nature, cannot teach the principles of our holy religion. Constituted as they are, they necessarily are shut off from all this. They are for the children of all people, and creeds are different and sects are opposed. This is so universally acknowledged that it is even made, in certain quarters, a reason for crying out against the present system of public school education. But the schools are as they are, and the children must not have their religious training neglected, or woe be to the nation. What then is to be done? It is evident the teaching must be found elsewhere. The Church's idea is that the parents or sponsors should assume the responsibility of teaching, which is rightfully theirs. Having faithfully done this, and seeing that the child learns the Creed, the Lord's Prayer and the Ten Commandments, and all other things which a Christian ought to know and believe to the soul's health, and that it is virtuously brought up to lead a godly and a Christian life, the Church urges the parents that they shall cause these children to come to the Church "obediently to hear and to be ordered by the minister." This is the ideal —but it is not followed generally. Even if it were, under the present condition of society, many children would absolutely fail to have any attention paid to their religious training. The Church feels this to be, alas! too true. Therefore is it in all the different bodies of Christians, and among those who are disciples of other religious systems, the Sunday-school is taking a steadily developing importance.

If all were earnest in their faith, realized their responsibility, and were capable of imparting instruction on the one hand, and the minister, on the other, could find a way to meet each individual child, and so do that which the Church most earnestly directs to be done, there would be no need for the Sunday-school. But how many Christians fail to take an hour or so to give religious teaching to their children! How many feel incompetent to do more than watch over themselves, lest by bad example they should do injury to their holy faith! How many there are who do not belong to the Church, and whose children are uncared for! What, with the many demands made upon the clergy in one way or another, would the religious training be, if it were not for the noble band of men and women of the Church who come forward to give an hour or so in the Sunday-school, and many more during the week in teaching and preparing the lesson for the little class of which they have the charge?

It must be remembered the teaching of the school does not relieve the parents of responsibility. The work of the teacher is not to supplant, but to supplement the home training—or in the absence of such training, it is to be the means by which such home teaching is begun. It is found to be true that the little child is often the means of bringing parents to the Church. So that the religion of the fireside obtained its warmth from that of the class in the Sunday-school.

Of course, the control and management of the school is under the direction of the Rector or Pastor. He has the care of the souls committed to him. He is responsible for the teaching, and it is his duty to drive out all erroneous and false doctrine. The teachers are of his appointing, and it is his office to see that they are faithful and fit persons, capable of imparting truth, and fond of those entrusted to their care.

The instruction should be helpful and calculated to indelibly stamp God's living Word within the mind and heart. The singing should be cheerful, and the words such as will carry something definite to the child's mind—something of the gospel the Church is commissioned to teach,—something of the duties required of those who whould be obedient to God's commands. The lessons of the school should not be too long. All should be so done that the children may be led to realize their adoption into God's family, His Church, and the services so conducted, that when the children pass from school into the church to take part in the worship of the faithful in the consecrated building, they may feel at home. For they hear the same creed, the same gospel, the same chants and hymns of praise, the same devout prayers offered up to the God and Father of us all through Jesus Christ our Lord.

JOHN AND THE POSTAGE STAMP.

John was a boy who "lived out." Every week he wrote home to his mother, who lived on a small, rocky farm among the hills. One day John picked up an old envelope from the kitchen wood-box, and saw that the postage-stamp on it was not touched by the postmaster's stamp, to show that it had done duty and was henceforth useless. "The postmaster missed his aim then," said John, "and left the stamp as good as new. I'll use it myself."

He moistened it at the nose of the tea-kettle, and carefully pulled the stamp off.

"No," said conscience, "for that would be cheating. The stamp has been on one letter; it ought not to carry another."

"It can carry another," said John, "because, you see, there is no mark to prove it worthless. The post-office will not know."

"But you know," said conscience, "and that is enough. It is not honest to use it a second time. It is a little matter, to be sure; but it is cheating. God looks for principle. It is the quality of every action which He judges by."

"But no one will know it," said John, faintly.

"No one!" cried conscience. "God will know it—that is enough, and He, you know, desires truth in the inward parts."

"Yes," cried the best parts of John's character, "yes; it is cheating to use the postage-stamp the second time, and I will not do it."

John tore it in two and gave it to the winds. The boy won a glorious victory.—Children's Friend.

The lowest resignation is not to be found in martyrdom; it is only to be found when we have covered our heads in silence, and felt, "I am not worthy to be a martyr; the truth shall prosper, but not by me."

OUR DAILY RECKONING.

If you sit down at set of sun
And count the acts that you have done,
And counting, find
One self-denying act, one word
That eased the heart of him who heard;
One glance most kind,
That fell like sunshine where it went,
Then you may count that day well spent.

But if through all the livelong day
You've cheered no heart by yea or nay;
If through it all
You've nothing done that you can trace,
That brought the sunshine to one face,
No act most small,
That helped some soul, and nothing cost,
Then count that day as worse than lost.

In a lately discovered epistle of St. Clement the following prayer is found: "Save those of us who are in tribulation, have mercy on the humble, lift up the fallen, appear to those in want, heal the ungodly, turn those of thy people who have gone astray; feed the hungering, deliver those of us who are in bonds, raise up the weak, comfort the faint-hearted; let all the nations know that thou alone art God, and Jesus Christ, thy Son, and we thy people, the sheep of thy pasture."

A SHORT SERMON.

How often do we hear ignorant, half-educated men; how often do we hear audacious young men pronouncing on difficult problems of science and religion with a certainty which to maturer years seems absolutely ridiculous. We all of us, young and old, need the grace of modesty and humility; the conviction that many of us, perhaps most of us, are but as dust and ashes in the presence of the great oracles of wisdom in the various branches of knowledge whom God has in this or former ages raised up among us.—Dean Stanley.

WHO IS BUDDHA?

Did you ever notice, my son, that the man who tells you he cannot believe the Bible is usually able to believe almost anything else? You will find men who turn with horror and utter disbelief of the Bible and joyfully embrace the teachings of Buddha. It is quite the thing, just now, my son, for a civilized, enlightened man, brought up in a Christian country and an age of wisdom, to be a Buddhist. And if you ask six men who profess Buddhism who Buddha was, one of them will tell you he was an Egyptian soothsayer who lived two hundred years before Moses; another will tell you that he brought letters from Phœnicia and introduced them in Greece; a third will tell you that she was a beautiful woman of Farther India, bound by her vows to perpetual chastity; a fourth will, with a little hesitation, say he was a Brahma of the ninth degree and a holy disciple of Confucius; and of the other two, one will frankly admit that he doesn't know, and the other will say with some indecision that he was either a dervish of the Nile (whatever that is) or a felo de se, he can't be positive which. Before you propose to know more than anybody and everybody else, my son, be very certain that you are at least abreast of two-thirds of your fellow-men. I don't want to suppress any inclination you may have toward genuine free-thought and careful, honest investigation, my son. I only want you to avoid the great fault of atheism in this day and generation; I don't want to see you try to build a six-story house on a one-story foundation.

Before you criticise, condemn and finally revise the work of creation, my son, be pretty confident that you know something about it as it is, and don't, as a man who is older in years and experience than yourself, don't, let me implore you, don't turn this world upside down and sit on it and flatten it entirely out, until you have made or secured another one for the rest of us to live in while you demolish the old one.

THE STRANGER AND HIS FRIEND.

"Ye have done it unto me."—St. Matt. 25 : 40.

J. MONTGOMERY.

A poor, way-faring man of grief
Hath often crossed me on my way,
Who sued so humbly for relief,
That I could never answer: "Nay."
I had not power to ask His name,
Whether He went or whence He came;
Yet was there something in His eye
That won my love—I know not why.

Once, when my scanty meal was spread,
He entered; not a word He spake,
Just perishing for want of bread,
I gave Him all; He blessed it; brake
And ate, but gave me part again;
Mine was an angel's portion then,
For while I fed with eager haste,
That crust was manna to my taste.

I spied Him, where a fountain burst
Clear from the rock; His strength was gone:
The heedless water mocked His thirst;
He heard it—saw it hurrying on.
I ran to raise the sufferer up.
Thrice from the stream He drained my cup—
Dipt and returned it, running o'er;
I drank, and never thirsted more.

'Twas night; the floods were out; it blew
A winter hurricane aloof.
I heard His voice abroad, and flew
To bid Him welcome to my roof.
I warmed, I clothed, I cheer'd my guest,
Laid Him in my own couch to rest.
Then made the hearth my bed, and seem'd
In Eden's garden, while I dream'd.

Stript, wounded, beaten nigh to death,
I found Him by the high-way side.
I roused His pulse, brought back His breath,
Revived His spirit, and supplied
Wine, oil, refreshments—He was heal'd.
I had myself a wound concealed;
But from that hour forgot the smart,
And peace bound up my broken heart.

In prison I saw him next, condemned
To meet a traitor's doom at morn,
The tide of lying tongues I stemm'd,
And honour'd Him, midst shame and scorn.
My friendship's utmost zeal to try,
He asked if I for Him would die;
The flesh was weak, my blood ran chill;
But the free spirit cried, "I will!"

Then in a moment to my view
The stranger darted from disguise;
The tokens in His hands I knew—
My Saviour stood before my eyes.
He spake:—and my poor name He named—
"Of Me thou hast not been ashamed;
These deeds shall thy memorial be.
Fear not; thou dids't them unto Me."

The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handy-work.—Ps. xix. 1.

A CHURCHMAN WITH A CAPITAL "C,"

1. A Churchman is one who believes fully in the Church; a churchman believes in it a little. A Churchman belongs to her, out of principle; a churchman out of mere choice. A Churchman stands by his parish, no matter who the Rector is; a mere churchman, if he likes the Rector. The Churchman is in his place at worship, stern circumstances alone preventing; a churchman, if weather, convenience, inclination, or any one of a half a dozen other things be favorable. A Churchman kneels; a churchman only leans over. When we kneel, let us kneel. To shrug the shoulders and crook the spine over the pew-top in front of us, is not kneeling according to Webster. Kneeling is being on the knees!

We don't read that "Daniel shrugged his shoulders and crooked his spine three times a day, towards Jerusalem," but that he "kneeled," &c. All Church-folk kneel; church-folk bend over.

2. In the name of good taste, let us never stare. This anywhere, particularly at Church, is vulgar. To stretch the neck around and gaze back at the door, to see who is coming in, is bad taste. Never mind other folk; attend to the service.

3. A Churchman gives of his means, as a privilege; he who is only a churchman, as a kind of tax. And in a great many other ways, is there a great difference between Churchmen with a capital "C," and those without. For instance:

4. Never find fault with your Rector as to what services shall be held; or, I may add, how he shall conduct them, or anything else about them. He is the only person in the whole parish, who has anything to say about what services shall be held; how they shall be held; and when they shall be held. It is impertinent to take him to task about his official acts; his Bishop and his own conscience are his only ecclesiastical superiors. The churchman of the lower-case initial may violate this rule; let him alone do it.

* * * * * * *

8. Never say Sabbath, unless you mean Saturday.

"Sabbath," for Sunday, or Lord's day, is not English. Sabbath-school, therefore, is not English. Church people with a capital "C" never say it.

THE RECTOR, the Rev. Dr. McConnell, now traveling in the West, has written home that he is enjoying his vacation, and is steadily improving in health. He expects to be back on the first Sunday in October, and to resume his work.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL will be re-opened on the first Sunday in October.

Teachers are reminded of this, at this early date, that they may have ample time to send word by card, or otherwise, to the scholars of their respective classes, that they will be glad to welcome them to the school again. This kindly interest will be greatly appreciated, and will ensure a good attendance at the early sessions. If the teachers cannot, for any cause, resume their work at the opening of the school, or find they cannot enter upon the work at any time during the coming year, they will please notify the Rev. Mr. Miller, who has charge of the school, so that he may obtain other teachers in their place. Nothing is so discouraging to the scholars as to find, after coming time and and again to the school, no teacher is there to give them the instruction promised. Last year the school was in a good flourishing condition, and it is felt the labor and interest expended were not lost. More can be done, and it is hoped that many new classes may be formed, and that more children from the congregation and neighborhood may become regular attendants. The Superintendent makes it his duty to visit the scholars in their homes, and this he will begin to do in the month of September, but the notice from the teacher will greatly help to gather the children into the school after their long vacation.

The School sessions, as heretofore, will be held in the morning, beginning at quarter before ten o'clock and close at quarter before eleven, thus giving time to go to the Church services, seats in the transept gallery being reserved for the school.

Teachers will send word to the Parish House, 1124 Girard street, if they do not intend to take their classes this coming year.

SELECTIONS.

WITH hearty thanks to Almighty God your Bishops recognize an increasing desire among Christian people for that unity for which our Lord prayed on the night before His crucifixion, and which He declared to be the visible evidence before men of the truth of His Gospel.

For this unity the Church has never ceased to labor and to pray, and now, especially, she is called upon to stand with open arms and earnest pleading, ready to yield to the utmost in any matter of human ordering or any choice of human will, so that she may join heart to heart with all who desire to stand upon the unchanging basis, without which no external unity is possible and with which, amid great diversities, unity is founded as on a rock—that is the unchangeable faith as expressed in the Creed of Nicea, the two divine Sacraments, the open Bible, and that Apostolic Order, which is the witness and keeper of these to the end of time.

These things are the deposit committed to the Church of God, not for her own sake, but for the sake of all men. For all men she holds them in trust, and in these latter days, pleads anew in deep love and all humility, that all who name themselves with the name of Christ would draw near and see, and with one mouth pray for that Apostolic unity and peace which is found alone in the Apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and rests secure upon the foundation of Apostles and Prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the head cornerstone.

And yet your Bishops feel keenly that the differences which separate Christian folk are not the things which lie nigh the heart of the people. Thousands are asking in doubt—some of them in despair—Is there any Revelation? Is there any guide? Is there a God? We fear that much of the strife which has arrayed class against class is the result of the teaching of misguided men, that the Bible is a myth, God a name, and religion a superstition; and feeling a profound sympathy for these men of toil who have filled our cities with creations of beauty, we know that they cannot afford to give up the Gospel of the Son of God. Their wildest dream of brotherhood has never compassed anything so surpassingly beautiful as that, by the appointment of God Himself, the poorest laborer may become "a member of Christ, a child of God, and an inheritor of the Kingdom of Heaven." This brotherhood gives to the poorest man the inalienable right to appeal from the injustice of man to that God and Father who always hears the cry of His suffering children. It tells the rich man that the very condition of his fellowship with Jesus Christ is that he shall become the poor man's brother. The Gospel has not one law for capital and another law for labor. The truest political economy sustains the noble maxim of St. Paul, that "No man liveth unto himself." The voice of our divine Master speaks through all the centuries; "Make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness; that when ye fail, they may receive you into everlasting habitations." Our time, our talents, our wealth, are a sacred trust, not to be used in idle luxury, in wanton waste, or selfish indulgence, but used by us as stewards who must give an account to God. The problem which perplexes the wisest is solved by the divine law, "Love thy neighbor as thyself." These are not days to preach platitudes about doctrine, or to philosophize about religion. The Church must, in the spirit of Christ, be the mediator to re-unite these sundered bonds. The rights of labor are primary rights, with which neither the tyranny of mobs nor the oppressions of capital may interfere. The rights of capital are not less sacred, to enjoy the reward of honest labor and wise forethought, and use it for the benefit of others. Every form of misfortune has, by virtue of the Incarnation, a claim to the help of its prosperous brother. We cannot know how far-reaching is that awful truth until that day when our Lord shall say to each one of us, "Inasmuch as ye did it to the least of these my brethren, ye did it unto me."

Brethren of the clergy, an awful responsibility rests upon us. Our office is an offense to men and an insult to God, if we forget that the very terms of our commission are to represent Jesus Christ. The burdens which rest heavily on the people are not the gains which have repaid business ventures, but the vice, the crime which follows in the train of sin, and which costs this Nation more than all its schools, charities, and churches. Sin, and the evil which flows from it, can be cured only by the Gospel of the Son of God. For a time bayonets and police may protect our property and guard our homes. But no nation has ever survived the loss of religion. Whenever the tie which binds man to God is broken, all other ties are snapped asunder. Take from men all sense of accountability to an unseen power, all obligation to an eternal and unchangeable standard of right, limit men's horizon by the grave, admit no tie between man and man but selfishness, and then might will be right, and the armed force, which alone can protect the inalienable rights of the freeman, shall itself be constant menace to his liberty. Your Bishops are devoutly grateful for all which loving hearts are doing to bind up these wounds and heal this strife. We affectionately urge those over whom the Lord has made us shepherds to give personal service, personal efforts, to stay this flood of infidelity which is sweeping over our land. We cannot silence these gainsayers by arguments about religion. They have scoffed, and will scoff, against Christ and His Church. But the Christ who dwells in your hearts, the Christ who speaks through and works with you, none can gainsay or deny.—From Pastoral Letter of the House of Bishops, 1886.

THE CHRISTIAN IN SOCIETY.

Many a conscientious Christian is perplexed as to his duty with reference to society, and as to what may be a proper deportment when required to mingle in it.

The whole subject is perplexing, and there are details which will require separate consideration from time to time. Certain general principles may make the matter more clear to your mind. Such as these:

First. Society is usually made up of the good and the bad, just as business circles are. If it is ever wholly bad, it may be your duty to withdraw from it, or to enter it only with the view of reforming it. One can hardly think of a Christian seeking social enjoyment in a circle which he knows to be wholly evil, and which will expect him to do evil with them. But as society is today, the good and the bad are mingled; and as the Christian enters into it, he is to avoid evil and to do his utmost to encourage goodness. Your Saviour's example, in this and in all other respects, is to be your example. He mingled with men, was at a wedding, at their feasts, and ate with publicans and sinners; but we cannot think of Him as exercising any other than a restraining, purifying influence upon the evil elements, and as encouraging goodness, however little of it some had whom He associated with.

Second. The tone of society is ever capable of improvement, and it may be your work to assist in improving it.

The conversation, the entertainments, and many of the usages of society might be elevated. Every one who tries to elevate them does a very great favor to all the others. The tone of society is simply the aggregate of the tone of each individual. Each one who carries into society a refined, well-bred spirit, sanctified by religion, is doing much to raise the standard.

Third. A Christian has it within his power to protest always by example, and sometimes by word, against such usages of society as he deems at variance with good morals or with Christian principle.

Thus he can withdraw, or refuse to be present, or he can in proper way and at proper times, express his disapprobation, not always openly, but to those who have given offence. If, for example, one is asked to go where there is immodest dressing, or where intoxication is encouraged, or where the laws of health are violated by improper hours, he can decline such invitation.

Fourth. A Christian will always set his face against the petty shams, hollow artifices, and polite deceptions which are sometimes tolerated in society, and will aim to encourage truth and honesty. He will seek to be real himself, and will show that he prefers reality to gaudily decked falsehoods.

These four points will probably cover most of the ground. If you seek to be real, and to avoid shams, if you protest, by example, against sinful compliances, if you try to elevate the tone of society, and to encourage its good elements, you will probably be solving many of the points which will greatly hinder one who is not as much in earnest, or one who hesitates to carry his religious principles everywhere.—The Rev. Geo. W. Shinn.

GROWTH VERSUS CRISIS.

"I'll get rich this year, or I'll die in the attempt," cried a young man this morning, as he dashed up the steps of an exchange. He was not willing to grow rich by slow and steady accumulation; he must become so suddenly, we mused, passing on. The words have rung in our ears all the morning, because such men "die daily." They forget that every day life has its mission; that it fits in according to the plans of the Divine Architect, and that much of the misery results from the possessors of life endeavoring to do what never was designed for them. They try to fit where they were never cut and hewn for, aspiring to the capstone of the temple when nature and Providence intended them for foundation stones, buried down deep in the clay and sand. Men strive to become millionaires, and end with being madmen.

Did not the grand old theory of growth versus the irresponsible conception of "crisis" find suggestive and most abundant exemplification in the plans and proceedings of Wall street, when men were suddenly called thieves in a day? Man a thief in a day! Never! The soil was there already. A thief, like a cabbage, grows, for the line of development in the realms of morality is not so dissimilar from the line of the natural as to cause the formation of a different law. Sow an act and you reap a habit; sow a habit and you reap character; sow character and you reap destiny. From the act to the destiny is the logical procedure until the climax is reached. This we can assert with axiomatic positiveness.

When we beheld firm after firm shaking, shivering and dying as to its mercantile existence; heard of abused trusts, trampled honors, sunken reputations, and smirched characters, followed by the heart-burnings, the hatreds, the horrible suspicions engendered by all this duplicity of dealing, we asked ourselves, "What is it all worth, this wild hunt after the wealth that perishes with the getting thereof, leaving as a heritage of its former possessions, bitter memories, blighted hopes, blasted prospects, and, too often, the blackness of darkness as the outlook for eternity?"

How frequently, when this cursed greed for gold has carried men down into misery and ignominious death do they exclaim, "Oh, I have been ground between the millstones of circumstances!" What folly! Circumstances, like everything else, grow. Even solar systems are first stardust, then nebulæ, then isolated worlds, and at last systems. So with circumstances; first the dim, distant shaping of events; then the better definition of matters, then the closer presentation of affairs, and the bit is placed in the mouth of circumstances, and they are driven to success. And why? Because development is natural, crisis the reverse. Circumstances are planted by Providence, and designed to have a natural growth. It is when men try to force circumstances that they are caught in disaster and perish. Give a man with brains, energy and character, who will faithfully work and patiently wait, success must come to such, and it is lasting. "Such become morbidly conscientious, some cry. Far better to be morbidly conscientious than accommodatingly lax. Strictness in a matter of conscience is centripetal, and seeks the center of truth; laxity is centrifugal, and flies into the darkest and most extended depths of error. God help any man, and we speak it reverently, prayerfully—who deliberately covets capital rather than character, who chooses to add dollars only to his possessions. "He sows to the flesh, and of the flesh must reap corruption." And why? Because the moral law is the natural—the law of development. It is irrevocable, and works undeviatingly, persistently and unerringly. Then what is the use of men trying to flank its methods, its processes, its results by any means which they may originate in the self-complacency of "getting ahead of things?'' Suddenly the heraldry, the pomp, the power is gone, and they start on a third stage of existence, with a character deflected to the wrong, and perpetuating its determined course throughout all eternity. I don't know about wrong, for almost am I persuaded to believe that somewhere, and at some future time the Lord will permit evil to slay itself, and right only to be eternally established. Yet it is a grand thing for a grand character to have money. It becomes a potential factor in the hands of such. Not so much to make thousands more as to unmake misery, to help the helpless, and save the drifting ones of earth. The aching heart is comforted, the throbbing temple soothed, and many a naked, hungry child of want and woe clothed and fed, many a tear of sorrow distilled away in the alembic of a kindness that is not of this world. And the Christianity which does not include such charity, is the very negation of Christianity, the bitter seedling of natural planting rather than the engrafted growth of the spiritual.—Muriel Rousseau.

LIKE flakes of snow, that fall unperceived upon the earth, the seemingly unimportant events of life succeed one to another. As the snow gathers together, so are our habits formed. No single flake that is added to the pile produces a sensible change; no single action creates, however it may exhibit, a man's character; but as the tempest hurls the avalanche down the mountain and overwhelms the inhabitant and his habitation, so passion, acting upon the elements of mischief, which pernicious habits have brought together by imperceptible accumulation, may overthrow the edifice of truth and virtue.

EDUCATION is a humanizer and an equalizer as well as an illuminator. Persons with fuller education come to have a better understanding of their duties, a higher degree of self-respect, that impels them to a fair recognition and fulfillment of their duties, with a resulting amenity of manners and consideration for the rights of others that does an immense degree of good.

A WISE man is strong; yea, a man of knowledge increaseth strength.—Prov. 24: 5.

THE BATTLE OF LIFE.

Go forth to the Battle of Life, my boy,
  Go while it is called to-day;
For the years go out, and the years come in,
Regardless of those who may lose or win—
  Of those who may work or play.

And the troops march steadily on, my boy
  To the army gone before;
You may hear the sound of their falling feet,
Going down to the river where the two worlds meet:
  They go to return no more.

There is room for you in the ranks, my boy,
  And duty, too, assigned;
Step into the front with a cheerful grace—
Be quick, or another may take your place,
  And you may be left behind.

There is work to do by the way, my boy
  That you never can tread again;
Work for the loftiest, lowliest men—
Work for the plough, adze, spindle and pen;
  Work for the hands and the brain.

The Serpent will follow your steps, my boy,
  To lay for your feet a snare;
And pleasure sit in her fairy bowers,
With garlands of poppies and lotus flowers
  Enwreathing her golden hair.

Temptations will wait by the way, my boy—
  Temptations, without and within;
And spirits of evil, in robes as fair
As the holiest angels in heaven wear,
  Will lure you to deadly sin.

Then put on the armor of God, my boy,
  In the beautiful days of youth:
Put on the helmet, breast-plate and shield,
And the sword that the feeblest arm may wield
  In the cause of Right and Truth.

And go to the Battle of Life, my boy,
  With the peace of the gospel shod,
And, before high heaven, do the best you can
For the great reward, for the good of man,
  For the kingdom and crown of God.

—Little Sower.

DOING nothing for others is the undoing of one's self. We must be purposely kind and generous, or we miss the best part of our existence. The heart that goes out of itself gets large and full of joy. This is the great secret of the inner life. We do ourselves the most good doing something for others.

THE St. Stephen's Church Woman's Institute is open to women outside of our parish as well as those within. Miss Anne Sanders, Secretary, 410 South 15th Street, will give all needful information concerning admittance. Ladies wishing to join the class will please address her. In another place within this paper a full statement of the plans, purposes and course of study is given, and also, notice of the time of beginning the lectures.

THE Sunday-school of this parish will re-open on Sunday, October 2d, at 9.45 o'clock. It is expected that teachers, if in town, will present themselves for duty and take charge of their respective classes. Other members of the Church, who are willing to enter upon this work, will please apply to the Rev. Mr. Miller, so that he may prepare classes for them.

THE daily services will be resumed in October. Morning Prayer every day at 11 o'clock, and Evening Prayer on Fridays at 5 o'clock. These services are meant for all the people of the parish, and while all cannot attend each particular service, yet no member of the parish ought to let the week pass without taking advantage of some of these hours of prayer.

THE CHURCH WOMAN'S INSTITUTE.—There will be a lecture in each course once a month, which lecture will go over the ground assigned as a lesson to students in that course. The lectures in each course are open to students in all other courses.

For those who have time or inclination to pursue them courses of reading are recommended supplementary to the lectures. After each lecture a series of questions for examination will be given to the students in that course; but, while every one is recommended to write answers to these questions, it is obligatory upon no one to do so.

The lectures will be delivered at St. Stephen's Parish House, 1124 Girard St., Tuesday afternoons at 3.30 o'clock. A selected library of works of reference will be placed in the Parish House for the use of members of the Institute. An entrance fee of $5 will be charged to cover the expenses of the Institute. Ladies wishing to join any of the classes will please address MISS ANNIE SANDERS, Secretary, 410 S. 15th Street.

The membership is not at all confined to our Parish. The Institute has the hearty endorsement of the Bishop of Diocese, who has examined and approved the courses of study and reading adopted.

According to the announcement made last May the first lecture was to be delivered October 4th. It has been found necessary to change this date to October 18th. The following is the programme for all the courses.

I. The Bible. The Rev. Prof. John P. Peters, Ph.D., Lecturer.

General subject: The Rise, Development and Fulfilment of the Hope of Messiah or Christ.

The object of this course is, in the first year, to study the preparation for the coming of Christ, as set forth in the Old Testament; in the second year, to study the fulfilment and development of the Old Testament hopes of Christ as taught in the New Testament.

Oct. 18 The idea of a Messiah in the Northern Prophets, 800–750 B. C.

Nov. 15. The idea of Messiah at the time of the Assyrian invasions, circa 700 B. C.

Dec. 13. The Judgment of the World. The Kingdom of God.

Jan. 17. Messianic idea at the time of the fall of Jerusalem, circa 600 B. C.

Feb. 14. Redemption from Babylon, and redemption from the world.

Mar. 13. Messianic thought in the post-exilic Prophets.

April 10. Messiah in the Psalms.

May 8. Messianic hope revived at the Maccabean revolt.

The text book for this course is the Bible (revised version preferred). The student should study the passages assigned as a lesson, and determine the sense to the best of her ability without a commentary or other helps. If afterward she desire to use a commentary, the best for general use are (1), Cambridge Bible for Schools and Colleges; (2), The Bible Commentary (Speaker's).

The lesson to be studied in connection with Lecture I is, Amos ix; Hosea 1, iii, xi, xiii, xiv. In connection with this lesson and lecture, the student is recommended to read one or more of the following: Bartlett & Peters' Scriptures, Hebrew and Christian, pp. 398–420; Cambridge Bible for Schools and Colleges, introduction to Hosea; Briggs' Messianic Prophecy, chap. vi,; Geikie's Hours with the Bible, vol. iv, chap. ix. The student is also recommended to read a history of the Jews in connection with the whole course (Milman or Stanley preferred).

II. Church History. The Rev. S. D. McConnell, D, D., Lecturer.

The first lecture in this course will be delivered Nov. 8th. The details of the course will be published in the next number of the PARISH NEWS.

III. The Prayer Book. The Rev. Wm. R. Huntington, D. D. (New York), Lecturer.

Oct. 25. The Origin of Liturgies.

Nov. 22. History of the English Prayer Book, including the American revision of 1789.

Dec. 20. Structure of the Daily Offices.

Jan. 24. The Venite, the Psalter and the Lectionary.

Feb. 21. The Te Deum, the Benedicite and the Gospel Hymns.

Mar. 20. The Apostles' Creed.

Apr. 17. The Prayers.

May 15. The Litany.

As text-books in this course the students are expected to have, in addition to the English and American Prayer Books, either The Prayer Book with Commentary (S. P. C. K.), or Barry's Teacher's Prayer Book, or The Prayer Book Inter-leaved No lesson is assigned in connection with Lecture I, which is introductory, but the following are recommended to be read: Evan Daniel's The Prayer Book, its History, Language and Contents, preface and pp. 1–6; Burbidge's Liturgies and Offices of the Church, Chaps. I–IV.

The lectures for the second year will be as announced in the PARISH NEWS for May.

IV. Church Theology.

The object of this course is, in the first year, to investigate the grounds of our belief in God, and the evidences of Christianity; in the second year, to study the fundamental doctrines of the Church on the basis of the Apostles' Creed.

First year, Lectures I–IV.—Evidences of Theism.
" " V–VIII.—Evidences of Christianity.

Nov. 1. God and Religion. (Lecturer, Rev. Prof. John P. Peters, Ph. D.)

Nov. 29 and Jan. 3. God and Nature. (Lecturer, Rev. Prof. Geo. S. Fullerton, A. M.)

Jan. 31. The Moral Argument.

Feb. 28 and Mar. 27. Moral Evidence for Christianity.

Apr. 24. Historical Testimony.

May 22. Resurrection, Miracles, Inspiration.

(The other lecturers will be announced next month.)

The text-book for lectures I–IV is Flint's Baird Lectures on Theism; for lectures V–VIII, Row's Manual of Christian Evidences. The lesson to accompany Lecture I is Lecture II in Flint's Baird Lectures. To be read in connection with this lecture and lesson are recommended the following: Marcus Dod's Mohammed, Buddha and Christ; Flint, lecture I, and appendices I–VIII.

SELECTIONS.

RULES FOR READING HOLY SCRIPTURES.

These rules are part of a sermon preached in the parish church of Broad Clyst, in Devonshire, by the Rev. Prebendary Acland, the vicar, on the "Duty of Searching the Scriptures."

1. In reading Holy Scriptures keep steadily before you its great purpose of teaching you the will of God and the way of salvation through Jesus Christ.

2. Let its beautiful histories, and the many interesting questions which arise out of it, serve (as they are doubtless intended) to engage your attention, and to help you to look at God's dealings with man in many different points of view; but never read or search into them in a mere spirit of curiosity, or let them distract you from its one great purpose.

3. Read it reverently; remembering that God caused the books to be written as they are, and to come down to us as we have them; and that He is speaking to you through them.

4. Read it thankfully; blessing God who has caused it to be written for your learning; and often reflecting how sadly in the dark we should have been without its guiding light and what blessed hope you have through it, which without it you would not have had.

5. Read it prayerfully. It is well to offer a short prayer before reading; but I mean as to the whole spirit of your reading, read with the wish and with the expectation that the voice of God, Holy Scripture, may speak to your heart and conscience, and that you may be better for reading that portion which is before you.

6. Read it humbly, remembering that a book which God has caused to be written by men gifted with His Holy Spirit for that purpose, must be, very much of it, far above us; that we must be content to wait till God shall give us more light; and that meanwhile He will enable us to understand all that is good and needful for us to know. —Christian Mirror.

IF thou wouldst bear thy neighbor's faults cast thine eyes upon thine own.—Molinos.

LITTLE THINGS.

We call him strong who stands unmoved—
Calm as some tempest-beaten rock—
When some great trouble hurls its shock;
We say of him, his strength is proved;
But when the spent storm folds its wings,
How bears he then life's little things!

About his brow we twine our wreath
Who seeks the battle's thickest smoke,
Braves flashing gun and sabre stroke,
And scoffs at danger, laughs at death;
We praise him till the whole land rings;
But is he brave in little things?

We call him great who does some deed
That echo bears from shore to shore—
Does that, and then does nothing more;
Yet would his work earn richer meed,
When brought before the King of Kings,
Were he but great in little things!

—From Treasure Trove.

THE ARAB'S PROOF.

Some years ago a Frenchman who, like many of his countrymen, had won a high rank among men of science, yet who denied the God who is the Author of all science, was crossing the great Sahara in company with an Arab guide. He noticed with a sneer that at certain times his guide, whatever obstacles might arise, put them all aside, and kneeling on the burning sands, called on his God.

Day after day passed, and still the Arab never failed, till at last one evening the philosopher, when he rose from his knees, asked him, with a contemptuous smile: "How do you know there is a God?" The guide fixed his eyes on the scoffer for a moment in wonder, and then said, solemnly: "How do I know there is a God? How do I know that a man, and not a camel, passed my hut last night in the darkness? Was it not by the print of his foot in the sand? Even so," and he pointed to the sun, whose last rays were flashing over the lonely dessert, "that footprint is not that of a man."

GENERAL CLERGY RELIEF.

The Executive Committee of the Fund for the Relief of the Widows and Orphans of Deceased Clergymen, and of Aged, Infirm and Disabled Clergymen, being unable to respond to many most pressing applications for relief, are compelled to appeal to the Church, and to ask sufficient contributions to permit new grants to be made.

About $10,000 is now distributed annually to some one hundred and thirty clergymen, widows and orphans, whose names are now on the list. They have been appointed from over thirty different Dioceses, and $100 a year is the largest amount given to any one.

During the past two years the income has just sufficed to pay those on the list. Since June, 1885, but one new appropriation has been made, and there are twenty-three applicants now awaiting grants.

Some of the most urgent cases are as follows:

1. A clergyman, age 72, suffering from general debility, largely the effect of long exposure in his work.

2. A clergyman, age 88, no family, no property, receives $100 a year from his brother Clergy.

3. A clergyman, age 70, thirty-nine years in the Ministry, receives $200 annually from Diocesan Christmas Fund.

4. A clergyman, age 77, in orders for fifty-two years, and for fifty-one years a pioneer Missionary in the West.

5. Two widows, ages 48 and 39. Two children. Have only $150 a year for support of the family of four persons.

6. A widow. Three children, ages 8, 4, and 2. Income $60 a year.

7. A clergyman, age 41. Disabled by bronchitis. Eighteen years in the Ministry. Wife and five children, ages 5 to 12. No income. Entirely destitute.

8. Clergyman, age 68. Disabled by consumption. Thirty years in the Ministry. Five children, two of the sons weak-minded, and dependent upon their father for support.

Alfred Lee, President; William Alexander Smith, Treasurer, 58 Wall Street, New York.

A VERY ancient inscription on the Church of St. Giacomo di Rialto, Venice, runs: "Around this temple let the merchant's law be just, his weights true, and his covenants faithful." John Ruskin was the first to discover this beautiful line, and he says it is the "pride of my life."

THE BOY AND THE MAN.

A Swedish boy, a tough little knot, fell out of the window and was severely hurt; but, with clenched lips, he kept back the cry of pain. The king, Gustavus Adolphus, who saw him fall, prophesied that that boy would make a man for an emergency. And so he did, for he became the famous General Bauer.

A woman fell off the dock in Italy. She was fat and frightened. No one of a crowd of men dared to jump in after her; but a boy struck the water almost as soon as she, and managed to keep her up until stronger arms got hold of her. Everybody said the boy was very daring, very kind, very quick, but also very reckless, for he might have been drowned. The boy was Garibaldi; and, if you will read his life, you will find these were just his traits all through—that he was so alert that nobody could tell when he would make an attack with his red-shirted soldiers; so indiscreet sometimes as to make his fellow-patriots wish he was in Guinea, but also so brave and magnanimous that all the world, except tyrants, loved to hear and talk about him.

A boy used to crush the flowers to get the color, and painted the white side of his father's cottage in the Tyrol with all sorts of pictures, which the mountaineers gazed at as wonderful. He was the great artist Titian.

An old painter watched a little fellow who amused himself making drawings of his pots and brushes, easel, and stool, and said: "That boy will beat me one day." So he did, for he was Michael Angelo.

A German boy was reading a blood-and-thunder novel. Right in the midst of it he said to himself: "Now, this will never do. I get too much excited over it. I can't study so well after it. So here goes!" and he flung the book out into the river. He was Fitche, the great German philosopher.

There was a New England boy who built himself a booth down at the rear of his father's farm, in a swamp, where neither boys nor the cows would disturb him. There he read heavy books, like Locke on the Human Understanding, wrote compositions, watched the balancing of the clouds, revelled in the crash and flash of the storm, and tried to feel the nearness of God, who made all things. He was Jonathan Edwards.

Boys and girls, entering your teens, you are at the head of life's rapids. Your craft is already catching the drift of strong desires, ambitions, passions. Have no anxiety except to aim at what is right, at the purposes which are deepest and purest. Vow to yourself and to God, who will help you. Then away down life's stream! It will be exhilarating, grand; all true life is! But take care.

REMIND ME OF THE KING.

La Fontaine, chaplain in the Prussian army, once preached a very earnest and eloquent sermon on the sin and folly of yielding to a hasty temper. The next day he was accosted by a major of the regiment with the words:

"Well, sir, I think you made use of the prerogatives of your office to give me some very sharp hits yesterday."

"I certainly thought of you while I was preparing the sermon," was the answer; "but had no intention of being personal or sharp."

"Well, it is of no use," said the major; "I have a hasty temper, and I cannot control it; it is impossible."

And, still adhering to this opinion, after some further conversation he went his way.

The next Sunday La Fontaine preached upon self-deception, and the vain excuses which men are wont to make.

"Why," said he, "a man will declare it is impossible to control his temper, when he knows that, were the same provocation to happen in the presence of his sovereign, he not only could, but would, control himself entirely. And yet he dares to say that the continual presence of the King of Kings and Lord of Lords imposes upon him neither restraint nor fear!"

The next day his friend, the major, again accosted him.

"You were right yesterday, chaplain," he said humbly. "Hereafter, whenever you see me in danger of falling, remind me of the King!"

AN APPEAL FROM MRS. BUFORD.

One year has passed since I appealed to my friends to help me in maintaining my hospital, and now, when the beautiful October days have come again, I venture to beg most earnestly a continuance of their generous support and tender sympathy. My hospital and school are dependent entirely on the voluntary contributions of the friends God has given me. During the past year boxes of clothing have been most kindly and generously sent, and have been of inestimable value to me; but the contributions in money have been much smaller, while the number of patients has been much larger than in the preceding years. During the past year they have varied from thirty to forty-five, more than could be well accommodated; but I have been enabled to take care of them, and to help many outside besides. Three days in each week the physician is in attendance at the hospital; on these days we have often from twenty to thirty sick persons brought to him for treatment, and the quantity of medicine, especially quinine, given out is almost incredible. Though typhoid fever has been, and is still, most prevalent around us, we have had no case this Summer at the hospital. The expenses for the past year, including the salaries of my two teachers and the other necessary expenses of my school, the salaries of the physician, matron, wages of the nurses, servants, groceries, medicines, and the numberless incidentals I cannot enumerate, have been three thousand and sixty-three dollars and some cents. Believe me, I have tried faithfully to keep them down and make them less, but it is hard to do, hard to turn away from the poor creatures who appeal to me; impossible for me to turn a deaf ear to their cries for help. I know I have been charged with being too easily moved with compassion for them, and pamperizing the negroes by indiscriminate charity. I care for none of these things; to my own Master I stand or fall; to Him I must render an account of my stewardship of the gifts entrusted to me for His poor black children. In His great pitiful eyes it will be no heinous sin if mine are full of tears for them, my heart aching with pity, my hand stretched out to help, even though it may be sometimes the worthless and undeserving. We all do plead for mercy; we all do call ourselves miserable sinners, and very often we say we have done those things we ought not to do; we have left undone those things we ought to do. I know as well as those who stand afar off and cooly criticise. Ah! who can know better than I do, that the destitution and want and misery I see daily, are due mainly to idleness, to thriftlessness, to ignorance, but who hath taught them higher things? These four years, in a negro hospital, have been a fearful experience, an ordeal few women have passed through. Often, quivering with the sight of hopeless deformity, loathsome disease, and fierce physical pain, I wonder why were these creatures born; why did the God of mercy give them life? And wearily I puzzle my poor weak brains trying to solve the old, old problem, why sin and wrong-doing, and the train of miseries that follow them, are allowed to be. In God's own time, in His own way, not ours, will come the beautiful solution. Now, all we, His happier children, can do, is, if our brother be hungry, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink; if he be naked, clothe him; if he lie wounded, bleeding by the wayside, with tender, pitiful hands bind up the gaping wounds, and gently lift him up. But even in this negro hospital have I seen gleams of a higher life, and glimpses of that rare patience and sublime fortitude which shed their halo round the saints and martyrs holy. Let me recall one group gathered in our ward for men, last Spring. A small white bed on one side of the blazing fire; a little child of nine years lying helpless, where he had lain, patient and still, for many months—poor little Isaac, we knew the sands of life were running very low. By his side, day after day, sat Robert, the blind boy; Isaac used to be his little guide in the happy days they could walk out in the sunshine together. Very tender and touching was the friendship between these stricken children. They had their little toys together, and shared their little delicacies, and had quiet little games with pins, "head and penut" they called it, which seemed to give them constant amusement. It was pitiful when the Angel of Death came at last, and little Isaac was laid to rest—to see the blind boy weeping beside his comrade's open grave, led back by stranger hands, sitting with bowed head in his accustomed place, beside the vacant bed. Opposite to them, propped up with pillows (he couldn't lie down) old Link suffered for days, and weeks and months without a murmur or complaint. He had lost one leg years before, and now the other one was so diseased we knew it must be amputated, or he would die, and we knew, too, if the operation was performed the chances were largely against him. "I had rather save his life than any man's in the hospital," the physician said to me; "I have known him all my life as a true and faithful man." Old Link had been a hero in the defence of his father's family during the war. The Sunday before the fatal day, I sat by him and read over and over about the beautiful city, with golden streets and gates of Orient pearl, wherein there is no sorrow, no pain. The tears trickled slowly down his weathered cheeks. I asked him if he were afraid to die. I told him how faithful and true he had been to his earthly master, and how we all loved and honored him. "I tried," he said, "to be a dutiful servant to old marster, I is tried to serve my Heavenly Marster too, I ain't afraid, living or dying, I trusts Him." The next day, but one, the physicians met; the old man asked for a little while, and hobbling with great pain and difficulty to his bedside he knelt for a long time in prayer. Then calmly, serenely he laid himself down; the chloroform was administered. But his awakening was in that radiant Paradise, wherein there is no pain. He survived the amputation only half an hour. In little Isaac's place to-day is lying a poor man, James Bennett, whose back was broken eight years ago, and whose life has been one long agony ever since. It will soon be over now; but my heart aches for the thin, hollow-eyed woman who comes at rare intervals to comfort him. Her home is twenty miles away, where are the six little children for whom she works so hard to get bread. In old Link's bed, a boy writhes in agony. In the woman's ward, a poor girl lingers in the last stages of consumption. Out on the piazza, basking in the sunshine, are many greyheaded old men and woman—past work now, past suffering, almost. Two strong, stalwart men are there, too, both stone-blind. Flitting through the wards, out on the piazza, out under the trees, in the quivering shadows, dressing herself twenty times a day, in strange, fantastic style, poor crazy Rosa wanders the livelong day—never quiet, never silent—muttering, bowing with nods and becks, and wreathed smiles to forms, by us unseen—listening with rapture to voices, to us unheard—the poor deaf mute, perfectly harmless, perfectly tractable, is happy, I trust, with the shadowy people with whom she holds converse. Out under the trees, the children are playing, among them a strong, stout young woman, picking up acorns with as much zest as a little child. Amy is an idiot. Shambling up to her sideways—he can't walk straight—comes George, in dresses and aprons like a girl. He is deformed from spinal disease. Near her sits little Mollie, blandly smiling, though the green earth and blue skies are black darkness to her; and Estelle and little Alice play around, and Baron Trenck is brought out in his nurse's arms. He is my jail bird—born last year in our country jail, where his lunatic mother was confined. We have another baby now, little Dorritt; she is a jail bird too. Her mother was sentenced last week to two years' imprisonment in the penitentiary, and her wailing three month's baby left behind.

My friends and helpers—you, whose hands have built this asylum for the wretched—you will not fail me now. I have been censured severely for writing such painful things. I cannot help it; I see nothing but pain and misery there, and I want to show you as plainly as I can what this hospital is, that you may judge if it be a charity worthy your continued support. Silver and gold have I none; without your help I am as powerless as poor little Dorritt. One hundred dollars for each bed—three thousand paid annually, can and shall meet all the expenses of my school and hospital. Most earnestly I beg you to pity and help these afflicted creatures I have shown you.

Under the glittering cross pointing heavenward, just over the front entrance of the hospital, in large, clear, beautifully carved letters, is this inscription: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto ME."

Lawrenceville, Va., Oct. 4, 1887.

SELECTIONS.

An illustration of the proverbial difficulty of transferring ideas from one language to another is related by Mr. Brady, one of the first missionaries to Sitka. He called in the help of the best interpreter he could find to secure a good translation of the Twenty-third Psalm. Now, as we all know, there is no small difficulty in making an ordinary company of city-bred people appreciate the pastoral similes of the Bible. If one knows nothing about sheep how can he know about a shepherd? The Alaskans are even in a still worse situation. Not only do they have no domestic animals, but they cannot go anywhere to get sight of any. Besides, they are familiar with a mountain sheep in such a way as to make the acquaintance positively misleading. They hunt the mountain sheep, and only a very bold and wary hunter can take him as he passes from crag to crag, with one eye on his enemy far below him and the other on his feeding places. Imagine Mr. Brady's chagrin when he found that the consoling phrase, "The Lord is my shepherd," had been translated "The Lord is a great mountain sheep hunter," thus completely reversing the figure.

FUNERALS.

They should not be held on Sunday, unless unavoidable:

Because they are likely to interfere with Church services, or other engagements of the minister, which have been previously made.

Because on Sundays many people will attend through idle curiosity, who would be employed in their business on other days.

Because Christian people should not cause unnecessary work on the Lord's Day.

Funeral services should always be held in church, if possible:

Because the family of the deceased can then take their last look at the remains at home, without having their parting grief intruded upon by the public.

Because those who attend the funeral can be better accommodated in the church than in a private house. There is generally seating room enough in the church for all who attend, and they can be so seated as to see and hear all that is going on in the service.

Because in a private house the minister and choir are usually placed in an awkward position, making it difficult for them to speak and sing.

Because, in church, those who attend are more likely to observe a solemnity befitting the occasion.

Because our beautiful burial service is provided by the Church to be used in the church.

Because on such occasions we want all the comfort and peace that the hallowed associations of religion can give.

Because we are committing our beloved ones to the merciful keeping of God, for whose worship and praise the church has been set apart.

Because by our Baptism we became members of the Church, and were thus brought into covenant relations to God, and thereby made members of Christ, children of God and inheritors of the kingdom of heaven.

ST. ANTHONY'S SERMONS.

AN OLD LEGEND AMPLIFIED.

Saint Anthony preached to the Priory throng,
Saint Anthony's sermons were terribly long,
So dreary, so weary, so learnedly deep
That all of the Brothers were soon fast asleep,
He sighed as he looked at them, placid and still,
For he loved his own sermons, as some people will.
Then away in a huff to the river he sped,
A sermon he'd preach to the fishes instead.

He stood on the brink and his sermon began,
But fish are no fonder of sermons than man.
So he girt up his cassock, quoth he "I must go
And see if they'll listen to me down below."
That night as the Monks in refectory sat,
They wondered and asked what the Saint could be at
When a young brother said as he bent o'er his dish,
"He's gone to the river to preach to the fish!"

So down to the river they started in quest,
And peered through the water with curious zest,
Till they spied, in the bed of the river below,
The Saint and the fish sitting row upon row.
And 'tis said ever since that historical night,
Not a fish in that stream can be tempted to bite,
The reason's as plain as the waters are deep—
Saint Anthony's sermons have sent them to sleep.

AFFECTION.

We sometimes meet with men who seem to think that any affectionate feeling is weakness, They will return from a journey, and treat their families with dignity, and move among their children with the cold and lofty splendor of an iceberg, surrounded with its broken fragments. There is hardly a more unnatural sight on earth than one of these families without a heart. A father had better extinguish a boy's eyes than take away his heart. Who, that has experienced the joys of friendship, and values sympathy and affection, would not rather lose all that is beautiful in nature's scenery than be robbed of the hidden treasures of his heart?

Cherish, then, your heart's best affection. Indulge in warm, gushing, and inspiring filial, parental and fraternal love. Love God and your fellow-men, love everybody and everything that is lovely. Teach your children to love; to love the rose, to love the robin, to love their parents, their brothers and sisters, to love God. Let it be the studied object of their domestic culture to give them warm hearts and ardent affections. Bind your whole family together by these strong cords; you cannot make them too strong.

A SLIGHT CHANGE IN THE SERVICE will be begun this month. The custom has been for the Minister to repeat the first suffrages in the Litany, (O God the Father of Heaven, &c.,) and for the people to repeat it after him. Hereafter the people will repeat these in concert with the Minister. This is one of the changes recommended by the Committee of the General Convention upon changes in the Prayer Book. It is not only a better way in itself, but is a return to the original way from which the custom of the last century has departed.

THE RECTOR OF THIS CHURCH has always lamented that he could not know his people better than he does. He is quite aware that no man can preach the Gospel effectively to strangers. Christianity is so intensely personal a matter that the personal element must enter into it at every stage. Sunday after Sunday he sees men at Church whose faces have become familiar to him. They come sometimes for months together. But where they come from, and where they go to he does not know. Many of them are evidently Christian men. Some of them seem from time to time to be impressed with some considerations which he submits; but they disappear, and so far as he knows no result accrues. Now, he wishes to know these men—to have a speaking acquaintance with them at any rate. A number of gentlemen of the parish join with him in this feeling so entirely that they are willing to take considerable trouble to bring about a better acquaintance.

Last week, in response to an invitation given from the chancel, a large number of gentlemen who are more or less regular attendants at the services, came to the Parish House, 1124 Girard Street, to meet the Rector and some of his friends. It is not too much to say that the result was good in every way. It was so good that it was mutually agreed to fix the last Wednesday evening in every month as a time when the Clergy of the parish will meet the gentlemen whom they see in the Church on Sundays, at 1124 Girard Street.

DOES ANY BODY WANT TO ADOPT a little girl? There has been brought to the attention of the Rector the case of a little girl who is left absolutely destitute. She is 11 years old, exceedingly pretty, good and lovely. She is well born and well bred.

Her father was an officer in the U. S. Navy. She has no kith nor kin living. Is there not some family who has a comfortable home where the music of a child's voice is not heard, who would bless themselves and one of God's orphans as well by taking this waif to their hearth and heart?

REPORT OF THE ALTAR SOCIETY OF ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH. The Altar Society of St. Stephen's Church present to the congregation the third annual report.

During the year the work in its different branches has been steadily and quietly going on.

Letters of most grateful thanks have been received for those gifts the Society has been able to give to poorer parishes, to enable them to have those necessary things, so that all things can be done decently and in order. Not as many surplices and sets of altar linen were made as could have been disposed of, as they would have taken more time and hands than the members had to devote to that part of the work.

The Library Committee are very much disappointed that the congregation still make their duties too much of a sinecure, and hope that they will send them more papers, periodicals, etc., for the benefit of the Missionaries who are too far from any libraries to get any reading matter.

THE PARISH NEWS and St. Stephen's Church Woman's Institute were started, and are under the auspices of the Altar Society, but they have been so well managed by the Clergy and Laity that the members are only too thankful that they are such powerful agents for good, that the benefits are felt beyond the bounderies of our own parish.

The Treasurer reports:

Received,	$185 00
Paid,	144 55

THE LADIES OF ST. STEPHEN'S PARISH HOUSE COMMITTEE having been so successful in the work undertaken last year, of providing a way for gentlewomen to dispose of their handiwork, will hold a third sale on Dec. 7th, 8th and 9th at 1124 Girard Street.

The sale consisting of articles of fine plain sewing, fancy work, jellies, preserves, cake, etc., will open at 12 M. on Dec. 7th, and at 10 o'clock on Dec. 8th and 9th, closing each day at 4 P. M.

It is earnestly requested that all who can will aid in this important work.

Mrs. Arrison, Mrs. Roberts,
Miss Cleemann, Mrs. Rowland,
Mrs. Griffith, Mrs. Hockley.

THE MANAGERS OF THE BENEVOLENT SOCIETY of St. Stephen's Church, present to the congregation their twenty-second annual report.

During the year two thousand and twenty-six garments and pieces of work were made.

Value of clothes given to the parish children and others, $7.00.

The Missionary Box Committee feeling they could accomplish more in their branch of the work, and do it much more quickly as a distinct organization, separated from the Benevolent at their own request, and with the full approval of this Society.

The Managers wish to remind the ladies of the congregation that they are now ready to fill any orders they may give them for garments, and earnestly beg they will aid them by buying towels for the kitchens and butler's pantries, and other household articles, of which there is always a full supply on hand.

The Treasurer reports as follows:

THE THEATRE SERVICES for Non-Churchgoers, with the support of which this parish has been associated for several years, began earlier than usual this Autumn, but have been thronged from the start. Our Parish House has been placed at the disposal of the Rev. J. E. Johnson, who is in charge of this work, for such times as may not interfere with our own parochial uses, and several evenings in the week are already occupied by enterprises in connection with the Theatre congregation. Our people may be able to co-operate in some of this work; as, for instance, in carrying on the Branch of the Girls' Friendly Society which meets Monday nights. We shall have more to say about this by and bye. These Theatre Services, held as they are, right here in the immediate neighborhood of our parish church, and within the limits of what may be called our geographical limits, will always be entitled to our lively interest and support.

A good many pathetic things occur in connection with these Theatre Services. A dying man told a City Missionary, who had been suddenly called to his bed-side, that he knew about the Saviour, for he had been two or three times to the Theatre Services.

After the meeting one Sunday night, the clergyman found a fashionably dressed young man whose attire was in odd contrast with that of the fifteen or twenty others caught that night in the net. With the tears coursing down his face he related how he had left a young wife at home and for several days lived in the saloons and dens of the neighborhood. Passing the theatre that night he had been attracted by the light and the sound of music and entered. While there the Spirit caught him and he cried to God for help. The clergyman tried to interest some church people in his case, but not succeeding, rejoiced to hear soon after that he had been admitted to a Lutheran Church in the city, and his last information from him was to the effect that he was engaged as a volunteer lay-helper in the Evangelistic work of that denomination in this city. It will be easy to imagine the satisfaction of his parents, who are among the wealthy and influential people of this city, as well as the joy of his young wife. Such incidents might be indefinitely multiplied.

SELECTIONS.

PUT YOURSELF IN HIS PLACE.

It's a very good rule in all things of life,
When judging a friend or brother,
Not to look at the question alone on one side,
But always to turn to the other.
We are apt to be selfish in all our views,
In the jostling, headlong race;
And so to be right, ere you censure a man,
Just "put yourself in his place."

It is very hard to be just—to know
The reason another may give—
How much he has struggled, and fought, and striven,
How honestly tried to live;
How much been cheated, how sorely tried,
Ere the wrong he was forced to embrace;
And if you would learn these things, the way
Is to "put yourself in his place."

There's many a man crushed down by shame,
Who blameless stands before God,
But whom his fellows have utterly scorned
And made to "pass under the rod;"
Whose soul is unstained by the thought of sin,
Who will yet find saving grace,
And who would be praised where you now condemn,
If you would, "put yourself in his place."

WHERE ARE THE CHILDREN?

"Where are the children?" is often asked as one looks over our congregations. The reason given is that "they attend the Sunday-school." But is this any reason at all? Is it designed that the Sunday-schools be to the children a substitute for the church? We all know that these schools do not in any sense fill the place of public worship. Songs and banners, and libraries, and illustrated papers, and the amusing ways by which young teachers draw together and hold the interest of children, all have their value, but can it be weighed a moment against the solid impression made upon childhood by the Christian Year, by the gathering together in the family pew, by the dear old familiar prayers, by the holy reverence for the house of God, by the love of public worship formed in childhood and growing with the years? If these and all the clustering advantages and associations of public worship must be given up for the school, who will not say that the loss is greater than the gain? Christian parents! send your children to the Sunday-school if you will, but do not, on this account, fail to have them at your side in the house of God. In a few years they will go from you out into the world, and where will they get a love for the church and habits of attendance unless they acquire them when young?

OLD AGE.

Dean Bradley, successor of Stanley in the deanery of Westminster, tells an anecdote of him as he neared his sixtieth year. He was traveling in Germany on a Rhine steamer, and getting acquainted with a boy (he loved children), the boy asked him his age, which being answered, he said, "Why, all your life is over." "No," said the Dean, "the best time is yet to come."

"You must be on the wrong side of sixty," said one acquaintance to another. "No," he replied, "I am on the right side." Old age is cheerless enough to one lacking faith in God and Christ; but bright with divinest hopes when one has for his portion the Christ, whom to know with the Father is eternal life. Let every man mourn as old age creeps upon him if he be without faith in the Holy One. Let every man rejoice as age comes upon him if he trusts in Him who said, "Because I live, ye shall live." Life here is only the state of infancy. We know, in part, and that a small part, but there * * * the best time is yet to come."

A plain London lighterman, only a navigator on the Thames, was in the Abbey, standing before the monument of John Wesley, and as he talked with the Dean, knowing he had been to Palestine, said, "It must have been beautiful to have walked where the Saviour walked." "Yes," and with a saintly look he said, "Beautiful to walk in the steps of the Saviour." Stanley's words, as he spoke of death, are so beautiful we quote them: "There the soul finds itself on the mountain ridge overlooking the unknown future; our company before is gone, the kinsfolk and friends of many years are passed over the dark river, and we are left alone with God. We know not in the shadow of the night who it is that touches us—we feel only that the everlasting arms are closing us in; the twilight of the morning breaks, we are bid to depart in peace, for by a strength not our own we have prevailed, and the path is made clear before us."

Great and many are the compensations of advancing age.

THE ROYAL TABLET.

A certain king would build a cathedral, and that the credit of it might be all his own, he forbade any from contributing to its erection in the least degree. A tablet was placed in the side of the building, and on it his name was carved, as the builder. But that night he saw, in a dream, an angel, who came down and erased his name, and the name of a poor widow appeared in its stead. This was three times repeated, when the enraged king summoned the woman before him and demanded, "What have you been doing, and why have you broken my commandment?" The trembling widow replied, "I love the Lord, and long to do something for His name and for the building up of His church. I was forbidden to touch it in any way; so in my poverty, I brought a wisp of hay for the horses that brought the stones." And the king saw that he had labored for his own glory, but the widow for the glory of God, and he commanded that her name should be inscribed upon the tablet.

An Irishman was taken to see a cathedral. As he entered the magnificent building, bewildered by its beauty, he turned to his companion and said: "Phwy, Moike, it beats the devil." "That's the intintion, Pat."

A Scotchman who had lived a careless life, asked his minister, as he saw death approaching, whether it would help him in the next world if he were to give £1,000 to the church. The reply was, "Ah, weel, I canna just say that; but the experiment wad be weel worth tryin'."

A HAPPY NEW YEAR TO ALL, bearing in mind the eternal truth that this, like all years, will be a happy year if it is a good year, otherwise not.

THE CLERGY OF THE PARISH wish gratefully to acknowledge the many tokens of good-will, great and small, which came to them at Christmas time. Surely there is no relation in life where affection expended brings back so swift and large a return as in that of a pastor to his people.

They wish specially to acknowledge one or two gifts of value and beauty which came without the name of the giver.

THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH held its regular monthly meeting at the Parish House on Monday, Dec. 19th. Miss Julia Emory, of New York, was present, and spoke very favorably of the methods of working in the Domestic Department of the Church's labor. She explained the manner in which our missionaries are helped by the boxes of clothing, household linen, etc., sent to them, and how the timely assistance thus given helped to bring relief to those whose salaries are small, but whose wants are large and demand relief. Surely by the earnest helpfulness of Christian women in our more favored parishes, gladness and strength are put into the hearts and homes of the earnest men who are laboring in the far western fields of work and in our southern districts. It is a good undertaking. It is hoped the Society organized in our parish may soon have every earnest woman of St. Stephen's Church enrolled as a member.

THE CHURCH WOMAN'S INSTITUTE, which was opened at the Parish House this Fall, has proved successful far beyond the most sanguine hopes of its projectors. The idea was and is to provide a course of instruction far more systematic and thorough than has been heretofore accessible to church women. If anything is "churchly" work this is it; to learn what the church is, what it believes and teaches, and what it does not. The Institute numbers one hundred and forty women, as many as at present there is room for. They are picked women, chosen by a process of natural selection. They come not from our parish alone, but from nearly every one in the city. They are women who have a mind to work. They attend a lecture every week in one of the four departments, on The Scriptures, by Rev. Prof. Peters, of the Divinity School; The Prayer-Book, by Rev. Dr. Huntington, of New York; Church Theology, by Rev. Prof. Fullerton, of the University, and others, and Church History, by the Rector of this Church. There is no attempt made by the instructors to "cut it fine." On the contrary, they are quite awake to the fact that no body of students can be found more able to take the best that they can give. The interest has steadily increased from the beginning, and there seems to be good reason to believe that no project has been started for many a day which will be more far-reaching and lasting for good to the church. Certainly its projectors have no other object in mind but this.

A St. Andrew's Society has been formed in the Parish. It was done in the following fashion and for the following purposes. The Rector asked twenty-five or more young men, who are communicants, to meet him, when he laid before them the fact that in a parish situated as ours is, which comes in contact with so many men who are strangers, there is much work which the clergy cannot do. He asked for volunteers to help him. The terms of enlistment are subscription to the following pledges:

1. To pray daily for the spread of Christ's kingdom among men, and for God's blessing on the labors of the Brotherhood.

2. To make an earnest effort each week to bring at least one man within hearing of the Gospel of Jesus Christ as set forth in the services of the Church.

3. To obey the call of the Rector in all reasonable requests for service.

The Society now numbers about twenty-five members. It is composed of lawyers, physicians, editors, gentlemen of leisure, salesmen, manufacturers, railroad men, business men. Any member is at liberty to return his card and resign at any time, but while he remains a member he does whatever reasonable duty he is asked to do by the Rector. Recruits are wanted, but only of men who are ready to back up their Christianity by their work. The Rector wants to shake hands with any man who is a communicant, or ready to become one, who is not already doing work for the Church in some capacity to the limit of his time and ability, of which every man must be his own judge. The Rector wants to know that he has back of him a body of men who can be called upon in an emergency to help. Such emergencies do not frequently arise, but they do sometimes, and there are cases constantly arising among the men of a great city when he needs the help of manly men. Gentlemen, the help he wants is not in money, but in hands and hearts and brains.

Two receptions have already been held by the clergy and the St. Andrew's men, at the Parish House, which were both pleasant and profitable. At the last, on Wednesday, December 28, Dr. Hine, a member of the Society, gave an informal lecture, which was greatly appreciated by those present. It is hoped this feature of the receptions may be adopted during this winter season.

The Ladies of the Parish House Committee held a sale in December of articles made and entrusted to them by needy gentlewomen. The articles were of all consumable sorts, from a pot of jam to an oil painting. They were sent in by ninety women. The ladies arranged the sale and called in their friends to buy. They received for the things sold $1128.35. Every cent of this without any deduction for expenses was handed to the women depositing. No better or more truly churchly work than this has been or can be done. The poor ladies with whom the world has gone hardly and who are compelled to earn their own livelihood, have their work thus brought before those who are able to buy it, and it does those who buy quite as much good as those who sell. It was a good job well done.

SELECTIONS.

CONSECRATION.

By Francis Ridley Havergal.

Take my life, and let it be Consecrated, Lord, to Thee.
Take my moments and my days,
Let them flow in ceaseless praise.
Take my hands, and let them move
At the impulse of Thy love.
Take my feet, and let them be
Swift and "beautiful" for Thee.

Take my voice, and let me sing
Always, only, for my King.
Take my lips, and let them be Filled with messages from Thee.
Take my silver and my gold,
Not a mite would I withhold.
Take my intellect, and use
Every power as Thou shalt choose.
Take my will, and make it Thine,
It shall be no longer mine.
Take my heart, it is Thine own.
It shall be Thy royal throne.
Take my love, my Lord, I pour,
At Thy feet its treasure-store.
Take myself, and I will be Ever, only, all for Thee.

HISTORY.

Why do we want to know history? Why does history form a recognized part of our liberal education? Simply because all of us, and every one of us, ought to know how we have come to be what we are, so that each generation need not start again from the same point, and toil over the same ground, but, profiting by the experience of those who came before, may advance towards higher points and nobler aims. As a child when growing up, might ask his father or grandfather, who had built the house they lived in, or who had cleared the field that yielded them their food, we ask the historian whence we came, and how we came into possession of what we call our own. History may tell us afterwards many useful and amusing things, gossip, such as a child might like to hear from his mother or grandmother; but what history has to teach us before all and everything, is our own antecedents, our own ancestors, our own descent.

Now our principal intellectual ancestors are, no doubt, the Jews, the Greeks, the Romans, and the Saxons, and we, here in Europe, should not call a man educated or enlightened who is ignorant of the debt which he owes to his intellectual ancestors in Palestine, Greece, Rome, and Germany. The whole past history of the world would be darkness to him, and not knowing what those who came before him had done for him, he would probably care little to do anything for those who are to come after him. Life would be to him a chain of sand, while it ought to be a kind of electric chain that makes our hearts tremble and vibrate with the most ancient thoughts of the past, as well as with the most distant hopes of the future.

Let us begin with our religion. No one can understand even the historical possibility of the Christian religion without knowing something of the Jewish race, which must be studied chiefly in the pages of the Old Testament. And in order to appreciate the true relation of the Jews to the rest of the ancient world, and to understand what ideas were peculiarly their own, and what ideas they shared in common with the other members of the Semitic stock, or what moral or religious impulses they received from their historical contact with other nations of antiquity, it is absolutely necessary that we should pay some attention to the history of Babylon, Nineveh, Phœnicia and Persia. These may seem distant countries and forgotten people, and many might feel inclined to say, "Let the dead bury their dead; what are those mummies to us?" Still, such is the marvellous continuity of history, that I could easily show you many things which we, even we who are here assembled, owe to Babylon, to Nineveh, to Egypt, Phœnicia and Persia.

Every one who carries a watch, owes to the Babylonians the division of the hour into sixty minutes. It may be a very bad division, yet such as it is, it has come to us from the Greeks and Romans, and it came to them from Babylon. The sexagesimal division is peculiarly Babylonian. Hipparchos, 150 B. C, adopted it from Babylon, Ptolemy, 150 A. D., gave it wider currency, and the French, when they decimated everything else, respected the dial plates of our watches, and left them with their sixty Babylonian minutes.

Everyone who writes a letter, owes his alphabet to the Romans and Greeks; the Greeks owed their alphabet to the Phœnicians, and the Phœnicians learnt it in Egypt. It may be a very imperfect alphabet—as all the students of phonetics will tell you; yet, such as it is, and has been, we owe it to the old Phœnicians and Egyptians, and in every letter we trace, there lies imbedded the mummy of an ancient Egyptian heiroglyphic.—Max Muller.

WHY AM I A HEATHEN?

We heathen are a God-fearing race. Ay, we believe the whole universe-creation—whatever exists and has existed—is of God and in God; that, figuratively, the thunder is his voice and the lightning his mighty hands; that everything we do and contemplate doing is seen and known by him; that he has created this and other worlds to effectuate beneficent, not merciless, designs; and that all that he has done is for the steady, progressive benefit of the creatures whom he endowed with life and sensibility, and to whom, as a consequence, he owes and gives paternal care, and will give paternal compensation and justice—yet his voice will threaten and his mighty hands chastise those who deliberately disobey his sacred laws and their duty to their fellow men.

"Do unto others as you wish they would do unto you" or "Love your neighbor as yourself," is the great Divine law which Christians and heathen alike hold, but which the Christians ignore.

This is what keeps me the heathen I am! And I earnestly invite the Christians of America to come to Confucius.—Wang Chin Foo, in North American Review.

WHY I AM NOT A HEATHEN.

I not only discriminate between Christianity and its professors, but I also discriminate between true Christians and hypocrites. Confucius says, "It is impossible to carve on rotten timber." Christianity is not responsible for the acts of morally rotten men; and yet, where there is any soundness at all, it has demonstrated its power to heal and to save. . . . Christianity will survive this last and most terrible of attacks. Indeed, I am silly enough to believe that that religion, which flourished in spite of the Pharisee and the Sadducee, which survived the persecutions of the Cæsars and finally supplanted them, which passed through the Dark Ages of ignorance and barbarism undimmed in lustre, which rose serenely after the terrible French Revolution, will continue to reign supreme as long as eternity itself shall endure. Christianity has demonstrated its fitness to supply my spiritual needs. Its authenticity as a history no reasonable man can deny. I believe, I accept its truths, as I hope to be happy in this life, and to enjoy a blessed immortality in the life to come. Do you wonder that I am a Christian? I cordially invite all heathen, whether American, or English, or Chinese, to come to the Saviour.—Rejoinder to Wang Chin Foo, by Yan Phou Lee, in North American Review.

BEARS HELPING EACH OTHER.

A gentleman was once making inquiries in Russia about the method of catching bears in that country. He was told that to entrap them a pit was dug several feet deep, and after covering it over with turf, leaves, &c., some food was placed on the top. The bear, if tempted by the bait, easily fell into the snare.

"But," he added, "if four or five happen to get in together, they all manage to get out again."

"How is that?" asked the gentleman.

"They form a sort of ladder by stepping on each other's shoulders, and thus make their escape."

"But how does the bottom one get out?"

"Ah! these bears, though not possessing a mind and soul such as God has given us, yet can feel gratitude; and they won't forget the one who has been the chief means of procuring their liberty. Scampering off, they bring the branch of a tree, which they let down to their poor brother, enabling him speedily to join them in the freedom in which they rejoice."

Sensible bears, we should say, and a great deal better than some people that we hear about, who never help anybody but themselves.—The Carrier Dove.

"MADAM," said a husband to his young wife, in a little altercation which will spring up in the best regulated families, "when a man and his wife have quarreled, and each consider the other at fault, which of the two ought to advance toward a reconciliation?" "The best natured and wiser of the two," said the wife putting up her mouth for a kiss, which was given with unction. She was the conqueror.

WHEN the clergyman announced that there would be a nave in the church which was building, an old lady remarked that she knew the party to whom he referred.

"THE QUIET DAY FOR WOMEN" will be celebrated in St. Stephen's, Wednesday, Feb. 29th. The services will be conducted by the Bishop. They will begin with a celebration of the Holy Communion at 10 o'clock, with an address which will be followed by other services and addresses at short intervals throughout the day.

A PUBLIC MEETING of the "Association of Parish Guilds" will be held in the Church, Thursday evening, March 1st. Previous meetings of this Association have been held this Winter in the Church of the Epiphany, and at St. James' Church. On these occasions the lecturers were the Rev. Dr. Courtenay of Boston, and the Bishop of Mississippi. At the meeting, March 1st, the lecturer will be the Rev. B. W. Maturin of Philadelphia.

THE ATTENDANCE AT THE WEEK-DAY SERVICES during Lent ought not to be left to caprice or impulse. Select such time, one or more services during the week, as are most suitable, and on those days go to Church and worship God. It may interfere with your business a little, very likely it will. But is your business so important that it will not allow you half an hour a week to say your prayers? If so, your business is driving you harder than you ought to be driven, and the business which will occupy you permanently bye and bye is less in your mind than it ought to be. Religion, if it be real and not a sham, will not be content with the crumbs and remnants of our life. If that is all you can give it, it has too much Divine dignity to remain with you at all. And it will not do so. The appetite for worship is one which grows by what it feeds upon. No sense of hunger will be felt by those who neglect it, or, if so, the sense of loss will be vague and not referred to its true source. The experience of ages has put this matter to the ultimate test. Therefore, "forsake not the assembling of yourselves together, as," we are sorry to say, "the manner of some is."

THE ANNUAL COLLECTION FOR DIOCESAN MISSIONS, will be placed on the altar on Sunday, Feb. 19th. This annual offering has come now to be an "institution" in St. Stephen's. On the second Sunday in February, the Rector will tell the people what he knows about Diocesan Missions. In the week following, every family and individual in the Parish will be visited by a committee of Collectors, among whom the parish is divided for that purpose. This Committee simply calls to receive the offerings of those who are willing to give. They make no effort, whatever, to raise any amount. The Rector will do all that. Of course, the committee will be courteously received by all well-bred people, whether they can see their way to contributing or not. The basis of this annual offering is $5.00 from each member of the parish. This is what we have done heretofore, and nobody is any the poorer. The result has been to put St. Stephen's first in the Diocese in this matter. Of course, there is many a one in the parish who cannot give anything like the sum above mentioned, but there are many others who can, and heretofore have given, both for themselves and their poorer neighbors. They will do so again.

The whole amount gathered by the collectors will be by them put on the almsbasins, Sunday, February 19th. Last year it amounted to $1,223.34.

A NEW CHARITY, known as the "Garment Branch of the Benevolent Society," has been organized, has gone to work, and hereby asks the support of St. Stephen's people.

The object and method is as follows:

To assist by gifts of clothing deserving poor people, charitable institutions in the city which depend upon voluntary contributions, missionaries' families, and the poor under their care.

The condition of membership is, that the person joining shall contribute two ready-made garments in the year. These garments may be any thing from an overcoat to a pair of baby stockings,—shirts, blankets, pillow cases, any garments for any age or sex.

The committee in charge consists of Mrs. Muirhead, Mrs. Arnold, Mrs. Lundy, Mrs. Stratton, Miss Cleeman, Miss Stoddard, Miss Bell. The Society, which was organized about two weeks ago, now numbers about eighty contributors. From now until Easter, a representative of the committee will be at the Parish School Building, from 11 to 1 o'clock every Monday, to receive contributions of garments. Each package sent must be addressed to the "Garment Committee," and marked with the name and address of the sender.

The garments will be distributed on Easter Monday, April 2nd, at which time the current year will close. The next distribution will be Nov. 30th, before which time the contributions for next year will be received.

CONFIRMATION.

The Bishop has appointed Tuesday in Holy Week, March 27th, at 11 o'clock, as the time for the annual confirmation in this church. This is the date to which we have been accustomed for many years, although for the last two years it has been changed on account of the illness of the late Bishop.

Who should be confirmed? (1.) Such children of Christian parents as have come to discretion, and are old enough and wise enough to take upon themselves the promises which their parents took for them at their Baptism. This does not mean children who have not come to discretion. The Rector of this parish will not present children for confirmation. Of course no definite age can be fixed. One child at fifteen may be as old as another at twenty. It means young people who are old enough to form moral judgements, and to know what they are doing. The candidate is called upon to declare that he "believes the Apostles' Creed." It is not required that he should be old enough or learned enough to say clearly why he believes it, but he must be old enough to know whether he does or does not believe it. He is called upon to promise to "lead a sober, righteous and godly life." This promise he cannot fairly be asked to make until he is old enough to have some intelligent notion about what it is to live, and what sobriety and righteousness mean. Not that it requires any great age or wisdom to understand these things. The judgment of the young man or maiden is often much more clear here than is that of their more sophisticated father or mother. He who is old enough to prefer right to wrong as the rule of his life, and who humbly begs Divine aid and sustentation therein, is the one who aught to be confirmed.

(2.) The man or woman whose life is already fairly honest, pure and upright, but who is not openly identified with the Church of the living God, or doing that which in him may lie to bring his fellow-men to the righteousness of Christ. It is worth while for such a man to consider whether his present attitude is honorable? He believes in Jesus Christ, rules his life as well as he may by his counsels, expects to be buried as a Christian man and to face the Son of Man when he wakes up again, but declines to acknowledge in the only practicable way what is the scource and ground of the very real goodness which he now possesses. The things which prevent him ordinarily are not sufficient. They are a foolish shyness, which is childish; the notion that he "is not good enough," whereas he knows perfectly well that the very purpose of the Church is to nourish and produce goodness; the fear that he "may not be able to keep his promises," whereas he ought to know that the same obligations precisely rest upon him whether he promises or not.

(3.) Those who at present possess membership in other churches, but are attracted by what they and we believe to be our "better way." As a rule, this class of persons constitute a large proportion of those confirmed in our Church. A curious mistake sometimes obtains that by being confirmed they tacitly treat with disrespect their present membership, or rather that our Church does not recognize them as having been members of the church. As a matter of fact, we do precisely what all other churches do. We have our own way of public avowal of membership as they have their way. The certficate of membership, which such a one brings with him takes the place of all examination as to religious character and moral fitness. It does not compel the reception of the member by us any more than a certificate from us would compel reception by Lutherans or Presbyterians. In either case it is an act of courtesy.

But we ask those who come that they shall stand up before our people and publicly identify themselves with us, as we become responsible for them.

But what is the meaning and use of the Rite? Ideally it is simply this; the young man or woman who has been up to this time sheltered under parental care, now begins his own religious life. At the outset, the Church, (to which he already belongs), bids him call to mind what his profession is, bids him kneel and receive her benediction at the hands of the only man who can act for the Church. This benediction is not only a prayer, but something more. It gently constrains the Spirit of God, which moveth as the wind, to touch and fill the humble soul, striving for goodness with "wisdom and ghostly strength."

SELECTIONS.

PEOPLE who think that everything is going to the bow-wows because of our Knights of Labor and strikes may rest assured. There were exactly the same troubles in the middle ages, and here we are in the shank of the 19th century. The old masonic guilds used to make almost as much trouble as the present day Anarchists.

MODERN religious opinion puts sins in the following order of harmfulness: Against neighbor, against self, against God. The true order is, perhaps, just the reverse.

THE ancient and famous city of Damascus, which was a place of importance 1900 years B. C., is busy with plans for laying railroad lines through the streets. Street cars in a city said to have been founded by Araham would be a startling novelty. The place has 120,000 inhabitants.

A WHITE squall caught a party of tourists moving across a lake in Scotland, and threatened to capsize the boat. When it seemed that the crisis had really come, the largest and physically strongest of the party, in a state of intense fear, said: "Let us pray!" "No, no, my man," shouted the bluff old boatman; "let that little man pray; you take an oar!"

BISHOP POTTER, of New York, has consented to take the lead in the Burial Reform movement. The object of the reformers is to cause to cease Sunday funerals, floral decorations, many carriages, metallic and other durable and costly caskets, and other mistaken and vulgar customs now in vogue. Nothing is more lamentable than the burden of an expensive funeral upon an already broken-hearted family, who can see no way of paying the bill, yet incur the expense lest it be supposed they did not mourn. We might begin the reform among ourselves by having funerals in church, saying "no flowers" when printing obituary notices, and furnishing only sufficient carriages for the mourners. Of course, that would do away with long processions, but what of it. A funeral seems to us the very last place for display.

HOW TO KILL A PARISH.

The following rules for doing so are worth careful reading:

Absent yourself from service. It takes a very dull or careless minister to stand up against empty pews.

Stay at home whenever it rains on Sunday, or is hot, or cold.

Never let the rector know he has ever done you any good.

Take a class in Sunday-school and be in your place about three Sundays out of five, and late the other two.

Attend no church meeting if you have an opportunity of going anywhere else.

Differ from the rector on almost every point involved in the management of a parish.

Snub strangers. Request the ushers never to put one in your pew. If one is near you in church, never hand him a prayer book or hymnal. Never speak to any whom you see there Sunday after Sunday, unless you have been regularly introduced.

If you are sick, do not send word to the rector, but let him find it out himself. He will probably call about the time you are able to go out and spend the day. In the meanwhile, take every occasion to tell the church people that you fear the rector is not much of a pastor; that he doesn't seem to know who are sick; that he has not been to see you for weeks, and all the time you have been so miserable!

If times are hard, money scarce, business dull, inform the vestry that you must give up your pew. You cannot afford to do anything for the church this year. By the time you have paid for your tobacco, ribbons, jewelry, livery and excursions, you really haven't anything left.

Never "talk up" your church. Do not let outsiders know that a church exists. Go with others elsewhere, whenever you get a chance. Tell the members when you get back how you enjoyed yourself.—Church Work.

RELIGIOUS CREEDS.

Creeds are no mere device of men. They come to us with the august authority of God Himself, for they are the utterance in her corporate capacity of that church to which the promise was given that He would be with her till the end of time and guide her into all truth. Their statements are moreover simple, easy to be grasped by the plainest and most unlearned among men; they chronicle divine facts of revelation, not theories—they tell what God has done for man, not of man's speculations concerning God. Theological opinion varies doubtless within the church as well as out of it; individual thinkers follow up lines of thought and indulge in teachings widely divergent from one another; but the creeds are repeated still Sunday after Sunday with all the old ferver and faith; they are the anchor which keeps the church from drifting far into the doctrinal error, however individuals and parties may from time to time wander. On the other hand, it is an old story how doubtful is the orthodoxy of the sects which have repudiated the old creeds; many are the instances in which religious bodies have in the course of a few generations drifted from their original position into the blankest negation of the faith of their founders. Once cut loose from the creeds, declare that the Bible is all sufficient for doctrinal statement, bid every man find there the treasure for himself, and the door is opened to every form of unfaithfulness and wild vagary.—The Churchman.

THE RECTOR WISHES TO MEET all who expect to be confirmed, immediately after the 5 o'clock service on Friday, March 23d. On that evening no public confirmation lecture will be delivered, but instead, some more private counsel, to the confirmation class alone, concerning the duties of communicants will take its place.

A YOUNG LADY,—(not too young)—wishes and needs a situation as housekeeper, companion, or governess to little children. She is thoroughly capable, having known both wealth and the reverse. Whoever secures her services will be glad of it. Enquire of the Rector.

THE OFFERTORY FOR DIOCESAN MISSIONS last month was very gratifying indeed. Each year since we began the plan now obtaining the amount has steadily increased. It is all the more valuable, moreover, because it comes from the whole parish —scarcely a family which had not its name in the Alms Plate. This is as it should be. The gentlemen who took the trouble to act as collectors, report that, almost without exception, they were courteously received, and found that people had been thoughtful not to take more of their time than necessary.

THE CHANGE IN THE MORNING SERVICE during Lent, that is the alternating of Morning Prayer and Litany, Sunday mornings, has been made for the single purpose of bringing the whole service into such compass of time as will permit communicants to remain to the Holy Communion. In making this change the Rector does not venture to say how frequently any individual should receive. The truth is, no rule can be made which is not mischievous. A certain divine courtesy is the only guide. The table is spread, and the guests invited, generally. But inasmuch as they are not bidden by name, and inasmuch as in a large parish it is of necessity a sort of standing feast, a communicant may withdraw without discourtesy to the Host, even having such a conscious understanding with Him that he goes away with a benediction on his head, leaving temporarily vacant at the Board the place which he has so often filled, and will again, with relish. But this may not be done too often. How often would be too often, no one man may say for another. Whether one should remain or not, does not depend upon his feeling at the time, and yet it does do so in part. An obstinate anger at a neighbor which will not down, a possible sin in the near future which keeps plucking at the imagination, a fault in the near past, the bad taste of which is still in the mouth—any of these clearly disqualify. So also does an immediate and clear call of duty to one's fellow-man which cannot be discharged without withdrawing from the Holy Communion.

The simple truth would seem to be this:

For a Christian the fellowship of the Holy Communion at stated intervals ought to be just as natural for him as it is for him to eat his dinner. Like his ordinary meals, he may be called away from it; another duty may, for the time, override it; his (spiritual) health may be such that he cannot partake, but these he will regard as the exceptions, and as a rule, he will be found at the table.

THE EASTER OFFERING will, as usual, be devoted to whatever pious and charitable purpose each giver shall designate. So much of it as is not specially designated the Rector will distribute according to his best judgment.

Two things should be borne in mind by the givers:

(1) That the gift should be a real gift and not a sham one. If one, on Easter Day, with the hope of his own immortality before him, wishes to make a thank-offering for this inestimable benefit, let him do so in an honest and manly fashion. But don't let him go through the form of making an offering, giving a trifle out of defference to custom, and to good manners. It is quite honest and honorable for a man to give nothing, when he thinks he cannot afford it, but it is neither honest nor honorable to give less than he thinks he ought.

(2) It ought to be borne in mind by the many people who go out of town in the Summer, that our obligations are calculated for a year, and need the equivalent of a year's gifts to redeem. Of course those who assume other obligations in the places where they go for the Summer ought to be free from the burden which they carry while here, and they are so, both in fact and in right, but "to evade one's responsibilities by moving" is—well, we don't just care to say what it is.

Before the beginning of each church year the Rector cannot well avoid pledging his parish for specific sums for various purposes. Of course, he has no legal right to do so, and it is always understood in such promises that he will simply bring the matter before his people, and do what he may to have the promises redeemed.

The pledge list at this date shows as follows:

For Parish House Rent,	Paid	$1000
" Expense of Theatre Services,	Paid	500
" Diocesan Missions,	Paid	800
" Support of Divinity Student,	Paid	150

PROBABLY THE CONGREGATION are not aware of the fact that on Friday evenings there is an assembly at the Parish House of those who attend the services of the Arch St. Opera House Sunday evenings. The people meet the minister in charge of those same services, sing hymns under the leadership of Mr. and Mrs. Foster, and some of the ladies of the parish try to entertain them with games, cake, etc. This cake is always acceptable to close the evening with, and any donations toward supplying it would be very acceptable to the people who attend.

THE ATTENDANCE AT THE WEEK-DAY SERVICES during Lent ought not to be left to caprice or impulse. Select such time, one or more services during the week, as are most suitable, and on those days go to Church and worship God. It may interfere with your business a little, very likely it will. But is your business so important that it will not allow you half an hour a week to say your prayers? If so, your business is driving you harder than you ought to be driven, and the business which will occupy you permanently bye and bye is less in your mind than it ought to be. Religion, if it be real and not a sham, will not be content with the crumbs and remnants of our life. If that is all you can give it, it has too much Divine dignity to remain with you at all. And it will not do so. The appetite for worship is one which grows by what it feeds upon, No sense of hunger will be felt by those who neglect it, or, if so, the sense of loss will be vague and not referred to its true source. The experience of ages has put this matter to the ultimate test. Therefore, "forsake not the assembling of yourselves together, as," we are sorry to say, "the manner of some is."

BEFORE we can really lift up other hands, our own must have been lifted up by his good Spirit, and our own feeble knees must have been confirmed by much bowing at his footstool.—F. R. H.

THOUGHTS FROM ST. STEPHEN'S.

"And they took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus."

The learned counsel summoned them;—
They answered calmly, these plain men;—
Astonished!
The learned said—
"These men have been with Jesus Christ—
The Nazarene!"

. . . . . .

Here, there,
Ay, everywhere,
If they admit
Or it deny,
All recognize,—
The ignorant or overwise,—
The mystic, marvellous, gracious power,
Enriching, as a heavenly dower,
That permeates,
Anew creates,
Intensifies the worth,
Kindles the flame
And bids it to illumined rise,
The soul that flies
From self to dwell beside
"The Crucified!"
This was He e'er the nails were driven!
This was He when He left high heaven!—
Unto the nature Heavenly
What dire dread load—
That of Humanity!

What happiness
For us,
If this of us be told,—
This legend old,—
"They've been with Him—
The Nazarene!"

E. S. S.

February 5th, 1888.

As the offerings on Wednesdays and Fridays during Lent are for the Missionary Box Committee, perhaps it would be well if some report were to be made of the work done by that committee. Four boxes have been sent—one to a student at Trinity College, the son of a clergyman, and expecting himself to study for the ministry. It was most gratefully acknowledged. Another to a clergyman in Oregon with a family of seven children. Father, mother and children were well provided with various articles of clothing, besides books, toys, and games for the children. Mr. B., in acknowledging the box, says: "I sincerely hope the other missionaries may be as fortunate as we have been." Another box to a mission station in Colorado, where everything is so enormously high that the people get along with as little as possible. Coal has been selling this Winter at $15.00 a ton, and kerosene at 75 cents a gallon. This box seems to have been very welcome. It arrived at exactly the right time—Christmas Eve. In his letter of thanks, Mr. O. says: "I feel the missionary box is a greater support to the missionary in the far West than the missionary stipend. Because behind it and with it comes a personal interest and love in the special work. It always comes with such a hearty good will. The money comes in a general, cold way, and mostly with the wish that the missionary may soon be able to do without it." The box packed last week was sent to Virginia, to a lady whose life is devoted to work among the freedmen. It depends entirely upon the Lenten offerings how many more boxes shall be sent this season. "As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith."

SELECTIONS.

THERE is no unbelief;
Whoever plants a seed beneath the sod,
And waits to see it push away the clod,
He trusts in God.

Whoever says, when clouds are in the sky,
"Be patient, heart; light breaketh by-and-by,"
Trusts the Most High.

Whoever sees, 'neath Winter's fields of snow,
The silent harvest of the future grow,
God's power must know.

Whoever lies down on his couch to sleep,
Content to lock his sense in slumber deep,
Knows God will keep.

Whoever says, "To-morrow," "The Unknown,"
"The Future," trusts to the power alone
He dares disown.

The heart that looks on when the eyelids close
And dares to live when life has only woes,
God's comfort knows.

There is no unbelief;
And day by day, and night unconsciously,
The lives by that faith the lips deny—
God knoweth why.

—Edward Bulwer Lytton.

THOSE who are loyal to the Church will be glad to follow the example of our blessed Lord, and retire into the wilderness to fast and to pray, and to hold communion with our Heavenly Father.

THERE are now twenty-seven vessels engaged in missionary work in different parts of the world under the auspices of sixteen societies; of these missionary vessels, sixteen are running on the coasts or rivers of Africa, and six among the islands of the Pacific Ocean.

WE desire to hint briefly that a low-necked dress is not the proper dress for church, if indeed for anywhere. We have seen this sort of a thing at a church wedding. St. Paul says "it is a shame for a woman to pray unto God uncovered." He meant, we believe, with uncovered head; how much more would he have preached against a much greater impropriety!

I AM fully convinced that the soul is indestructible, and that its activity will continue through eternity. It is like the sun, which, to our eyes, seems to set in night; but it has, in reality, only gone to diffuse its light elsewhere.—Goethe.

COUNT that day lost, whose low descending sun,
Views from thy hand no worthy action done.

SPEAKING of anthems calls to mind the story of two British sailors who were talking of their shore experience. One had been to a cathedral and had heard some very fine music, and was descanting particularly upon an anthem which gave him much pleasure. His shipmate listened for a while and then said: "I say, Bill, what's a hanthem?" "What?" replied Bill, "do you mean to say you don't know what a hanthem is?" "Not me." "Well, then I'll tell yer. If I was to tell yer, 'Ere, Bill, give me that 'andspike,' that wouldn't be a hanthem; but was I to say, 'Bill, Bill, Bill, giv, giv, giv me, give me that, Bill, giv me, giv me that hand, giv me that hand, handspike, spike, spike. Bill, giv, giv me that, that, hand, handspike, hand, handspike, spike, spike, spike, ah-men, ah-men. Billgivemethathandspike, ah-men.' Why, that would be a hanthem"

A SOFT answer turneth away wrath; but grievous words stir up anger.

IS IT TOO LATE?

It may be too late, quite too late, to set right mischief once done, to avert consequences, to stop the working of the evil that we have set in motion. But it is never too late to come back to God. If you can't be what you might have been, yet you can still be something that Christ will love and value—a humble, penitent soul. If you cannot serve God as you might have done—nay, if you have done harm that you can never undo—yet you can still give him what he values more than all service—a will surrendered to his will. If it is too late for everything else, it is never too late to join the service of Christ.—Bishop Temple.

THE VESTRY OF ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH propose, as soon as possible this Spring, to build a Parish House on the ground available which adjoins the north side of the church. The building will cover the present Vestry-Room and the unoccupied ground in front of it, a space of 25 by 50 feet.

The cost of the new building (together with some necessary repairs in and about the church) will be at least $15,000.

Inasmuch as this is the first time since the organization of the parish (in 1823) that the Vestry have ever appealed to the congregation to raise money for any purpose connected with the property of the church, they think it but right to say why they do so now.

The steadily-increasing work of the parish reached a point some time since which made it necessary to secure a more spacious and convenient place in which to do it. Three years ago the house 1124 Girard Street was rented for this purpose. It costs about $1000 a year, which is paid by individual members of the congregation. It is very uncertain how long this house can be secured. It is also inconvenient, undesirable from a religious point of view, to have the parish work separated from the church and its services. We propose, therefore, that the parish shall erect a three-story building, fronting on Tenth Street, beside the church, which will take the place of the present rented house.

Heretofore every improvement of this kind has been paid for from income or from invested funds. Although it would be possible, we do not deem it advisable to do this again. In our judgment the endowment ought to remain untouched. While the church is in a flourishing condition, as it is now, it should do the work which belongs to its own time, without drawing on the past or discounting the future.

The proposed improvement will provide for the uses of the parish for many years to come.

Therefore, for the first time, the Vestry ask the people of St. Stephen's for the means to do a work which, in our unanimous judgment, is wise and necessary, and we do so with entire confidence that the people will readily and fully respond to our appeal.

A committee of the Vestry will wait personally upon as many as possible of the congregation, to receive their subscriptions for this purpose.

Owing to the size of the parish, however, and the fact of its people being so scattered, they will not be able, by any means, to visit all.

Those who have not been called upon before that time, will be good enough to place their subscriptions in the offertory on Sunday morning, May 13th.

Very Respectfully,

S. D. McConnell, Rector,
L. C. Cleemann, Church Warden,
Crawford Arnold, Rector's Warden.

The Library Committee has sent 282 papers and periodicals to missionaries in the South and West, for which letters of thanks have been received. They have also taken charge of the mailing and distribution of the Parish News.

The Chancel Committee have devoted about seven hours a week to keeping the chancel, altar linen and vestments in due order, and the church decorated with flowers at proper times.

The Church Woman's Institute has been most successful, not only as regards the number of members, but in the interest taken in the studies. The secretary has received letters from Virginia, Oregon and other places asking for information as to the modus operandi, so as to start the same studies in their parishes. Those who have been reading at random feel the great benefit they have received in being advised as to what books to read by the different lecturers.

The Embroidery Committee report that they have given away 1 fair linen cloth to Christ Church, Montecello, Florida; 1 large napkin for Communion Service (Easter gift) to Mission Chapel of the Reconciliation, corner 40th and Girard Avenue; 1 surplice for chapel at Watchhill. For our own use we have made 1 fair linen cloth and 3 napkins. We have now fifteen members in our class in ecclesiastical embroidery, and before this year is over hope to finish the red altar hangings, upon which we have been working this Winter. There has also been made and delivered 1 cotta. Orders are on hand for 3 surplices, 1 white stole and 1 black stole.

The Ladies of the Parish House Committee who have had charge of the Ladies' Depository Sales, report that the amount of the sales for the Winter has been $1,634 52. There are now 90 depositors.

The Easter Offertory amounted to $7,780 51. It has been distributed as follows, forwarding to their destination all such sums as were marked:

THE SERVICES EASTER DAY were an unqualified delight. Notwithstanding the throng and the discomfort, which the members of a crowd must always feel, the temper of the congregations was evidently that of reverence and devotion. The weather, the music, the flowers, the people—all conspired to make the gladness of Easter Day the more keenly felt.

ON THE FIRST SUNDAY AFTER EASTER the carol service of the Sunday-schools, the Parish Day-School, and the Burd Orphan Asylum was held in the church, in the afternoon. The Sunday-school offerings for the year were presented at the offertory, amounting to $95.23, which were increased by the offerings of the congregation present, to $167.03. This was contributed to the Home of the Merciful Saviour for Crippled Children. The address to the children was made by the Rector. The school attendance during the season has been good, being mostly of the children of the neighborhood. The classes have been in charge of faithful and competent teachers, who have greatly aided the work by their regular attendance and earnest efforts. The carol service was enjoyed by all. The carols were well sung by the children. Much credit is due to those who had charge of the musical training of the school.

A NEW PIECE OF COMMUNION PLATE was placed on the altar on Easter day, which, for its association, as well as its great beauty, deserves note. It came to us in this wise: one of our communicants possessed an amount of very quaint antique jewelry, which came to her by inheritance. As, for various reasons, she did not care to use it, and did not like to have it lying hid away, she put it to a use which would seem to be ideally perfect for such a possession, that is, she had it set in a most graceful and beautiful Flagon, which has been for some time much needed in the celebration. Where could such heirlooms be more fittingly set than upon the altar before which the giver remembers "all Thy servants departed this life in Thy faith and fear?"

We venture to suggest that this giver's example may be followed by others. There are many odd pieces of jewelry, once worn by those "loved long since and lost awhile," lying hid away. Those in whose possession they are do not care to wear them, and so they are not of use or beauty to God or man. Why not place them in the hands of the Rector to be set in the chalices as a memorial?

SELECTED.

EASTER SONG.

As Mary came with reverent feet,
Laden with spices rare and sweet;
  Bearing them weeping through the gloom
And silence brooding overhead,
Where the dear Lord, the Christ lay dead
  Within the tomb.

Through garden paths so dark and chill
The very birds were sleeping still,
  To watch alone until the dawn;
And marvelled at the break of day
To find the great stone rolled away,
  The Master gone.

Nor knew Him even when He came
And spake, until He called her name,
  "Mary!" when to her wondering eyes
The gift of vision was restored,
She knew Him for her risen Lord
  With glad surprise.

So when to hearts bowed down and worn,
He shows Himself this Easter morn,
  The risen Lord, we scarcely know
The meaning of that empty tomb,
Our thoughts have grown attuned to gloom
  And we are slow

To learn the mystery sublime
Of conquest over death and time.
  O risen Lord, dear Master give Us sight through all the gathering gloom,
By faith, of Thee beyond the tomb,
  In whom we live!

Phila., March, 1888. CHARLOTTE PENDLETON.

THE baby wept;
The mother took it from the nurse's arms,
And soothed its griefs, and stilled its vain alarms,
  And baby slept.

Again it weeps,
And God doth take it from its mother's arms,
From present pain, and future unknown harms,
  And baby sleeps.

OFFERTORIES FOR JUNE.

Sunday mornings—For General Charities.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 1124 Girard Street, from this date until further notice, every day during the week from 12 to 1 o'clock.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, first to see one of the clergy before fixing the time. Especially is this necessary during the Summer months, when the clergy in the city are comparatively few in number.

THE Baccalaureate Sermon, before the graduating class of the University of Pennsylvania, will be preached by the Rector in St. Stephen's Church, Sunday evening, June 3d, at 8 o'clock. A sufficient number of pews in the middle aisle will be reserved for the Class, and the other seats in the church will be free.

THE Rector having engaged to preach the Baccalaureate sermons at Lehigh University, at Trinity College, Hartford, and to make an address at the Semi-Centennial of Eldersridge Academy, will be absent from the city in the fulfillment of those duties Sundays, June 17th, June 24th, and July 1st.

THE Church Woman's Institute closed its sessions a few weeks earlier than was anticipated, partly owing to the unavoidable absence of some of the lecturers, and partly owing to the Summer scattering of the ladies. The sessions will be resumed in the Autumn, and timely noticed. The members will be delighted to learn that the Rev. Professor Fullerton of the University, has consented to take one of the Departments regularly. There will be room for perhaps a dozen more ladies in the Institute next Winter. Timely application should be made to the Secretary, Miss Sanders, 410 South Fifteenth street, or to the Rector.

WORK has been begun on the new Parish House. It is expected to be finished and ready for occupation by the first of October. It is intended also to re-upholster the pews in the church during the Summer. The new Memorial Reredos (a Mosaic in Venetian glass of the Last Supper) will also be put in its place over the altar. To do all this, it will probably be found necessary to close the church for a time. This time will be made as short as possible, and timely notice will be given of it.

In connection with the building of the Parish House, over the ground which seems to be a burying ground, it may be well to say, that no grave or vault will be in any way disturbed The vaults which are marked between the present Vestry-room and Tenth street, have never been used, and will be simply built over. The others, which have been occupied, will come in the Cloister between the Parish House and the church wall. The tiling of the cloister will be fitted about the flat stones which mark the vaults without changing them from their places.

HOW DID YOU KNOW?

"Ah, me," she said yesterday, after arriving at home from church, "I'm afraid most of the women at church this morning heard but little of the sermon." "Why not?" inquired her husband. "Because most of them spent the entire time looking at the clothes worn by other women." "How do you know they did that?" "Why, I kept my eye on them all through the services." She wondered why her husband laughed.

THE LORD'S PRAYER.

[The following beautiful composition was found in Charleston, S. C., during the war. It is printed on very heavy yellow satin, and is quite a literary curiosity.]

Thou to the mercy seat our souls dost gather,
To do our duty unto Thee, - - - - - - - Our Father,
To whom all praise, all honor should be given;
For Thou art the great God, - - - - who art in heaven,
Thou, by Thy wisdom, rul'st the world's whole frame
Forever, therefore, - - - - - Hallowed be Thy name
Let never more delays divide us from
Thy glorious grace, but let - - - - Thy kingdom come;
Let Thy commands opposed be by none,
But Thy good pleasure and - - - - Thy will be done,
And let our promptness to obey, be even
The very same - - - - - - in earth as 'tis in heaven
Then for our souls O Lord, we also pray,
Thou wouldst be pleased to - - - - - give us this day
The food of life, wherewith our souls are fed,
Sufficient raiment, and - - - - - - our daily bread;
With every needful thing do Thou relieve us,
And of Thy mercy, pity - - - - - - and forgive us
All our misdeeds, for Him whom Thou didst please
To make an offering for - - - - - - our trespasses,
And forasmuch, O Lord, as we believe
That Thou wilt pardon us - - - - - - as we forgive,
Let that love teach, wherewith Thou dost acquaint us,
To pardon all - - - - - those who trespass against us,
And though, sometimes Thou find'st we have forgot
This love for Thee, yet help - - - - - and lead us not Through soul or body's want, to desperation,
Nor let earth's gain drive us - - - - into temptation;
Let not the soul of any true believer
Fall in the time of trial - - - - - - - - but deliver,
Yea, save them from the malice of the devil,
And in both life and death, keep - - - - us from evil,
Thus pray we, Lord, for that of Thee, from whom
This may be had - - - - For Thine is the Kingdom,
This world is of Thy work, its wondrous story,
To Thee belongs - - - - - the power and the glory;
And all Thy wondrous works have ended never,
But will remain forever, and - - - - - - - forever,
Thus we poor creatures would confess again,
And thus would say eternally, - - - - - - - Amen.

HOW TO LIVE GRANDLY.

Life itself is not the boundary of a Christian man's usefulness. Being dead, yet he speaks. A good influence, once born, will last forever. Luther is not dead—he lives in the Protestantism of to-day. Raikes is not dead—he lives in every Sunday-school to-day. Knox is not dead—he lives in the religion of Scotland to-day. Latimer is not dead—he lives to-day in the words he spoke to Ridley. Wilberforce is not dead—he lives in every freedman to-day. It is impossible for us to live without responsibility—we are all emitting this current of electric influence. The way to do good is to be good. There must be light, then it will shine. A Christian goes about communicating good because he is good. It is said to-day that there are not nearly enough preachers. But every living Christian is a preacher in this power of the influence of his life. To-day the world's greatest need is more Christian men and Christian women. The world needs this Gospel of mercy. A worldly, fashion-loving, cowardly religion will never evangelize our fellow-sinners. Why stand ye here all the day idle? You have been called again and again. Every man may make his life, however humble, grand and beautiful by living, not to kill time, but to redeem the time. Make up your mine to do good; be in real earnest about it. Do not be discouraged by difficulties; they are things only to be overcome. Ask God to help you—look up to Him in prayer. True wisdom comes from above. Look at Jesus Christ; make Him your Lord and Master, your example and Saviour. He can make the feeblest of us strong. Young men, run the race of your Christian life looking unto Jesus.—Canon James Fleming.

LITTLE BAREFOOT.

Mr. Matthew Arnold was greatly struck by the democratic government of our reading-room when he was in Boston. He came in here one day and saw a little barefooted newsboy sitting in one of the best chairs of the reading-room, enjoying himself apparently for dear life. The great essayist was completely astounded. "Do you let barefooted boys into this reading-room?" he asked. "You would never see such a sight as that in Europe. I do not believe there is a reading-room in all Europe in which that boy, dressed as he is, would enter." Then Mr. Arnold went over to the boy, engaged him in conversation, and found that he was reading the "Life of Washington," and that he was a young gentleman of decidedly anti-British tendencies, and, for his age, remarkably well-informed.

Mr. Arnold remained talking with the youngster for some time, and after he came back to our desk the great Englishman said: "I do not think I have been so impressed with any thing else that I have seen since arriving in this country as I am now with meeting this barefooted boy in this reading-room. What a tribute to democratic institutions it is to say that instead of sending that boy out to wander alone in the streets, they permit him to come in here and excite his youthful imagination by reading such a book as the 'Life of Washington!' The reading of that one book may change the whole course of that boy's life, and may be the means of making him a useful, honorable, worthy citizen of this great country. It is, I tell you, a sight that impresses a European not accustomed to your democratic ways."

PRIDE VS. HUMILITY.

The opposite of pride is humility, "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." "To this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit and that trembleth at my word." These are the voices of the old law and of the new, sweet and clear and profitable unto men; hear ye them. And between the old and the new there, at the dividing of time, stands Christ's cross, uplifted on the hills to wither that deadly sin with one perpetual rebuke and to show us how to gain our victory.—Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix.

GOD'S PRESENCE.

The consideration of the fact that we are always in the presence of God, by day and night, in crowded cities, in the church of God or the abode of vice and sin; that everywhere and always the eye of our Heavenly Father is always upon us, is one that ought to make us guard our thoughts and actions that we may do nothing unworthy in His sight.

At a recent meeting of Baptist ministers, one of the number reported the case of an unfortunate man who, (to use the very words) "since renouncing the doctrine of eternal punishment, lost all joy, and withered away."

CONTRAST.

"Doctor," said a gentleman to an aged clergyman, "why does a little fault in a good man attract more attention than a great fault in a bad man?" "For the same reason, perhaps," answered the reverend doctor, "that a slight stain on white garments is more readily noticed than a larger stain on a colored one."

The theory that the system of Nature is under the control of a being who changes phenomena in compliance with the prayers of men, is, in my opinion, a perfectly legitimate one. It is a matter of experience that an earthly father, who is at the same time both wise and tender, listens to the requests of his children, and, if they do not ask amiss, takes pleasure in granting their requests. We know, also, that this compliance extends to the alteration, within certain limits, of the current of events on earth. With this suggestion, offered by our experience, it is no departure from scientific truth to place behind natural phenomena a universal Father, who, in answer to the prayers of His children, alters the currents of those phenomena. Thus far theology and science go hand in hand.—Professor Tyndall.

Your Service is so Strange to me. How can I ever Learn to Follow it?

A good Methodist, who used to come occasionally to an Episcopal church, once said, "I do not know how to use your Prayer Book, and so I am sometimes puzzled to know what is the right response to make, but I say "Amen." Perhaps I do not always get my 'Amen' in at the right place; but the prayers suit me, and so I say, "Amen."

Until you are familiar with the service, you can hardly do better than to follow our Methodist brother's example. A very little attention, however, will soon make you familiar with the service.

Here are a few simple points to bear in mind, with reference to postures: 1st. We stand when the minister begins the service, when we sing, when we read the psalms, when we recite the creed, and when we listen to the gospel for the day. 2d. We kneel during the prayers. 3d. We remain seated while the lessons from the Old and New Testaments are read, and during the epistle.

Much of the awkwardness which a stranger feels will be relieved if he will conform to these postures. Some remain seated throughout, and the changes which they see tend to confuse them. It makes a great difference if one will stand when the people stand, and kneel when they kneel, for these bodily attitudes are aids to devotion.

The next point to remember is that there are some parts of the service which are to be said by the whole congregation, such as the general confession, the Lord's Prayer, the responses, and the creed. There are other parts which are to be read by the minister only, the people listening, as, for example, the chapters from the Bible. There are some parts of the service you can learn very easily, such as the reading of the psalms and the saying of the litany. In the former the minister tells the day of the month, and allows time for all to turn to the place. In the litany the responses you are to make are printed in italics. Perhaps your greatest difficulty will be to find the collect, epistle, and gospel for the day; but a Church almanac will give you information about these, as well as about the Church days and seasons in general.

Some persons have found it helpful to make out a programme for the morning service somewhat like this: 1. Sentences and exhortation read by minister, the people all standing. 2. Prayers, the people kneeling. 3. First chant sung and psalms read, people standing. 4. Old Testament read, people seated. 5. Te Deum sung, standing. 6. New Testament lesson read, seated. 7. Another chant sung; creed said, standing. 8. Prayers, kneeling. 9. Hymn, standing. 10. Commandments, etc., kneeling. 11. Epistle, seated. 12. Gospel, standing.

One for the evening service will be shorter, thus: 1. Sentence and exhortation, standing. 2. Prayers, kneeling. 3. Psalms, standing. 4. First lesson, seated. 5. Chant, standing. 6. Second lesson, seated. 7. Chant and creed, standing. 8. Prayers, kneeling.

A little slip with these programmes copied on it and kept in your Prayer Book may furnish a guide to you in your first efforts at uniting in the worship. After awhile you will learn to follow it by what we call the rubrics. These are the directions in fine print at the headings of the different divisions; thus the first rubric is, "The minister shall begin the Morning Prayer," etc. (See "The Order for Daily Morning Prayer.")

Perhaps some friendly neighbor, who is better acquainted with the matter than you, may give you a few minutes' drill in the use of the Prayer Book; or an hour's study in private may make it tolerably clear to you. Be assured that it is far from being a difficult task, and in a very short time you will find yourself quite familiar with what now appears so strange to you.

There are some terms used, relating to our services, which you may not understand. Here are a few, with their explanations:

Lessons—the chapters of the Bible which are read.

Epistle—a portion of the Scriptures read immediately after the commandments.

Gospel—a selection from Scripture read after the epistle.

Collect—a short prayer.

Te Deum—an old hymn beginning, "We praise Thee, O God."

Venite—the first chant in the morning service.

Versicles—the little verses and responses used in the services, as "The Lord be with you." "And with thy spirit."

Gloria Patri—the doxology repeated and sung at different points, "Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost."

Gloria in Excelsis—the angelic hymn used in the Communion service, and sometimes at Morning and Evening Prayer, commencing, "Glory be to God on high."

Trisagion—another hymn in the Communion, commencing, "Therefore with angels and archangels."

Jubilate, Bonum est, etc.—chants having these old Latin headings, which are the equivalents of the first words in English.

Benedicite—the hymn used sometimes in place of the Te Deum.

The Litany—the prayers beginning, "O God the Father of heaven."

Gloria Tibi—the sentence, "Glory be to Thee, O Lord," sung before the gospel is read.

It is quite probable that, having gained some insight into the modes of worship, you will desire to learn as much as you can about their history and the meaning of their different parts. You will always find the clergy ready to instruct you, and you should not hesitate to ask an explanation of whatever you find it difficult to understand.—Rev. G. W. Shinn, D. D.

An exchange says "a large meeting of the Grace Church, St. Louis, Mo., was lately addressed by Mrs. Bishop Tuttle, &c." Apart from the English, which is enough to raise Matthew Arnold's ghost, we ask respectfully, is there a new order of clergy in the church? Mrs. Bishop Tuttle! Did our esteemed contemporary ever hear of the polite editor who wishes to notice the arrival of an English Bishop and family, and thus designated the party "il vescovo e la vescova e gli vescovoeuni?"

OFFERTORIES FOR JULY.

Sunday mornings—For General Charities.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 1124 Girard Street, from this date until further notice, every day during the week from 12 to 1 o'clock.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, first to see one of the clergy before fixing the time. Especially is this necessary during the Summer months, when the clergy in the city are comparatively few in number.

IT will be necessary for the church to be closed some portion of the Summer for the repairs to be made, due notice of which will be given from the church; but while the services will not be held as usual, it is to be remembered that the parish will not be left without the presence of one of the clergy, who can be found at the Parish House, as stated in the above notice.

THE Rev. Dr. Tidball, of St. Paul's Church, Camden, has kindly consented to take the department of New Testament Scripture in the Church Woman's Institute for the coming Winter. This is a sufficient assurance that the work will be well done and made interesting.

The Rev. Prof. Peters, who has had charge of this department, sailed from New York, last week, at the head of the Babylon Exploration Expedition. They go out prepared to work for a year or more in excavating the mounds which are all that remains of "Babylon the Great." Their "finds," which we all hope will be rich ones, will be deposited at the University here. The honor and responsibility of leading the expedition comes naturally to Professor Peters, as being the man in America best equipped in the scholarship necessary.

THOSE who were members of the Church Woman's Institute and attended the lectures of the Rev. Dr. Peters, will be especially interested in the article below concerning the expedition to Babylon, giving some idea of the importance of the work sought to be accomplished, with a sketch of the field of the proposed exploration:

The Babylonian expedition, to be undertaken under the auspices of the University of Pennsylvania, will develop, it is confidently expected by its projectors, many archæological treasures. The staff of explorers will consist of Rev. John P. Peters, Ph. D., Professor of the Old Testament Literature and Languages in the Department of Biblical Learning, in the Divinity School of the Protestant Episcopal Church, in Philadelphia, as Director; Dr. R. F. Harper, of Yale College, and Professor H. V. Hilprecht, of the University of Pennsylvania, as Assyriologists; Professor John Henry Haynes, who accompanied the Wolfe Expedition in 1885, of which Dr. Ward was head, as photographer; Mr. J. D. Prince, representing Columbia College, N. Y., who goes as assistant to the Director, devoting himself especially to the study of dialects; an architect, not yet named, and a physician, who is to be taken up at Beyroot.

Dr. Peters expects to leave this city on the 23d instant, but the expedition will not begin work on the field until the Autumn. The climate is such that no digging can be undertaken before the middle of November. In speaking of the contemplated trip, and particularly in a reply to a question as to "what was hoped to be accomplished?" Dr. Peters said: "The field is full of ruins of the most ancient cities of the world, with the possible exception of the Egyptian, only one or two of which have ever been explored, and those only in the very least degree. We know the names of fifty or sixty cities which existed there—cities of importance—and the sites of not one dozen of these have been determined. It will give some idea of how little work has been done when these cities have been left undermined. A large part of the country is unsurveyed, so that it is rather difficult to say that where we are to dig is such and such a spot, because people on the ground get new information, which oftentimes induces them to change the best devised plans they may have made. It is an actual fact of experience that the unknown mounds in that country have hitherto yielded the best results. The great ruins of Babylon have not been prolific of results in comparison with some mounds representing cities of which we had very little knowledge.

"The actual site of digging cannot be definitely stated before departure. It depends primarily upon the permission granted by the Turkish authorities, and secondarily upon information to be obtained on the spot, considerations of transportation, climate and the possibilities of obtaining labor. The region in which these ancient cities lie is comprised between the rivers Tigris and Euphrates, from about their point of junction to some forty miles north of Bagdad. The work done will be somewhere within those limits."

Referring to previous efforts in the same direction and the origin of the present movement, Dr. Peters said: "An expedition went out under the auspices of the American Archæological Institute in 1885, headed by Dr. William Hayes Ward, editor of The Independent, of New York. The money for this, $5000, was given by the late Miss Catherine L. Wolfe, and the expedition was known as the Wolfe expedition. The object was merely to look over the ground and prepare the way for the work. The present expedition is the outcome of that.

"The movement began with Mr. E. W. Clark, the banker, and Mr. C. H. Clark. It took shape in a meeting held at the residence of the Provost of the University, Dr. William Pepper, in November of last year. A number of prominent gentlemen in Philadelphia, among whom might be mentioned Mr. H. C. Lea, Mr. H. H. Houston, Mr. Joseph D. Potts, Mr. George W. Childs, Mr. Stewart Wood, Mr. W. W. Frazier and Mr. C. C. Harrison, subscribed towards such an expedition, and organized themselves into the Babylonian Exploration Fund.

"The University was offered anything that could be brought back, on condition of providing accommodations in a fire-proof building—a condition which was accepted—and the expedition was placed under the auspices of the University. The President of the committee in charge of the expedition is the Provost of the University.

"The expedition is probably the most completely equipped one that has ever gone to that region, and Philadelphia may justly feel pride in it. The length of time we shall be gone is as yet indefinite; the explorations may continue a year, and may extend over a series of years."—Public Ledger.

It is a blessed fact that so many of those who go away for the Summer are not forgetful of those little folks of the poor, who are kept within the crowded small streets of our great city, in the midst of the dreadful heat of this season. By their generous gifts means are provided, whereby these are cared for. In many ways, through different societies, are these children looked up, and given at least an opportunity to go out to the Park for the day, under the protecting care of proper persons, who do all they can to make the excursion a delight as well as a healthful outing. Better still, these children are taken in little groups into the country, and there placed in the homes of farmers and country folk to have a week or more of pure air, wholesome food and youthful action. The other day a little newsboy, who had been taken by one of the societies into the country for a week, in speaking of last Summer's pleasure, said: "I didn't do nothing but eat, and sleep, and play. They didn't make me work at all."

The benefits of these outings of the little poor are many. They greatly help in driving out disease from our midst, and in giving health and strength to those who so sorely are in need of them. Christianity has indeed cultivated the human heart, and kindliness opens the purse and gives the wherewithal that suffering and want may be driven away.

The Children's Country Week Association has done in years past a good work. It expects to begin its work this season, and the rich and the well-to-do can find a way, through this instrumentality, of reaching those who ought to be benefited.

A COUNTRY clergyman once said that city people did not leave their religion at home when they departed for the Summer, but that they took it in their trunks, carefully wrapped up and hidden away, that it might not be lost. Such a religion is of little worth. But there is a bright side to this yearly exodus of the people from their churches within the city. While it is coming to be an accepted fact that the parishes within our more wealthy neighborhoods find their practical agencies for necessary educational and benevolent work greatly hindered by the departure of their active workers, yet it is also true that the good influence of their efforts continue, and that after the vacation these earnest workers return and resume the labors that have already done so much. It is also true that scattered over the country are well appointed parishes, whose erection has been through the perseverance, the efforts and the means of these city brethren. Many a country parson can tell how he has been helped by the people who have come within the neighborhood to sojourn for the heated season. But, after all is said, there are various circles of church people. Those nearest the Master, filled with His spirit of love and self-sacrifice, striving to do good to all within their reach, and those further and further off, until we come to those in the outer distance, who bear the name of Christ, but do none of His works. The thoughtful, conscientious churchman will strive to be within the near circle. He will not forget to attend public worship. He will so order himself that the religion he confesses may not be put to shame, nor its advancement impaired by any negligence on his part.

It is not too much to expect of the people of St. Stephen's Church that they will not forsake the assembling of themselves with their Christian brethren in the reverent worship, either by the seaside, the mountain resort, or the country town.

THE LIGHT.

"Who was it?—the One who is in the darkness."—Victor Hugo.

Darkness at midday I saw, and within it
All without beauty, or if any beauty,
Then but as foil to the hateful and woeful;
Faces where pride had hardened the outlines;
Faces where pain stamped its image so dreadful;
Faces where shame dropped the eyes or emboldened;
Faces where care drew deep lines and so scarred them;
So at high noon this Darkness prevailed o'er the earth,
And I cried to High Heaven, "Are you there in your glory?
Are you there, oh! Creator with omniscient vision?"
And a voice said, "Not there alone, here, just beside them;
In their pride, in their pain, in their shame's deep abasement;
Be still, thou, and know I come e'er they call me!
Be still, thou, and know me,—the Light in the Darkness!

SELECTIONS.

TRUE TO HIS MASTER.

There is an incident which used to be current during war times, which will bear to be repeated. It affords a capital illustration that our Master will always bless the faithful servant who dares to do his duty.

"Last night," said a Christian soldier to his chaplain, "in my barrack, before going to bed, I knelt down and prayed, when suddenly my comrades raised a loud laugh, and began to throw boots and clothes at me." "Well," replied the chaplain, "suppose you defer your prayers till after you retire, and then silently lift up your heart to God."

Meeting him soon after, the chaplain said, "You took my advice, I suppose. How did it answer?" "Sir," replied the soldier, "I did take your advice for two or three evenings; but I began to think it looked like denying my Saviour; so I once more knelt down and prayed as at first." "What followed?' "Why, sir, not one of them laughs now. The whole fifteen now kneel down too and I pray with them."—Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler.

WELL DONE.

It is recorded of a Chinese Emperor that, upon being apprised of his enemies having raised an insurrection in one of the distant provinces, he said to his officers, "Come, follow me, and we will quickly destroy them."

He marched forward, and the rebels submitted upon his approach. All now thought he would take the most signal revenge, but were surprised to see the captives treated with mildness and humanity. "O!" said the first minister, "is this the manner in which you fulfill your promise? Your word was given that your enemies should be destroyed."

"I promised to destroy my enemies. I have fulfilled my word; for, see, they are enemies no longer. I have made friends of them."

TOUCHY PEOPLE.

Perhaps nothing detracts more from a person's own comfort in this world than being over-sensitive. The touchy person is always fancying that people intend to slight her; and quite often she thinks herself wounded and hurt when nothing is hurt but her vanity. Cultivate any thing else girls; but as you value your peace of mind and the happiness of your neighbors, and the contentment and enjoyment of your own homes, do not be foolishly sensitive.

MONOGRAMS.

What is a monogram? Oh, it is your initials twisted together so that nobody can read them, and then stamped on your note paper. Most people would be astonished to be told that these interlaced letters are not monograms at all. They may be polygrams—but monograms they are not. The word monogram signifies a single letter or symbol (monos, single, gramma, letter).

Joined letters are of higher antiquity, the triple tau or T, which among the Hebrews, was the sign of security, has been handed down from age to age. The Israelites bore this symbol upon their banners. The Greeks called it the Letter of Life because prisoners and culprits upon whom this mark was placed had their lives spared.

It is also found in heraldry, in the form of St. Anthony's cross. About the time of Alexander I, of Macedon, (500 B. C.) the practice of stamping monograms on coins first came into vogue.

The practice descended to the Etruscans and Romans and through them to all the nations of civilized Europe. Ducange, in his Glossarium, gives a plate of monograms used by emperors, popes, etc., from the time of Hadrian (beginning of the second century) downwards.

The Chrismon, of Constantine, was the first two letters of the word Christos, and was of much more ancient date. It appears carved on tombs in the catacombs of Rome, and was used to symbolize the Egyptian deity, Osiris, and in the middle ages it was added to signatures at the foot of deeds.

Charlemange was the first to sign documents with a monogram made by means of a thin perforated plate, as in stencilling, or a stamp with the characters engraved in relief. Pope Leo III incorporated the Chrismon with his name.

HE WAS ONLY A DOG.

The New York Herald tells the following touching story: He was a brindle cur, and had nothing about him to excite admiration. But as he stood shivering under the "L" station at Fifty-ninth Street and Third Avenue his loneliness and entire misery drew a sympathetic glance now and then from a passer-by. He did not appear to be a city dog; he seemed too shy and ignorant of city ways for that, and he looked anxiously in the face of each new-comer as if seeking a friend. But none came. He tried to get on a surface car, but the conductor yelled and a passenger kicked at him; so he sneaked into the lee of one of the iron posts, and shivered more miserably than before.

Two little girls came along, and stopped a moment to speak to the "poor doggie," who attempted a little wag of the tail in response. Then they patted him and spoke kindly to him, and so cheered the poor waif that he whisked about them and whined for joy. A heavy, lumbersome brewery wagon bore down on them. With the rattle overhead and the babel of the noise about them the two little tots did not hear the rapidly nearing danger, nor hear the shout that went out to them from the sidewalk. But the homeless dog did. Springing between the children and the advancing horses he barked, his shrill treble rising high above the clamor of the street. It was all done in a moment. The wagon rolled on; the children, spellbound with fear, stood still; the dog, in a last desperate effort to repay the kindness shown him, hurled himself at the advancing horses. One child is brushed aside and the other clutched by a friendly hand as the horses swerve at the dog's attack. The brewery wagon went on its way, rocking and swaying, and two tear-dimmed little faces peered out from the sidewalk at a little heap on the stones of the street. Their defender had given his life in grateful remembrance of their kindness. He was only a dog; he knew no better.

OFFERINGS IN JULY.

For General Charities, ... $56 80

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 1124 Girard Street, from this date until further notice, every day during the week from 12 to 1 o'clock.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, first to see one of the clergy before fixing the time. Especially is this necessary during the Summer months, when the clergy in the city are comparatively few in number.

THE church has been closed temporarily on account of the building and repairs now going forward. The closing will be for the shortest time possible. It is to be re-upholstered throughout, and this is a somewhat tedious job. Due notice will be given in the Saturday papers before it is opened.

THE new Parish House is coming on very well. It now begins to show what it will be like. Those actively engaged in parish work regard it with even more interest than they would a house to live in. With better conveniences we hope to increase the efficiency of the work in proportion.

THE following sermon was preached by the Rector before the graduating class of Trinity College, at their late commencement:

"The chief priests and the scribes sought to lay hands on Him, but they feared the people."—Luke 20: 19.

That is to say: while our Lord was upon earth a certain set among the professional and educated classes bitterly opposed Him, were ready to suppress Him, but were impotent to do Him damage because he was so firmly entrenched with the people that they dared not move.

This has been the attitude of a certain portion of the educated world toward Him ever since. They have "sought to lay hands upon Him, but they have been afraid of the people." As education has increased, of course the number of those who are of this way of thinking has multiplied in proportion. It is a question just now whether it is not increasing out of proportion.

The characteristic feature of our time is the increase of knowledge. It comes in like a flood. The movement is so rapid that the science of last year is obsolete to-day. It is difficult to keep it corrected up to date. The circle is widening like the ringed wave from a stone dropped into a broad lake. The nineteenth century will be remembered in the earth as the age of the Great Induction. When an intelligent man sets about to call the roll of the sciences now extant he is amazed to find the number of new names on the list, names uncoined a century ago because the things were nonexistent Biology, Sociology, Economics—the very names were not in the curriculum of your fathers. Of the sciences known to them little more than the titles remain the same. Your chemistry is the "New Chemistry;" your geology is the "New Geology." The wonderful accumulation of new facts has made it necessary to rewrite the old theories. For two or three generations the educated world has been busy building experiment stations and furnishing laboratories. It has stooped patiently, scalpel in hand, over the corpse, dragged up the secrets of life from the bottom of the deep sea, shivered on mountain tops listening to the spirits of the air, sat unwearied to watch the habits and catch the thoughts of brutes, tracked the wild beast to his lair, and the wild man to his hut, walked, microscope in hand, amid the pestilence to spy out its secret venom, has tortured old Earth until she has given up her secrets, and swept the heavens to see "old Boötes lead his leash and Sagittarius draw his bow in the South." It has explored the long and tortuous path along which the race has trod, formulated the laws by which men live together now, and plotted the course for future development.

Applied science has kept pace with pure knowledge. The world at this last end of our century is more widely different from the world as it was in 1800, than that world was from the world of Augustus Cæsar, or even that of Abraham! Augustus was housed as well, was served as well, traveled as fast, read as much, and could command as skilled a surgeon in his need as could George Washington. It is speaking within bounds to say that as great advance has been made in the achievement of human knowledge and in the practical appliances of that knowledge within the century now drawing to an end as in the whole of the historic time which precedes it.

In this inrushing tide of knowledge, which has swept over the world like a flood, which continues to pour in faster than it can be classified and arranged, which overturns old canons of art, old postulates of science, old prescriptions of society, what is to become of religion? "Whan a flood of facts, ascertained or suspected, comes pouring in upon us, with a multitude of others in prospect, all believers in religion are roused to consider their bearing, both for the honor of God, and from tenderness for those many souls who in consequence of the confident tone of the schools of secular knowledge are in danger of being led away."

When I speak of religion I mean Christianity. For all practical purposes there is no other, nor has been for many a generation. Others, so called, are but survivals. For the study of "comparative religion" these are valuable and interesting, but in sober fact there is but one. One cannot go into the market place and purchase a "faith;" he cannot go into a museum and choose one from the many there preserved. There is only one now living. The choice is Christianity or nothing. The great facts of it are stated in that Symbol you joined just now in repeating. I have in mind the clear, compact, well formulated, well understood Gospel of Jesus of Nazareth: His matchless life and unparalleled death, the absolute facts of His resurrection; His ascension into heaven, and the belief of His coming again to judge the quick and the dead.

What is to be the effect upon this of the sweep and rush of human knowledge? "Men shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." "And when He cometh will He find faith upon the earth?"

My thesis is that the faith is absolutely secure; and my further purpose to point out why I think it so to be.

But it would be idle to think that it shall remain unchanged. If that were possible it would simply show that the faith was a dead thing not worth preserving. If religion has to do with all of life it must be plastic as life itself is. The Holy Spirit can follow wherever the spirit of man can go, except into unclean places, and uncleanness is not scientific. Human nature is not constructed with bulkheads. No single compartment can be kept permanently separate from all the others. Their contents flow together and color each other. The religious faculty is secure only whilst it has free interplay with all the others. If the religion of Jesus cannot endure the changes incident to God's providential leading of the race it will be because it itself is not from God.

If the Pope had been quite sure of himself he would not have launched his bull against the comet, for he would have known that he and the comet were both under the same law.

The advance of human knowledge has compelled the Christian world to abandon many things which they had mistakenly supposed to be religious truth. It was neither discreditable to take these positions nor to abandon them. Both proceedings have been perfectly honest and necessary. The process began longer ago than most people think. If Mr. Darwin has done this in one domain, Copernicus did it long before him in another. The acceptance of that discovery changed the way of thinking of the religious world. It seemed to dethrone man from his high estate. When it plucked old Earth from the center of the system and thrust her away into an obscure corner of space, changed the sun from a satellite to a king, man had to follow the fortunes of the planet upon which he lived. It was no longer so easy to believe that the "Sun stood still over Ajalon and the Moon in Gibeon." When men esteemed themselves to be the most important tenants of the most conspicuous mansion in God's creation it was easy to believe that the stars in their courses should fight against the enemies of Jehovah, but when they found themselves upon a little world in the outskirts of the heavenly city they believed that science had robbed them of their God. They learned better things of God long ago.

Whole systems of so-called "theology" have met the same fortune. They were well rounded, symmetrical, consistent,—and have been abandoned! But the truth they contained has not been lost. The old wine has always found new bottles waiting. Decantation is a process frequently necessary.

Geology has compelled the re-reading of Genesis. Historical study has compelled a revised chronology. Biology has given new forms in which to state the Christian truth of regeneration. Chemistry has brought into clearer light the profound teaching of St. Paul concerning the need of "a spiritual body."

This process is still going on, and always will go on pari passu with the advance of knowledge. It goes on because Christianity is a living force. If it were a mechanical force operating ab extra it could be adjusted once for all. If it were a set of charms working capriciously no adjustment would ever be possible. But it is a life!

The Pharisee and the Scribe, that is to say the ecclesiastic and the doctrinaire, are always angered and ready to lay their hands upon it.

This feeling of alienation between systematic religion and systematic knowledge is very widespread, and very intense. The dislike in many quarters to the supernatural religion of Jesus is a personal and professional animosity.

Why is it, that we who profess and call ourselves Christians rest so securely concerning the future of our Faith? Is there no danger of its violent overthrow?—of its contemptuous abandonment by the whole educated world?—of its being so modified, so transformed as not to be any longer recognizable?—so changed into a thing of shreds and patches as to be no longer worth contending for?

Some men who are accounted wise hope for this; some who are unquestionably good fear it,—meanwhile we stand unmoved,—and why?

1. First let me point out two reasons which are not the ones which give us confidence. For one, I do not find my sense of security to issue from confidence in the prowess of the so-called "champions" of the faith. There has been no end of books of "evidences." Apologetics form a literature. These all have their place,—a place which arbitrary belief cannot fill. They fortify and steady, and render available a faith where it is already present, but it is open to grave doubt whether they have ever been able to check or even seriously to retard the progress of unbelief.

Mr. John Stuart Mill declared that the study of evidences had done as much as anything to confirm him in his unbelief of Christianity. He was as familiar with the arguments of Bishop Butler as Professor Huxley is with those of Mr. Gladstone. The result has been much the same in either case? With all their skill and valor the intellectual champions of religion are always exposed to the suspicion of tilting in an enclosed field instead of fighting a la mort in the open. Their conclusions are usually in their postulates. They set out to make an arrangement for that which they have already accepted. It is conclusive to those who are already convinced, and to few besides. Their opponents are suspiciously like men in buckram, whose numbers increase in proportion as the champion feels his own sense of valor swelling. It is wise and well to be able to give a reason for the faith which is one, but in point of fact the faith precedes the reason for it.

2. Nor, in the second place, do I find much ground of confidence in the achievements of the volunteer "reconciliationists." If there is any one phrase of which the educated world has grown weary it is that which states, "the conflict between Religion and Science." Assuming this conflict to be real there have not been wanting those who profess to be able to show a reconciliation by which the opponents shall be able to sit down as brothers. Not very much, I fear, has come from their well meant labors. They come sometimes from the one camp, and sometimes from the other, and offer terms of peace or compromise. But the difficulty always is that they are not accredited by their principals to speak for them. No sooner is a protocol accepted by the side to whom it is submitted than it is disavowed by the side from which it purported to come. About the surest way for a believer to discredit himself with his fellows is for him to formulate and set forth what seem to him to be fitting terms of peace with the other side. Nor have any of the overtures coming from the side of science been subscribed to by the authorities.

The conflict is a real one, but it is a conflict between two kinds of men, and not between two kinds of truth.

It is neither because religion has more powerful champions than knowledge, nor because there are men ready and able to include and harmonize them both, that we rest in such confidence in the future of our faith.

What is it then?

I wish I could state it a thousand times more clearly, and emphasize it a thousand times more strongly than I can. In a word it is this: Christianity is lodged with the people. It is entrenched. It has proved itself. It has so rooted itself in the heart of humanity that it is idle for any man or set of men to think of uprooting it. The suffrage of the mass has been given and cannot be recalled. It is a present fact. It has become part of the furniture of the race. It is in the blood and brains, in the soul and conscience of the people. No specialized class of men could uproot it if they wished. They may ignore it if they see fit but it remains all the same a fact which all must sooner or later reckon with.

"Why don't you ignore Christianity and go on with the good work?" said one of his radical hearers to Mr. Bradlaugh. "You cannot ignore St. Paul's nor Westminster, nor the Bible Society; they are too big," replied Mr. Bradlaugh. An educated man cannot ignore Christianity—it is too big! Nor can he oppose it with hopefulness, for the law of inertia is against him. The constant forces are on the side of God.

Christianity does not make its appeal primarily to wisdom. "Ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called." They cannot be, in the nature of the case.

Nor does it make its appeal even to "common sense." The common sense of a whole generation may fail it.

Bishop Butler, walking the garden with his chaplain one day, turned to him abruptly and asked: "Why not?—why may not a generation go mad like an individual does?"

Its appeal is to common necessity. It appeals to the average man, and to the average necessities of the race. These recognize the appeal and respond to it. It was not by accident that the common people heard Him gladly while the rulers and scribes held themselves superciliously aloof. The Jews to this day bear the burden of an immortal infamy because, in the judgment of the race, they were false to their kind in their dealing with the Son of Man. The people were more humane. "In that hour Jesus rejoiced in spirit and said, 'I thank Thee, O Father, Lord of Heaven and earth, that Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent and hast revealed them unto babes'"

And again:

"Verily I say unto you that a rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom of Heaven."

Of course he shall enter hardly! The "Kingdom of Heaven" is adjusted for the average citizen. Any one who for any reason steps outside the column on either hand, whether searching for a wisdom or for a wealth which dehumanizes him, finds only a blank wall, where the head of the column finds the open gate of the Kingdom.

"If our Gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost": that is, to them that are strayed away on either hand out of the sound of the multitudinous voices of toiling humanity.

The power of the Gospel is in this, that it answers to the constant necessities of ordinary humanity. The imperiousness of these necessities may be trusted to secure a hearing for religion. These do not change. Education does not remove them. Wealth does not satiate them. The inflow of knowledge does not stifle them.

"By the sweat of thy brow shall thou earn thy bread" is just as true of you gentlemen, as of the man who sweeps the street. The voice of the invisible monitor who declares thou shalt do this, or thou shalt not, is just as much a part of your equipment as it was of your parents' or will be of your children's. The stern compulsion of living is upon you as upon another. Death is just as much a mystery—even more—to you as it is to the veriest Philistine. Your education in no wise exempts you from the weariness and heavy load of life.

The old title of college learning was given it by a true instinct. It was called "The Humanities!" Except as learning makes men less human, there is no fear of its making them less religious. The tragedy of life may always be trusted to keep the mass of men Christian. The speculations of specialists, and the arguments of irresponsible doctrinaires, are as impotent to take religion from the people as they would be to "loose the sweet influences of Pleiades." Let me assure you that life is tragic. Men do not remain long in the dancing mood. The scenes in your own drama will open before you one by one. Their sternness may be trusted to keep you in your senses, to keep you human, and therefore to keep you in relation with Him who was so human that the instinct of the race has fastened upon Him the name of the "Son of Man!" The Gospel of Jesus Christ is rooted in the tragedy of humane life.

The story is told that in the unsettled days of French revolution that ambitious philosopher, Laravelere-Lapeaux anticipated Comte, and invented a new religion. He elaborated it into symmetrical detail. He provided it with a creed, a philosophy, a Scripture, and a ritual. It was greatly superior to any that had gone before. But he complained one day to Talleyrand that the people would have none of it. The ex-bishop looked at him with mocking sympathy and said, "That's very strange indeed. I cannot imagine what you have left undone to get it accepted, unless," he added, "you might get yourself crucified and rise again the third day?"

So long as there remain in the world the pangs of parturition, the painful riddle of life, and the throes of dissolution, Christianity will remain the haven into which all will put, under the stress of life.

This profound humaneness of the Gospel will also account for another thing which may have perplexed your faith.

You have been told that the Church has always, when she could, resented and opposed the advance of science; that she has stood before the advance of knowledge, and tried impotently, but earnestly, to sweep it back as one who should try to sweep back the tides with a broom; that when she has found her feeble bulwarks of sand undermined and flooded she has retired scolding to higher ground.

You have heard of Galileo and of Mr. Darwin. You have heard Goethe, the "son of light," rail at Luther, the apostle of righteousness. You have seen Mr. Matthew Arnold drive his polished spear into the stolid flesh of ecclesiastical obscuration. You have heard that "Faith" and "Lucidity" are mutually destructive.

OFFERTORIES FOR SEPTEMBER.

For General Charities.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 1124 Girard Street, from this date until further notice, every day during the week from 12 to 1 o'clock.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, first to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

THE services in the church will be resumed on Sunday, Sep. 9th. Morning Prayer and sermon at 11 o'clock, and Evening Prayer at 5 o'clock.

The repairs to the church interior and the re-upholstering of the pews and doors will then have been completed.

THE Parish House is progressing satisfactorily and looks well along side of the church. It will be ready for use, it is expected, by the time the benevolent and other work of the Parish resume operations.

THE Parish Day School will be re-opened on Monday, Sept. 3d, at the usual time and place.

THE Sunday School will begin its session on the first Sunday in October.

Public notice will be given announcing the re-opening of the Church Woman's Institute.

THE CHURCH WOMAN'S INSTITUTE.

The second year of the Church Woman's Institute will open with a lecture, at time to be announced later by public notice.

There will be, as heretofore, a lecture in each of the four courses, once a month. and the lectures will be delivered Tuesday afternoons at 3.30 o'clock. A selected library of works of reference will be placed in the Parish House, for the use of members of the Institute. Lessons and courses of reading supplementary to the lectures will be announced for each month in the PARISH NEWS.

The membership is not at all confined to our Parish; and ladies wishing to join any of the classes will please address, Miss Annie Sanders, Secretary, 410 S. 15th Street.

The lecturers for the current year are:

In the course on Church Theology, the Rev. Prof. Fullerton, and the Rev. Dr. Perry.

In the course on Church History, the Rev. Dr. McConnell.

In the course on the Bible, the Rev. Dr. Tidball.

In the course on Liturgics, the Rev. Prof. Garrison, of the Divinity School.

The Rev. Dr. Huntington has found it impossible to give a course of lectures in this second year, but students will be glad to hear that so able and interesting a lecturer as Prof. Garrison has been secured in his place.

THE following sermon was preached by the Rector before the graduating class of Trinity College, at their late commencement:

"The chief priests and the scribes sought to lay hands on Him, but they feared the people."—Luke 20: 19.

The Church has more than once stood in the way of the premature adoption of the obiter dicta of science. She will probably do so again. The reason is plain. Science possesses intellect alone. She asks but one question, "Is this thing true?" Religion possesses both intellect and heart. She asks not only "Is it true?" but also "Is it good?" Science has no moral responsibility. Christianity thinks first of all the people. When she has opposed the hasty acceptance of a scientific dogma it has been because she looks more broadly afield and acts under a higher moral sense than does her adversary.

She prevents so far as she is able, the disturbance of faith until the time has come to disturb it. She has the weal of the people at heart, and she knows that something more than knowledge is needful for their welfare. She does not apply the Monroe doctrine to the continent of truth. She is not willing that any foreigner shall set foot there until she first knows who he is, why he comes, and how he will bear himself. In the main and with all her mistakes, her action has been right and beneficent, and has always been taken under a high and noble sense of responsibility.

There is a present perilous tendency, Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Lowell being the witnesses, among the educated to withdraw themselves from the every-day interests of men. They hold themselves aloof from the great questions which agitate the common mind. They rate politics a distraction which disturbs the serene temper of science. The specialist works in a cloister. The literary man consorts with his own ilk. Philanthropy they relegate to the clergy and the district visitor. Commerce is for the Philistines. The question of work and wages is for Mr. Powderly. How to bring food and hunger together is a question for Mr. Henry George. The town meeting is not the arena for the graduate. The student, to be successful, must "confine himself to the dative case," or hold a steadfast chase after a particular bug. Nothing but evil can come from this,—evil to the scholar in mind and spirit, evil to the people in life and in temper.

It is with the spiritual evil to the scholar that I am now concerned. He should be quick to resent this suggestion of separateness, claiming humanity for his tribe as strenuously as Shylock did.

"Hath not a scholar eyes? Hath not a scholar hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions?—fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same Winter and Summer as a Christian is? If you prick us do we not bleed? If you tickle us do we not laugh? If you poison us do we not die?"

Mr. Carlyle drew away in gloomy grandeur from a world—"mostly fools," as he thought, shut himself into his own most disagreeable companionship and left the rest to go their way, while he flung after them taunts and scorning. The world went its way and he went his. It carried with it its well tried religion and left him stranded, stripped of his mother's faith and deserted by his father's God!

The gentle Mr. Emerson declared: "'Tis a queer world, and the only humor proper to it seems quiet astonishment. Others laugh, weep, buy, sell or proselyte; I admire!" It would be difficult to conceive an attitude farther removed from that of Jesus Christ. "When he saw the multitude he was moved with pity, having compassion on them as a sheep without a shepherd."

If Mr. Emerson had looked upon men with the same spirit would he have been so offended at the saying, "This is my body broken—this is my blood shed for you"?

Mr. Darwin in the last days of his life declared with playful sadness that his mind had come to be a sort of machine into which he poured facts and ground out principles. He had lost the vision of God, as he had lost the eye for beauty and the ear for music.

Who can shut his eyes to the unspeakable loss which befell these men? Not the sulphurous brilliancy of the one, nor the sweetness and light of another, nor the calm and noble dignity of a third can atone for it. They turned aside from the road to Nineveh along which every man is bidden to walk, and were swallowed by the monster that lurks in solitary places.

Believe me, if you ever lose your faith in God it will be because you have lost your sympathy with men.

When the popular mind is deeply moved it expresses itself religiously. The people sing hymns when they march to war, and say prayers before a battle.

While you are in the same thought with them, you will be in the same faith with them.

Much you have learned in the university, and much more you will learn from your brethren in the craft of which you are about to be made free. But there are some things, and they of the gravest import which the humblest Bible reader or the poorest priest could better teach you. They know where the faith is entrenched. They have gone in and out among the people and they know that the Child is there. The wise men are they who will find Him. The appeal of Christ is not to the academy or to the athenæum, it is to the agora.

Humanity has taken Him to its heart.

If you stay where men are, if you bear upon your souls an honest solicitude for your fellows, if you feed the hungry, clothe the naked, visit the fatherless, walk brotherly, live as a son of man, you will stay conscious of your birthright as a son of God. You will be a "worker together with Him,"—and as a fellow-craftsman you will come to know the Master Workman.

Dr. Naville, whose name cannot be unknown to many of you, records this experiment:

In his classes were a dozen students of medicine in an advanced course, all of whom were avowed disbelievers in Christianity. Their teacher's arguments only stimulated their dialectic ingenuity in reply. At last he said to them: "Gentlemen, we will stake the result of this argument, if you please, upon a single crucial test. In my private practice here in Paris, I find many poor and worthy families who need alms, but who need advice and guidance still more. If each of you will give me his word of honor to take the responsibility for a single family which I will assign to him for one year, I will cease all argument. If they are out of work, try to find it for them; if their sons are wayward, and their daughters wanton, labor with them as honorable men." They accepted his proposal. When the year was ended there was no further need of argument. Two of the young men had grown weary of the responsibility and abandoned it. The rest had discovered that "the secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him."

There is a section of the educated world, I know, which is both perplexed and irritated when religious faith asserts itself. This feeling is most common among the original investigators in physical science. It obtains least frequently among the students of "the Humanities." Those who feel this way find their "sweet reasonableness" confronted by what seems to them to be a blind emotion. They are amazed at seeing the world act unreasonably. It is controlled by impulses which they feel but slightly and to which they entrust no authority.

"Whereunto shall I liken the men of this generation? and to what are they like? They are like unto children sitting in the market place, and calling one to another, and saying: We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced; we have mourned unto you and ye have not wept!"

No: the dominant influences are Christian. And I say this having in mind the apparent alienation of the working masses from the church, as well as the alleged quarrel between Religion and Learning. But I set over against this the unqualified fact that the Christian Church is growing not only absolutely, but relatively more rapidly than ever since Pentecostal days. This nineteenth century is the first one in twelve hundred years in which her membership has doubled itself! In 1800 there was one communicant to every sixteen people in the United States; to-day there there is one in every four! Christianity is not a spent force. When the illustrious author of the "Life of Cæsar" visited America, his coming and going were unnoticed save by the members of the literary craft. When the no greater author of the "Life of Christ" came he was welcomed with acclaim. The people thronged to hear his words, and the President but voiced the popular mind when he bade him welcome. Why was this, but because the man who identifies himself with Jesus is born to higher honor than he who embarks in the boat which "bears Cæsar and his fortunes"?

The Christianity of the people adjusts itself slowly to new philosophies. Sometimes its timid women are smitten with fear and cry out "They have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid Him." But they are presently reassured by the familiar voice, and answer back "Rabboni!"

So we stand unmoved.

We turn away from the obscurantist priest, who blinks uncomfortably in the light of modern knowledge, and mumbles his prayers for the return of his fancied mediæval simplicity.

We listen with impatience to the secularist scribe when he dogmatizes of positivism and leaves his hungry brother unfed.

We turn to the people.

Remember Lessing's parable:

A certain king of a great realm built for himself a fair palace. Justice sat in its courts, the people were fed at its gates and rejoiced in its beauty. But in time a foolish strife came to be carried on by architects concerning the accuracy of its plan. While the controversy raged, a cry arose one night that the palace was on fire! The architects ran hither and thither, plans in hand. One declared that the fire was in this place, and could only be reached by demolishing an outlying wing. Another protested he had always taught that the plan was faulty, and would some day expose the whole building to disaster.

Meanwhile the inmates frightened and perplexed, ran about, not well knowing what to do.

Presently, however, it was discovered that the palace was not on fire at all. The watchman had seen the walls and battlements illumined by the nothern lights, and thought it was a conflagration!

The city of our God is in no peril. Knowledge only illuminates, it does not destroy, because the foundations of that city are eternal.

So long as the heavens declare the glory of God, while the firmament showeth His handiwork, while day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge, the unsophisticated language of men will continue to say—

"Our Father who art in Heaven."

SELECTED.

THE general of the Jesuits reports 2,500 missionaries under the direction of that order.

IN the province of Travancore, India, Christianity has so far displaced heathenism that one man out of every five ranges himself among the followers of Christ.

THE Rev. John McKim, who is now in this country on vacation, writes from Nashotah, under date of May 21st, as follows; "In a letter received last week from Mr. Tanaka, one of my old catechists, he says that 'the Osaka city council had decided to release from taxation the property of Christian churches. They took this action from a conviction that Christianity is doing a great deal for the welfare of Japan.' This is but one of the many straws indicating the current of public opinion in Japan on religious questions."

SOLEMN FACTS.

In almost every foreign field the laborers are very few in comparison with the harvest to be gathered. It is especially the case in Africa, China and Japan. On the coast of the dark continent there are many missionaries; but there are vast interior regions without a single herald of the Cross. Take the Soudan, for instance. The term Soudan has been used at different times and by different writers to describe widely different regions. At present the Egyptian Soudan, the region once administered by General Gordon, is generally designated the Soudan; but in its widest application the term may be taken as meaning the whole of the interior portion of Africa which lies between the fifth and and twenty-fourth parallels, and is 2,000 miles long and over 1,000 wide. This vast region contains from 70,000,000 to 100,000,000 people, mostly proselytized by Mohammedans in the northern part of the belt, but heathen in the southern portion About 100 different languages are spoken in this immense area. In no part of this vast field are there any Christian missionaries, unless two young men lately sent there from England by way of the Congo have already reached the southern portion of it.

No one has traveled more extensively in China than Mr. J. Hudson Taylor, the director of the China Inland Mission. He says that 1,000 cities and countless towns in this populous empire are without missionaries. There is no part of China that has been so well supplied with Christian laborers as is the city of Shanghai and the adjacent country. Yet Mrs. Muirhead, of Shanghai, after a tour through the country district, writes: "In that vast plain around Shanghai, as in every province of China, while many large cities have been visited by the Christian missionary there are hamlets and solitary homesteads innumerable as yet unreached by the Word of Salvation; and by this people's dreary, hopeless lives, by disease so rampant and death so rapid, by these thick-sown nameless graves, by the peace and happiness so plainly seen on the faces of the few already walking in the Light; above all, by His cross and passion who died that all might live unto Him, we would most earnestly plead with any of His people in Christian lands whose way the Lord might open, 'Come over and help us.'"

The Rev. J. H. Ballagh, who has been connected with the missionary work in Japan almost from the time that country was opened to foreign residents, in writing of his last journey from Sendai to Yokohama, speaks of traveling over miles of unbroken heathenism. He estimates that of the 37,000,000 of people in Japan, not more than 1,000,000 have heard the Gospel.

These are very solemn facts for Christian people to contemplate.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, from this date until further notice, every day during the week from 11 to 12 o'clock.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, first to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

THE CHURCH WOMAN'S INSTITUTE.

The Church Woman's Institute will open October 9th, at 3.30 o'clock, in the transept of St. Stephen's Church, as the Parish Building is still incomplete. The schedule of dates for the year is as follows:—

COURSE I.	COURSE II.	COURSE III.	COURSE IV.
Ch. Theology, Lecturers, Rev. Prof. Fullerton. Rev. Dr. Perry.	The Bible, Lecturer, Rev. Dr. Tidball.	The Prayer-Book, Lecturer, Rev. Prof. Garrison.	Ch. History, Lecturer, Rev. Dr. McConnell.
Dates.	Dates.	Dates.	Dates.
Oct. 9.	Oct. 16.	Oct. 23.	Oct. 30.
Nov. 6.	Nov. 13.	Nov. 20.	Nov. 27.
Dec. 4.	Dec. 11.	Dec. 18.	Jan. 1.
Jan. 8.	Jan. 15.	Jan. 22.	Jan. 29.
Feb. 5.	Feb. 12.	Feb. 19.	Feb. 26.
Mar. 5.	Mar. 12.	Mar. 19.	Mar. 26.
Ap. 2.	Ap. 9.	Ap. 16.	Ap. 23.
Ap. 30.	May 7.	May 14.	May 21.

The first lecture will be delivered by Prof. Fullerton:—subject, "God, the Father;" Lesson assigned; Youge's Exposition of the Apostles' Creed, Art. I. Courses of reading will be suggested at the lecture. The remaining lectures of the month, will be:—

Oct. 16th. Rev. Dr. Tidball, "Christ in the New Testament. I. Preliminary."
Oct. 23d. Rev. Prof. Garrison, "The Holy Communion, its structure and purport."
Oct. 30th. Rev. Dr. McConnell, "The Papacy."

Courses of reading will be assigned at the lectures, and methods of study suggested.

The Lectures, after the first one, will be delivered in the new Guild Hall of St. Stephen's, which will afford a pleasant and convenient place of meeting.

There are vacancies in the class for, perhaps, a dozen more ladies. Those wishing to join, will please send their names to the Rector of St. Stephen's Church, or to the Secretary, Miss Anne N. Sanders, St. Stephen's Parish House, or attend one of the early Lectures and give in their names, then and there.

The members can either simply hear the Lectures, or in addition, may prepare and submit examination papers as they choose.

THE New Parish House was to have been completed and ready for occupation October 1st. Owing, however, to the delays which seem to be a part of all building operations, it is not quite ready. It will be in a week or so. The Parish will then have what has long been needed, a convenient place to do its work in. There is not as much room as we would like, but there is more than we have ever had, and all than we can have. There is good work to be done all about us, in the city and in the church. The only thing is to do what we can, and leave the rest undone. God does not require impossibilities.

The church has been re-upholstered, and put in thorough repair outside and in. The new building is handsome, dignified and convenient. The machinery is ready to our hand. The thing needed now is willing hearts and willing hands to run it.

THE daily services in the church will be commenced Monday, October 9th. Morning Prayer every day at 11 o'clock, and Evening Prayer, Fridays, at 5 o'clock.

THE Sunday-school will resume its sessions Sunday, October 7th, at 9.45 o'clock.

THE PAN-ANGLICAN CONFERENCE.

During the Summer there met in England a very noteworthy assembly. It was composed of Bishops, of what is ordinarily called the "Episcopal Church." There were present the Archbishop of Canterbury, with 34 Bishops of his Province; the Archbishop of York, with 12 Bishops of his Province; the Archbishop of Armagh, with 5 Bishops; the Archbishop of Dublin, with 6 Bishops; the Primus of Scotland, with 6 Bishops; 29 Bishops from the United States, 9 Bishops from Canada, 5 from the East Indies, 7 from the West Indies, 4 from Australia, 4 from the South Pacific Islands, 6 from South Africa, 4 from British America, the Bishops of Columbia, (wherever that may be), Niger, Falkland Islands, Honolulu, Gibralter, Newfoundland, Caledonia, New Westminster, North China, Singapore, Sierra Leone, Central Africa, Japan and Jerusalem; 145 in all. They met to consider the condition, the prospects and the needs of our Church.

The first thing which strikes one in reading of such a meeting is the geograph-distribution of the communion to which they belong. The names of their Dioceses would be a study of geography. They represented, in some sort, our Church, which, more than any other, represents the English speaking race in its wide dispersion—a dispersion in which two strong cords bind them into one religious whole, the English Bible, and the English Prayer Book! The council was one which exercises no authority. It could not make laws, settle disputed questions of Doctrine or Discipline, issue edicts or levy taxes. Its members were not chosen as representatives by any body. They met at the invitation of the Archbishop of Canterbury, to confer upon such subjects as are of general moment to them all, to the Church at large, and to the world at large. After a month's deliberation they issued an Encyclical Letter, covering the following subjects and giving their judgment upon them substantially as follows:

1. Temperance. They recognize the grave evil and danger, social, personal and political, which issues from drunkenness, the besetting sin of the Anglo-Saxon race; that multiform means have, of late years, been used to cure the evil, which means have been, and are to a degree, successful; that more strenuous efforts to the same are needed by Christian people; that, at the same time, the Church cannot teach that the use of intoxicating liquors is intrinsically a sin, and that no other liquid than wine may lawfully be used in the Holy Communion.

2. Purity. They call attention to the companion sin of drunkenness—impurity; that Christian society should be awake to its inroads, its defilement, its sin and its danger.

3. Sanctity of Marriage. That this is the centre of social morality, and that the increasing frequency of divorce is a continual menace to the public welfare; that Polygamy is nowhere to be condoned; but that in heathen countries polygamous wives, being otherwise fit, should not be denied baptism on account of their condition, which they cannot control; that the only ground of divorce which the Church can recognize is adultery, and that in cases of divorce for this cause only the innocent one may re-marry, and this they lay down as the law of Christ.

4. Socialism. They recognize the social unrest which is abroad; that it has its root largely in the palpable inequalities of passion; that the problem of how the evil is to be redressed is most difficult; that it cannot be either by oppression or by violence; that it is the bounden duty of Christian men, both clergy and laymen, to study the situation with a view to find relief; that relief must ultimately come along the line of Christ's precept: "As ye would that other men should do unto you, even so do ye unto them."

5. Definite Teaching of the Faith. That Christian people should know what they believe, and why they believe it; that the clergy should teach the people, and the people teach their children the same; that, for us, our standards of Doctrine are the Bible, the Prayer Book, and (within limits) the Thirty-nine Articles.

6. Home Reunion; (i. e., Church Unity). They declare that we should have closer relations than we now have with other Protestant Churches; (recognizing that any attempt at an understanding with Rome is practically impossible now); that the present broken attitude of Protestantism is deplorable; that the candid attention of other churches be asked to the basis of reunion set out by the American House of Bishops in 1886.

The above is in substance the result of their deliberations. It must be agreed that, from a religious point of view, they have selected those questions which are of paramount importance. Their recommendations must come, if not with authority, at any rate with very great weight. They speak for the communion which contains the overwhelming majority of the Christian people who use the English tongue. Our Church, too, has fairly won a reputation for wisdom, discretion, sound judgment and broad mindedness concerning secular questions. She has paid a good deal for this reputation, and it is of value. This ought to lead those who come within the sound of her voice to consider and do the things thus weightily recommended.

SELECTIONS

HEROIC CHRISTIAN SERVICE.

In a sermon to the students of Cornell University, on the words, "Ye are the light of the world," Bishop Huntington referred as follows to some notably modern illustrations of heroic Christian service: "You must be struck with dismay, as I am, at the growth of great iniquities, the recklessness of material ambition, the rivalries of gain, the excess of pleasure, the terrible prevalence of intemperance and lust, the prostitution of law, the abuses of the press, the frighful disproportion of waste and charity in wealth. Where, my brother students, do we take our place? On which side do our uncompromising will and our unflinching courage and our cheerful self-sacrifice tell?

"As I took my text I laid down a famous biography—that of an intellectual English girl, passing in her early years with honor the most advanced mathematical examinations by the papers of Oxford and Cambridge, rapidly mastering many sciences and many languages; a type of our eager modern culture, too, in this, that while these conquests for awhile satisfied her mind, they left her heart hungry with unbelief; yet gradually, rationally confronting all the problems fairly on either side, she rose to a clear vision of the truth as it is in Christ crucified and risen, brought her splendid learning an offering at His altar, and in South Africa, with the heroic love of a missionary to the natives, died 'in the confidence of a certain faith.' Far northward, a volunteer of the Cross from Scotland, vigorous in every attribute of manliness, makes his solitary way into the hiding places of that Ethiopian idolatry with the burden of its salvation on his conscience, and now the Kingdom of Heaven is pressing in after him to seek two hundred million souls. Just before he died there, he wrote in his journal, 'My Jesus, my King, my Life, my All! Accept me, and grant that before this year ends I may finish my task!' Later still, all over England, on a week-day morning throngs of worshipers of every class, from the university and the palace to the digger in the ground, gave humble and hearty thanks to God for their grandest soldier, dead, who in those far quarters of the earth fought, commanded, suffered, prayed, and made peace, in the Name of the Lord of Hosts. These are not signs, my friends, of a spent force, a decaying worship, or an eclipsed faith."—Spirit of Missions.

MOOLU.

Professor Drummond, in a most interesting work on Africa, cites as the best evidence of the value of missions in Africa, the miracles wrought in the transformation of the character of the heathen natives. Here is his account of one of the converts with whom he had much to do: "I never saw Moolu do an inconsistent thing. He could neither read nor write; he knew only some dozen words of English; until seven years ago he had never seen a white man; but I could trust him with everything I had. He was not 'pious;' he was neither bright nor clever; he was a commonplace black; but he did his duty and never told a lie. The first night of our camp, after all had gone to rest, I remember being roused by a low talking. I looked out of my tent; a flood of moonlight lit up the forest; and there kneeling upon the ground, was a little group of natives, and Moolu in the centre conducting evening prayers. Every night afterward this service was repeated, no matter how long the march was nor how tired the men. I make no comment. But this I will say, Moolu's life gave him the right to do it. Mission reports are often said to be valueless; they are less so than anti-mission reports. I believe in missions for one thing, because I believe in Moolu.

THE INDIAN PROBLEM.

A good deal of ingenious ciphering has been done in endeavoring to solve this problem, and, withal, there has been a good deal of honest and efficient work. The government has largely increased its appropriations from year to year, the Dawes bill and other valuable legislation have been secured, so that steps looking towards the citizenship of the Indian have been attained. Appropriations have been granted to aid him in farming and other industrial pursuits, and it is not unlikely that in a short time provision will be made for the education in the common English branches of every Indian child.

But all this is not sufficient. The Indian may have lands and citizenship and an English education, and yet, if he has no strong impulse towards civilization, no motive in his heart impelling him to be an industrious, self-supporting citizen—in short, if he has not a new heart looking to a new life as a citizen and a man, he will become a vagabond on the land granted him, and a sceptic in the school in which he is taught. The next few years will constitute a crisis in the rapidly changing condition of the Indian, and it is precisely at this point where the vilal element of the Christian life must be infused into his character. To the Christian public, all other questions subordinate themselves to this, and this needs, not speculation, but hard work; legislation cannot do it, the Church must; time will not do it, Christian teaching and example alone can. The vernacular question, so much agitated recently, is important only as it may hinder this practical work.

The Indian problem is not perpetual. The Indian must soon be merged into the American, and whether this shall be for good or ill, the Church must decide, and decide speedily.—American Missionary.

EXPENSIVE TRIFLES.

A number of very well meaning women have lately taken to an attempt to build the much needed educational institutions of the church with postage stamps. They only ask you for ten cents, and to make two copies of their appeal and send to two others, who are requested to do likewise up to a certain number. Any refusal is to be notified by the return of the circular to headquarters. A writer in the CHURCHMAN lately pointed out that the scheme is too expensive for the results gained. Each ten cents costs, besides paper and envelopes, four cents for collection, and each person complying with the request spends not ten cents but sixteen. We have just received some of these requests, and respectfully decline to have anything whatever to do with the scheme.

EARNESTNESS.

A meeting was held in London, at which Bishop Walsham How was present, he about leaving East London for his new post as the first Bishop of Wakefield. Much was said in his honor by the Bishop of London, to which Bishop How made reply: "I shall try to forget his words, but I shall never forget his kindness." But in his speech about the work in East London one short sentence was striking. East London is the abode of the poor, and when a man there, he said, presents himself for confirmation, "he means it."

Great are the evils of poverty, great are the blessings of poverty;. it depends upon the man. If a man settles down in ignorance and hardness and drink, fearful the evils. If the man rises from his poverty into the riches of Christ's Gospel, it is glorious. So Bishop How said when one of the poor denizens of East London gets into the higher thoughts and makes confession of Christ, "he means it." And we, who were confirmed weeks ago, or months ago, or years ago—we meant it, did we not?—Southern Churchman.

THE Times of India affirms that in the Island of Formosa the natives regard murder as necessary, for unless they kill some people their own families will not recover from sickness. Young men also, according to custom, must kill some one before they have a right to obtain a wife.

THREE Christian Japanese have recently sailed from San Francisco for the Sandwich Islands, to labor amongst their countrymen there, who number about 5,000. They are some of the fruits of the Methodist Japanese mission in San Francisco.

LORD DUFFERIN recognizes the danger of purely secular instruction in India, and has issued a circular on the subject. He states that he would be glad to see a large increase of state-aided schools under directly religious management.

THE attempt of the Turkish authorities to force intolerant restrictions upon Christian education has been so earnestly resisted, by the diplomatic representatives and others, that it has been finally withdrawn.

THE Queen of Madagascar has appealed to the European governments for protection from the liquor traffic as carried on by European traders on the coast, and which is fearfully demoralizing her subjects.

OFFERTORIES FOR NOVEMBER.

Third Sunday.—Female Benevolent Society.
Fourth Sunday.—Colored Missions.
Other Sundays.—General Charities.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, from this date until further notice, every day during the week from 11 to 12 o'clock.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, first to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

Nov. 6th. Prof. Fullerton, Subject: "God the Son."

Nov. 13th. Dr. Tidball, Subject: "Christ in the Synoptical Gospels."

Nov. 20th. (NO LECTURE, on account of Dr. Garrison's necessary absence from the city.)

Nov. 27th. Dr. McConnell, Subject: "The Beginnings of Reformation."

Courses of reading will be announced at the time the lectures are delivered.

WHEN you remove to or withdraw from a parish, always present or ask for your letter of transfer. Every communicant is required by the law of the Church to have one under these circumstances.

THE Sunday-school Teachers' Meetings, for the study of the lesson, will be resumed on Friday, November 9th, at 3.30 P. M., in the Vestry Room adjoining the Church.

IT IS with pleasure we mention the gift of an embossed silk Banner, made and presented by one of the teachers, to the Sunday-school of our parish, to be carried each month by the class of boys that has been most regular in attendance during the previous month.

Now that our Parish House is complete and ready for use, there will be resumed the regular weekly social gathering of the Mothers' Meeting, in charge of Miss Stoddard, Teacher of the Woman's Bible Class.

THE Daily Services, at 11 o'clock, have been resumed. The musical portion of the service is led by the children of the Parish Day School as in former years. These services are meant for all the people. Surely it is not too much to hope that many more of our parishioners will avail themselves of these short daily services during the week.

THE NEW PARISH HOUSE is done at last. After many delays, some avoidable and some unavoidable, the workmen have at last got out. It seems to be the general opinion that the building is an improvement to the premises in appearance, which was not expected, as well as in convenience, which was expected.

The "Benevolent Society," the "Missionary Box Committee," the "Altar Society," the "St. Andrew's Brotherhood," the "Embroidery Class," the "Garment Committee," the "Mothers' Meetings," &c., can now have a comfortable, convenient and attractive place of meeting. Let the people pray God that the work done may be honest, godly, thorough and effective; and while they are waiting for their prayer to be answered, let them take hold and do the work.

AT THE LAST DIOCESAN CONVENTION a Committee was appointed to report a scheme to divide up the territory of the Diocese, by parishes, into small missionary districts, with fixed and determinate lines. Of course, this does not mean that people will be expected to attend the Church which is nearest them and in whose territory they may live. (It would be bad for St. Stephen's if that were the rule.) Our Church is organized on the voluntary system from top to bottom. But what it contemplates is to assign to each parish a certain definite district, for the proper cultivation of which that parish may be held responsible. When those lines shall be established, and the district assigned to us,—(say, from Ninth to Broad, and from Walnut to Arch Sts.,) then it will become the duty of our people to find out a little more than we now know about the people who live in this neighborhood. Of course, those who are found to have Church relationships already, we have nothing to do with. But it will be found that in our district there are a good many hundred people who have very little more acquaintance with the Christian Church than they have with Buddhism, and very much less than they have with Building Associations, Social Clubs, and Knights of Labor. Of course, we cannot but regard this as a great loss—to them. It is a thing to be thankful for that we can go to them without the suspicion of being supposed to want anything from them. "We seek not yours, but you." But the duty to bring them and the Church together, by some means, is one which will presently be so plain that we cannot blink it. Then the Rector will ask a good many men and women to help him in this business.

THE ATTENDANCE AT THE HOLY COMMUNION in this parish is not satisfactory. We report 900 communicants. The average attendance is about 200. The whole number reported is likely to mislead. It includes all those who have at any time been received, and who are not known to the Rector to have withdrawn or removed. It includes many in delicate health, who seldom are able to attend services; many who are absent from the city, abroad, or temporarily out of reach; many who come to the Sacrament with regularity, but at long intervals. Nevertheless, after all deductions are made, it leaves a list so large, that those actually present ought to be much more numerous than they are.

Why are they not present? This question is not easy to answer. To say that it is from disloyalty or indifference to the Master would be both uncharitable and untrue. Still, when the Minister sees the congregation streaming out of the Church after the Prayers and Sermon, leaving the Sacrament behind them as a thing with which they have no concern, he is filled with a feeling of despair. He feels that either he has lost his reason, or the majority of the people have.

The Rite which seems to him so pre-eminently fitting, well adapted, capable of religious efficacy, seems to them to be an idle thing. To be sure, many of those who turn away are not legally qualified for participation. The Sacrament is a family affair, and they have not been registered as members in accordance with the family regulations. They are not baptized, or they have not been confirmed. But this only removes the question a step further back—why have they not been?

We are just now concerned, however, about those who have fulfilled the conditions precedent, and yet do not at all, or but seldom, claim their rights.

There must be some grave misconception about it all. The Holy Communion is celebrated in this parish on the first Sunday in each month, and on all Festivals and Saints' days. This rule has been in use here for many years, and after mature consideration there does not seem to be any good reason to change it in the matter of frequency. This rule is believed to be to edification. In the nature of the case the frequency must be settled by an arbitrary rule. It may be at Christmas and Easter alone; it may be every Sunday, or every day, or half a dozen times a day. Our rule is believed to be wiser than that of those who have it less often or more often than we. It brings, in the course of the year, more people to the Lord's Table, and it better preserves the proportion meant to be constant between the Word, Sacraments and Prayers.

Still many turn away who ought not, and why?

Are not the two most frequent difficulties these:

(1) A morbid and untrue notion about the personal fitness for coming: the notion that only a life of exalted holiness, or a profound religious experience will make one a welcome guest at the Lord's Table? To be sure the invitation which the Church instructs the Priest to give is couched in these words: "Ye who do truly and earnestly repent you of your sins, and are in love and charity with your neighbor, and intend to lead a new life according to the commandments of God, draw near."

These qualifications are neither difficult nor rare. They are possessed by the overwhelming majority of every ordinary congregation.

"But there must be something more than these simple duties!" The answer is, No, there is not. The Church here tries to speak the hospitality of the Lord of the Feast, and believes that in inviting those so described she voices His wish.

Is it not better to accept the reasonableness and candor of Christ and His Church than to create in one's own mind a set of fanciful conditions, and then remain away because these conditions cannot be fulfilled?

(2) Another difficulty is one of an entirely different kind. It is preoccupation, business, hurry. "The service has already been an hour and a quarter long when the people withdraw, and that is as long a strain as ought to be put upon people." It is far more than ought to be expected of any one who is not interested in what he is about. But if any one has any interest at all in the thing for which he comes to God's House—(and we must at least suppose that those who come have common sense)—the time is not long. An Opera will take three hours. The time is not the question.

If in any case time is a consideration let him for that occasion come after the prayers or the sermon are over. But it is necessary to arrange accordingly. A very little forethought will do it. Hardly any family is so rigid in its domestic routine that twenty minutes one way or the other by one of its members will make any difference.

Will the people of this parish kindly read and ponder the second of the forms in the Prayer Book for warning a celebration of the Lord's Supper, following the Rubric:—

"Or, in case he shall see the People negligent to come to the Holy Communion," &c.

Those who seriously read it, may hold themselves excused from their duties for that day.

EXPLANATION OF THE CARD.

The Roman Numerals, in the first column on the left, are the parts of the Liturgy called "St. James."

The Numerals on the left of the other column indicate the parts of St. James to which they severally correspond in the other Liturgies.

The Words in SMALL CAPITALS indicate that the Holy Spirit is distinctly prayed to, or sought for, in these parts of the office.

The black —— lines indicate parts which do not need special mention, and where the word is in Black, the Holy Spirit is not prayed for, or to, in that portion of the office.

The Bearing of the card on the Subject of the Liturgy, is

1. The Holy Spirit enters into EVERY IMPORTANT part of every Ancient Liturgy.
2. The Holy Spirit enters into the really VITAL parts of ours, but only there.
3. The Holy Spirit has no place in any part of the Roman Canon of the Mass, except the mere mention of Him in the Doxologies, etc.

The Work of the Holy Ghost is transferred wholly to the Priest, who embodies Christ in His person, because he says (as being Christ), "This is MY Body."

Thus the Priest displaces and takes the place of the Holy Ghost in the Roman Mass.

THE CHURCH WOMAN'S INSTITUTE.

The lectures for the month of December will be as follows:

Dec. 4th. Course on the Prayer Book, by the Rev. Prof. Garrison, "The Communion Office, as far as Creed."

Dec. 11th. Course on the Bible, by the Rev. Dr. Tidball, "Christ in the Gospel according to St. John."

Dec. 18th. Course on the Prayer Book, by the Rev. Prof. Garrison, "The Nicene Creed, and to the SURSUM CORDA."

The lecture for December 25th will be omitted. On January 1st, Dr. McConnell will lecture in the course on Church History, on "The Continental Reformation."

OWING to the confusion consequent upon building, the Garment Committee was unable to resume its duties as early this season as hoped for, but it is now permanently located in the Parish School Building, rear of St. Stephen's Church, entrance on Chant Street, where one of the Committee will be in attendance every Monday morning, from 10.30 A. M. until 12.30 M., to receive all articles sent.

Our first year closed the 30th of November, and on and after December the 1st the Committee will be in readiness to receive articles for the year 1889, closing its season the last day of November:

Monday, Dec. 3d, Mrs. Muirheid.
" " 10th, " Arnold.
" " 17th, " Lundy.
" " 31st, Miss Cleemann.

In the next issue of the PARISH NEWS will be given the 1st Annual Report of the Committee, with details of the number of members, and number of articles of clothing received and how distributed.

Is there any good reason why the men of the congregation should be deprived of membership in this good work? We need all kinds of underwear for men, too old and infirm to work, and many outside grments that have been partially worn could be usefully appropriated.

THERE is constant call for relief to the poor in the city, to the inmates of children's hospitals and asylums, for missionary boxes, etc., which relief must take the form of clothing. Money will not supply all the necessities, and it is often not well or safe to give money.

A Society of Ladies has been in operation for some time in our parish, which Society, under the auspices of the Female Benevolent Society, works to this end.

The method is one which has been tried and proved very efficient. It originated with Lady Wolverton in England, and has been transplanted to this country and this city.

It is simply a Society of Ladies, each one of which, as the condition of membership, promises to send two garments, for men, women or children, to the Committee in charge, in each year.

These garments will be distributed to the deserving poor, either by the Clergy of the parish, by the Clergy of other parishes in whose hands they may be placed, or by the officers of hospitals and asylums.

If you, or any member of your household, are ready to promise two garments a year, for men, women or children, large or small, will you please send your name and address and the garments to "The Garment Committee," St. Stephen's Parish House?

Very sincerely yours,

Mrs. Arnold,
Mrs. Muirheid,
Mrs. Lundy,
Miss Cleemann,
Mrs. Stratton,
Miss Stoddard,
Miss Bell,
} Committee of Female Benevolent Society.

January 4th, 1888.

The Ladies of the Parish House Committee will hold the Annual Christmas Sale at the new Parish House, 10th Street, above Chestnut, on Thursday, and Friday, ~~April 12 and 13~~th, from eleven to four o'clock.

The articles on sale will be, as heretofore, the handiwork of gentlewomen of restricted means, and will include fancy articles, needlework, preserves, jellies, cakes, etc. All expense is borne by the Committee, so that the full amount received is realized by the depositors.

The ladies in charge beg the hearty co-operation of the congregation and their friends, in the carrying on of this good work:

Mrs. Arrison,	Mrs Roberts,
Miss Cleemann,	Mrs. Rowland,
Mrs. Griffith,	Mrs. Hockley.

The opening of the Parish House, Monday evening, was a very pleasant event. The various rooms were lighted and thrown open to examination. The ladies and gentlemen of the House Committee acted as a Committee of Reception, and the attendance of our people was good, considering the bad weather. Only one opinion was heard concerning the new house, and that was one of unqualified praise. For beauty, convenience and comfort, in the provision for church work, there is little now to be desired.

But by no means the least valuable thing about the evening was the opportunity it gave the Rector to shake hands with his people, and for them to say how do you do to one another. There are very many who are recognized from the chancel as regular attendants upon our services, some of them having been so for years; but who they were, where they came from, and where they went to after service, the Rector knew not. It is a great pleasure to have established relations with some of them, at any rate. It will not be for lack of wish on his part if the acquaintance does not grow more intimate.

Besides that, it is no small thing for the members of the same parish to have a chance once in a way to recognize each other. Of course a church is not a social club. People form their social relationships, where and with whom they see fit. It may happen that the members of their church are also members of their set, or it may not. And for the legitimate persons of the church it makes no difference. People do not go to church to be civil to each other, but to worship God. One may know the man who kneels in the next pew, or he may not, but for the business in hand it is difficult to see what difference it makes. Still, when people are thrown together, even temporarily, curiosity alone must lead them to look at one another. The consciousness of being engaged in a common enterprise cannot help giving them something of an interest in one another. In this case they belong not only to the same great fraternity of Christians, but to the same Chapter of that Fraternity which calls itself St. Stephen's. For all that concerns the Order they cannot help being interested in each other.

That this is the case was very pleasantly and conclusively shown at the Parish House opening.

Not the least of the pleasure was afforded by Mr. Wood and the members of the choir, in the fitting and exquisite music with which the evening closed.

SELECTED.

A CHRISTMAS STORY.

"You had better take it, Mr. Vail," said the jeweler, turning the scarf-pin so as to catch the light. "It is just from Rome. Nothing like it in the city. What are thirty dollars to you? Treat yourself to a Christmas gift."

Mr. Vail was a young man, rich enough to look upon thirty dollars as a trifle. The pin was quaint and delicate in workmanship; but he had more pins than he could use, and it suddenly occurred to him that thirty dollars might not seem a trifle to others not so fortunate as himself.

He shook his head and left the shop. When he reached his office he took out thirty dollars from his pocketbook, and laid them on his desk. "I will see if there is anything better than a pin to be bought with them on Christmas-eve," he thought.

There was a knock at the door. Jane, the washer-woman, a thin, gaunt German, the embodiment of neatness and thrift, came in and handed him her bill.

As he took out the money to pay her, he remembered how prompt and faithful she had been throughout the year; there had been darning and mending, too, not included in her duty. She was a hard, coarse woman, not prepossessing; but surely he owed her some human kindness at this gracious season.

He added a ten-dollar bill to her wages, with a "Merry Christmas, Jane."

Her face reddened and her eyes filled. Then she said, slowly, "I had joost enough money to pay my rent. Nothing more. Dis is—more. De children zall haf big fire, und roast goose, und ein tree mit de Christchild upon. I dank you kindly, sir. You haf made it light in my heart," touching her breast, and courtesying solemnly.

When she was gone, Mr. Vail found that his eyes were moist. He sat down and took counsel with himself a minute, and then called his office boy. He knew nothing of Dan, beyond the fact that he was from the country, a quiet, gentle boy, with a smile which he fancied must be like his mother's.

"Dan," he said, "you have two days holiday at Christmas. Here are ten dollars to make a noise. Lay it out in fire-crackers, if you will."

Dan stared at the note.

"Fire-crackers? No, I'll go—go home!" his whole puny body trembling with delight. "I have not seen my mother for two years. You have given her a merry Christmas, sir."

The remaining ten dollars Mr. Vail enclosed in a letter to a man he knew, who, with a yearly salary of three hundred dollars, and a wife and three children, was preaching the gospel in a mining camp in Arizona. His wife and children helped him to teach decency and honesty and faith in God, to men and women who had well-nigh forgotten them. This money came into their poor home like a gift from heaven. Every penny of it brought some comfort or happiness into their lives When Mr. Vail heard how it had been spent, he was convinced that never before had ten dollars accomplished so much.

The jeweler beckoned him into the shop one day. "I have that little pearl still," he said.

"No. I cannot afford to put thirty dollars in my cravat," he said.

ALL TRUE HISTORY A RECORD OF FACTS.

"It has been the custom for some time past, and very properly, to talk of the necessity of confining history to facts. Nothing can be more just; but it would be almost absurd to suppose that there are no facts but such as are material and visible. There are moral facts—hidden facts—which are no less real than battles, wars, and the public acts of government. Besides these individual facts, each of which has its proper name, there are others of a general nature, without a name, of which it is impossible to say that they happened in such a year or on such a day, and which it is impossible to confine within any precise limits, but which are yet just as much facts as the battles and public acts of which we have spoken. That very portion, indeed, which we are accustomed to hear called the Philosophy of History—which consists in showing the relation of events with each other, the chain which connects them, the causes and effects of events—this is history just as much as the description of battles and all the exterior events which it recounts. Facts of this kind are undoubtedly more difficult to unravel; the historian is more liable to deceive himself respecting them; it requires more skill to place them distinctly before the reader. But this difficulty does not alter their nature. They still continue, not a whit the less for all this, to form an essential part of history.

"Civilization is just one of these kind of facts. It is so general in its nature that it can scarcely be seized; so complicated that it can scarcely be unraveled; so hidden as scarcely to be discernible. The difficulty of describing it, of recounting its history, is apparent and acknowledged, but its existence, its worthiness to be described and to be recounted, is not less certain and manifest.

"Then, respecting civilization, what a number of problems remain to be solved. It may be asked—it is even now disputed—whether civilization be a good or an evil. One party decries it as teeming with mischief to man, while another lauds it as the means by which he will attain to his highest dignity and excellence. Again, it is asked whether this fact is universal; whether there is a general civilization of the whole human race - a course for humanity to run—a destiny for it to accomplish; whether nations have not transmitted from age to age something to their successors which is never lost, but which grows and continues as a common stock, and will be carried on to the end of human things. For my part, I feel assured that human nature has such a destiny; that a general civilization pervades the human race; that in every epoch it augments, and that consequently there is a universal history of civilization to be written. Nor have I any hesitation in asserting that this history is the most noble, the most interesting of any, and that it comprehends every other."—Francois Guizot.

PRAYER FOR UNITY.

O God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, our only Saviour, the Prince of Peace, give us grace seriously to lay to heart the great dangers we are in by our unhappy divisions. Take away all hatred and prejudice, and whatever else may hinder us from godly union and concord; that, as there is but one Body and one Spirit, and one Hope of our calling; one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism, one God and Father of us all, so we may henceforth be all of one heart, and one soul, united in one holy bond of truth and peace, of faith and charity, and may with one mind and one mouth glorify Thee, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

SEVEN QUESTIONS

If you meet with an atheist do not let him entangle you into the discussion of side issues. As to many points which he raises you must learn to make the rabbi's answer: "I do not know." But ask him these seven questions: (1) Ask him, "What did matter come from? Can a dead thing create itself?" (2) Ask him, "Where did motion come from?" (3) Ask him, "Where does life come from save the finger-tip of Omnipotence?" (4) Ask him, "Whence come the exquisite order and design of nature? If one told you that millions of printer's types should fortuitously shape themselves into the Divine Comedy of Dante or the plays of Shakespeare would you not think him a madman?" (5) Ask him, "Whence came consciousness?" (6) Ask him, "Who gave you free will?" (7) Ask him. "Whence came conscience?" He who says there is no God in the face of these questions talks simply stupendous nonsense. This, then, is one of the foundations—one of the things which cannot be shaken and will remain. From this belief in God follows the belief in God's providence, the belief that we are His people and the sheep of His pasture.—Archdeacon Farrar.

ESPRIT DE CORPS.

This French expression is employed to convey the idea which it usually suggests, because no phrase in our language gives the same thought so tersely. It refers to the honorable pride felt by soldiers in the excellence, the honor, valor, triumphs and grandeur—of their army. It is inspired by association for maintaining common principles and for vanquishing common foes, and it is so strong that it makes the army to be like one man in purpose and in action.

In this same Esprit de Corps we discern an ideal sentiment for every parish. The people should be one in all matters relating to the prosperity of that organization. We speak not now of those paramount thoughts of God's glory and the salvation of souls; and yet inasmuch as the parish represents both of these great ideas, it is worthy of all the consideration which is here enjoined. Its members should therefore be royally devoted to its welfare. They should have an honest pride in the issue of all its undertakings. They should be devoted to its services, its societies, and its enterprises. When once a plan has been finally adopted, they should unite with a will to make the scheme a success. Even though they may be able to offer criticisms (and who cannot do so if he wishes?) they should give all their available help for the successful result of every parochial endeavor. They may not be able to prevent success, but they can violate the loyal spirit of unity which is both desirable and becoming to a Christian congregarion.

We may harm this Esprit de Corps by any form of opposition—by obstructiveness, a desire to have our own way, a captious disposition, an unreasoning dislike of change. But the more common fault is sheer indifference. There are many who do not care how affairs may go. If the service is well rendered, and the music is good, and the sermons are excellent, they will take no thought for the success of the parish It matters not to them whether or not the parish prospers and does its great work well.

Every parishioner should be zealously interested in the church that ministers to him. He should do what he can to promote its advancement. He must not try to defeat the general will by his antagonism or to freeze it by his inattention. Probably he can do neither. He should have a laudable pride in the parish, a care for its work, and a helping hand for its various practical operations.

This is the Esprit de Corps which we uphold as worthy of the regard of all our people.

OFFERTORIES FOR JANUARY.

January 20.—Third Sunday, For Foreign Missions.
Other Sundays, For General Charities.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week from 11 to 12 o'clock.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, first to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

WHEN you remove to or withdraw from a parish, always present or ask for your letter of transfer. Every communicant is required by the law of the Church to have one under these circumstances.

THE Sunday-school Teachers' Meetings, for the study of the lesson, are on Fridays, 3.45 P. M., in the Vestry Room adjoining the Church.

THE CHURCH WOMAN'S INSTITUTE.

The lectures for the month of January will be as follows:

A NOBLE MEMORIAL.

Twenty years or more ago, the celebrated Dr. Salvati, of Venice, set about the task of restoring the well nigh lost art of making Glass Mosaic.

After infinite labor and endless discouragements and failures, in the face of criticism and apathy, he succeeded in re-establishing the true theory of the art, and, what was still more difficult, in training workmen to execute the delicate handicraft necessary to bring it to good effect.

Almost his first triumph was made possible by the liberality and taste of a conspicuous representative of the Church of England. He was given the task to make in glass mosaic a large picture of the Last Supper, from cartoons made in England, to be placed as a reredos over the altar in Westminster Abbey.

That piece of work has been seen and admired by many an American as he has walked in wonder among the glories of that shrine of the world's worthies.

Many months ago some members of this Parish, while they stood before it in admiration, conceived the idea of placing such a memorial to their own dead in St. Stephen's Church. The task was entrusted by them to Holiday, of London, who had already placed the memorial window in the north transept. The cartoons for a picture of the Last Supper, after the one in the Abbey, were drawn by him. Then, instead of being sent to Italy for execution, as had always been done before, the work was done under his own eye, partly by Salvati's workmen, and partly by his own and Mrs. Holiday's artistic hands.

Thus, the noble work, which will presently be unveiled in our church, has the honor to be at once the first of its kind done in England, and the first brought to America.

As will be seen, the picture depends for figure, light, shade, and expression upon the arrangement an infinite number of little pieces of Venetian glass, set in the back-ground of cement.

The picture is worthy of the place. Nothing but the best attainable should adorn God's altar. The same spirit of devotion which led the wise men of old to bring Gold, Frankincense, and Myrrh, the choicest of gifts, to lay at the feet of the Christ, has always moved wise men and women to bring of their best "to make the place of His feet glorious."

We rejoice, therefore, that God has put it into the hearts of the family of the late Mrs. James Magee to erect this memorial to their mother in Paradise.

The following letter from the artist will be found of interest as pointing out some of the features of the work, as well as the opinions of those who have the right to have an opinion upon such a subject:

OAK TREE HOUSE, BRANCH HILL,
Hampstead, N. W., July 6, 1888.

Dear ———

Your mosaic is at length completed. It was on view last Saturday and Sunday. I ought to say that Mrs. Holiday, who has great experience in embroidery, an art closely allied in spirit to mosaic, has assisted me in the execution of the work. All the heads have been executed by Mrs. Holiday and myself.

It may interest you to hear that last Saturday-one of the show-days, was made the occasion of a garden party, to which Mr. Gladstone and about twenty members of Parliament, and four hundred other people came. Mr. Gladstone made an address of an hour on the subject. He expressed great interest in the mosaic, which he spent much time in examining. The artists present expressed opinions which I will only say were highly satisfactory. Now, that the work is finished, allow me to express my thanks for putting it in my hands. There is no technical art so interesting to me, and I had often desired to have an opportunity to see what mosaic could be made in the hands of an artist—the work turned out by the firms being mechanical and depressing to a deplorable degree.

A society called "The Arts and Crafts" has just opened its first exhibition in London. The committee asked to have this mosaic sent. I declined in order not to keep it back, but the natural course of the work took so long that I offered to lend it to them till it was ready for shipment, and they waived their rule that all exhibits must remain till the close of the exhibition in favor of this work.

Yours very truly,
HENRY HOLIDAY.

WILL ONE OR MORE LADIES, who have the time and ability to do plain sewing, volunteer to make surplices for the Altar Society? Please report to the Secretary, Miss Sanders, 410 S. 15th St.

THE ALTAR SOCIETY requests those contributing papers and periodicals to please have them ready for the collector on Tuesday morning of every week.

THE LADIES OF THE BENEVOLENT SOCIETY have always for sale a number of articles made by the poor women whom they employ. These consist of flannel and white and unbleached muslin underclothing for men, women and children, sheets, pillow-cases, towels, dusters, etc., gingham aprons, and maid's aprons of Forestdale and Lansdale muslins, plain or tucked, etc. They are sold at low prices, and the money used to purchase more material with which to continue the work. These things are very suitable for donations to the Garment Committee, hospitals, etc., or for private charity, and some of them for household use.

A Committee for selling and taking orders is in attendance in the Guild-room, every Wednesday, from 11.30 to 1 o'clock.

THOSE INTERESTED IN THE SALE, recently held in the Guild Hall of the Parish House, will be glad to know that the full amount realized by depositors was $986.47.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL was held in the school building, back of the church, on Holy Innocents' night. The tree was brilliantly lighted. The children were well treated. All were happy, and were very thankful that they had taken part in the gladness of the hour. The carols were excellently sung. Dr. McConnell made a short address to the children.

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE very gratefully thank the members of the congregation, and their friends, for the prompt and generous response made to the appeal of last Winter; and, while this (the first) season has been a very short one, it has been most successful in having assisted very many cases of distress that could not be reached in any other way.

The members number 140, and during the year, 679 garments were received and 475 distributed, leaving a balance of 204.

To individuals, 191; Institutions supplied by Volunteer Committee, 245; Missionary Boxes, 30; Balance, 204, Total 679.

It was the wish of the Committee to distribute every garment in advance of the severe weather, trusting to its members to replenish the supply, but the garments now on hand are not suitable for the working classes, and are therefore held for special cases that will necessarily require such clothing during the Winter.

The Committee is now prepared to receive contributions for the year 1889, and will gladly accept all articles of clothing for both sexes and all ages, and will also be very thankful for any additional members.

One of the Committee will be at the Parish school building, every Monday morning, from 10.30 until 12.30 to receive all contributions.

Mon. Jan. 7th, Mrs. Stratton.
" Jan. 14th, Miss Stoddard.
" Jan. 21st, Miss Bell.
" Jan. 28th, Mrs. Muirheid.

REPORT OF THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY.

The C. F. S. numbers eleven active and one contributing member. The first meeting was held May 18th, but, owing to the inclement weather, they were not able to take the children out before June 2d.

From June 2d, to September 15th, they gave 60 children an afternoon outing.

They took one trip up the Schuylkill on the boat; another, a stage ride, and had several excursions to different parts of the park, including rides in the merry-go-rounds, swings, goat carriages and an occasional treat of milk. All have enjoyed themselves, the ladies being amply repaid for their work by the happiness of their little friends.

The donations for six months amounted to $13.06; money from members and visitors, $19.18; Total amount, $32.24. Expended, $27.01; Balance on hand, $5.03.

The first donation was received from a lady in Reading, interested in the building of a Mission Chapel for a new Sunday-school, now held in a public school house.

The president told the members that if they would contribute $1, she would give the same amount; and thus $2,31 was given for the chapel.

The president visited the school the first Sunday she spent in Reading.

One class numbered 20 young men and boys, and it was a matter of surprise that they were willing to come to such an uncomfortable place.

The Society have also helped one poor family, living in a dark, damp cellar, and given fruit to several sick children.

They have received donations of clothing and material for distribution, and are planning a little Christmas surprise for the children.

This little report of six months' work of the C. F. S. is respectfully submitted, with the hope that it may stimulate its members and friends to plan and carry out more liberal things in the months that are to come.

V. VANDERSLICE, President.

The "little Christmas surprise" took the form of a delightful entertainment in the Parish Chapel, Jan. 2d, when the poor youngsters and their friends were regaled with a "treat," and with a beautiful magic lantern exhibition by Mr. J. A. Wilbour.

This unobtrusive, but most efficient little Society is heartily commended to the good offices of our people.

THE DAILY SERVICE.

BY ISAAC WILLIAMS.

"And are we then alone on holy ground,
Most gracious Father? Are we then alone,
Because the world regards not and is gone?
Where are the solemn dead which lie around;
Are they not with us? Are Thy courts not crown'd
With spiritual hosts about, while the sweet tone
Still lingers round Thine altars? Are they flown?
Bearing no more to see their God disowned!
Has the great Michael left us—mighty arm,
Gabriel our fortitude, and the blest charm
Of Raphael's healing?" In my heart's fear
I heard a voice—"Be still and lowly bend;
While two or three remain; thy Lord is here,
And where His presence is, His hosts attend."

SELECTED.

THE PASSING OF THE YEAR

A RONDEAU.

BY CHARLOTTE PENDLETON.

(From the Holiday Criterion.)

Draw near with faith as the years go by!
Is it a grave we gather near,
Or a mound of earth, where buried lie
Safe-garnered seeds to fructify
The barren fields in the coming year?

Keep silence, that our souls may hear
The voices of nature prophesy
Of harvest, and wheat in the full-grown ear:
Draw near with faith!

Behold I show you a mystery!
Never a grave with its lullaby,
But is a cradle wherein doth lie
A new born life; 'tis the form moulds here:
Time dies not in the dying year,
Draw near with faith!

Dec. 25, 1888.

AT the London Conference on Foreign Missions Sir William Hunter said that while the ordinary increase of the population of India had been ten and one-half per cent. in the last ten years, the increase of Christians had been sixty-four per cent.

IF you have never done any parish work, or if you have grown tired of it, and laid it down—begin again this year. It is for the sake of Christ and His little ones. But do not offer your services unless you intend to be regular, systematic, and thorough. There is no place for drones in our parish work.

A DIOCESE, a parish, cannot be made to prosper by simply caring for its own special interests. Look wherever you will and find a parish that is indeed flourishing with inward spiritual growth as well as outward expansion, and you will find one that is full of interest for the missions of the Church, and of activity for their promotion; one which feels strongly the common life of the Body, and exercises the functions of that life in the way appointed by its Divine Author.—Bishop Bissel.

SHOOTING AN ECLIPSE.

Four thousand blanketed Comanches, Kiowas, Cheyennes, Arapahoes and Delawares were at the Avondarke agency to get their rations when the total eclipse of the moon occurred. The savages were greatly excited. The principal chief ordered them to shoot at the "evil thing" to harm the moon, and the force of Indians opened fire in the air, keeping up the shooting for upward of an hour, and until they were out of ammunition, When the moon appeared in view after the eclipse, wild whoops went up for what they believed their victory.—North American.

COMMIT a sin twice, and it will not seem to-thee a crime.

THY friend has a friend, and thy friend's friend has a friend; be discreet.

IT is generally the idle who complain they cannot find time to do that which they fancy they wish.

THE best preacher is the heart; the best teacher is time; the best book is the world; the best friend is God.

LIFE consists in the alternate process of learning and unlearning; but it is often wiser to unlearn than to learn.

THE man who is suspicious lives in a constant state of unhappiness, It would be better for his peace of mind to be too trustful than too guarded.

HE who respects his work so highly and does it so reverently that he cares little what the world thinks of it, is the man about whom the world comes at last to think a great deal.

WE ought not to judge other people by their beliefs, because we do not know how they have been brought about; but we may justly apply the crucial test to our own views, and honor or dishonor them accordingly.

THERE is in some a dispassionate neutrality of mind which, though it generally passes for good temper, can neither gratify nor warm us; it must, indeed, be granted these men can only negatively offend, but then it should also be remembered that they cannot positively please.

DON'T judge a man by the clothes he wears. God made one and the tailor made the other. Don't judge a man by his family, for Cain belonged to a good family. Don't judge a man by his failure in life, for many a man fails because he is too honest to succeed.—North Wales, Penn., Record.

OFFERTORIES FOR FEBRUARY.

February 17.—Third Sunday, For Diocesan Missions.
Other Sundays, For General Charities.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week from 11 to 12 o'clock.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, first to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

WHEN you remove to or withdraw from a parish, always present or ask for your letter of transfer. Every communicant is required by the law of the Church to have one under these circumstances.

THE Sunday-school Teachers' Meetings, for the study of the lesson, are on Fridays, 3.45 P. M., in the Vestry Room adjoining the Church.

THE CHURCH WOMAN'S INSTITUTE.

Jan. 29th. "The English Reformation," by the Rev. Dr. McConnell.

Read: Cutts'; "Turning Points of Church History."

Creighton's: "Era of the Protestant Revolution."

Hore's: "Eighteen Centuries of the Church of England."

Green's: "Short History of English People."

Tennyson's: "Queen Mary."

Shakespeare's: "Henry VIII."

The lectures for the month of February will be as follows:

Feb. 5th. "The Church," by the Rev. Prof. Fullerton.

Feb 12th. "Christ in the Pauline Epistles," by the Rev. Dr. Tidball.

Feb. 19th. "The Communion Office, from 'Lift up your hearts,' to the end of the Office," by the Rev. Prof. Garrison.

Feb. 26th. "The Puritans," by the Rev. Dr. McConnell.

THE ANNUAL OFFERING FOR DIOCESAN MISSIONS will be placed on the Altar on Sunday morning, Feb. 17. This annual offering has come to be a well known institution in St. Stephen's. We will say, however, for the sake of those who have come to us within the year, that the way of doing it is as follows: On Sunday morning Feb. 10th, the Rector will say what he knows about the work of the Church in the way of Missions, in this Diocese. During the week which follows, every family and individual in the Parish will be waited upon by a committee of gentlemen, among whom the Parish is districted for that purpose. The Committee simply calls to receive the offerings of those who are willing to give. They will make no argument or explanation or appeal of any kind. The Rector will do all that. Of course the Committee will be courteously received by all well-bred people, whether they can see their way to contribute or not. The amount wished for this purpose is supposed to be equal to $5.00 from each person. This is what we have done heretofore, and nobody is any poorer, while many a Missionary and struggling handful of poor people are much the better off. The result of our plan has been to put our Parish for several years at the head of the list in the Diocese in this matter.

Of course, there is many a one in the Parish who cannot afford to give any thing like the amount mentioned above, but there are many others who can, and heretofore have given for their poorer neighbors. There is no fear but that they will do so again. The whole amount gathered by the Collectors will be by them put in the Alms-basins, Sunday, February 17th. Last year the offerings amounted to $1468.30; the year before to $1245.96.

THE MANAGERS of ST. STEPHEN'S BENEVOLENT SOCIETY present its 23d annual report to the congregation.

During the season of '87-'88, two thousand and thirty-three articles of clothing, and for household use were given out to be made, and employment thus furnished to fifty women, who had also the privilege of purchasing the garments when made at the mere cost of the material.

The managers of the society would respectfully call the attention of the congregation to the fact that though the revenue of the Society, through the offertory and subscriptions, fell short of the previous year by $106, the amount paid out to the women employed, did not suffer any appreciable dimunition, owing to the fact that it commenced its work with a large balance of material on hand, valued at $110.82, and to an increase in the sales. This has also enabled them to extend a helping hand to the Missionary Box Society, in their valuable work.

The managers trust that the ladies of the congregation will continue to co-operate with them, by purchasing of the Committee, or giving orders for underclothing or household articles, hoping at the same time that the contributions may be raised to the former standard, so that the Society may be able to carry on more effectively the good work that has hitherto been so successful.

It is with pleasure we report the organization of a new branch of benevolent work, known as the Garment Committee. Simple in its aim, that of clothing the poor and needy, this Committee has been successfully inaugurated, and now presents its first report.

The Treasurer's Report is appended.

THE object of the Garment Committee is to supply (as far as possible) with useful garments all too young to work, too old to work, and all who are physically incapacitated, regardless of sex or color. Also to assist with Missionary Boxes, Mission Churches and Institutions supported by voluntary contributions.

This can only be done through the generosity of its members. At present, night clothes for men and women, both white and unbleached, are greatly needed.

Committee in attendance every Monday, from 10.30 A. M. until 12 M.

Feb. 4th. Mrs. Arnold.

THE children of the Church, who so generously brought toys, picture cards, books, etc , during the Christmas season, to the Parish House, at the request of the Rector, will be interested in knowing that the offerings were sent to the schools of the Colored and Italian Missions, and also to the Home of the Merciful Saviour for Crippled Children and the Children's Hospital. They were gladly welcomed and highly appreciated, and must have sent gladness into the hearts of the little ones who have not much of the brightness of life nor the happy homes of those who so humbly gave their gifts for this good and charitable purpose. When another Christmas comes around there is no doubt that the children of the Parish will again be glad to make other little folks happy.

THE RECTOR BEGS TO CALL THE ATTENTION of the members of the congregation to a Concert, to be given at St. George's Hall, 13th and Arch Sts., on the evening of February 19th.

The Concert is for the benefit of our Soprano, Mrs. Newkirk (Miss Emma Suelke). Beside Mrs. Newkirk (Miss Suelke) herself other eminent musicians will take part. Mr. Stanly Hurlburt, our admirable Tenor, Mr. Mauritz Leefson, Mr. Gustav Hille, Miss Josephine Richardson, Contralto, and others equally well known will assist.

It is not, however, on account of the musical treat offered, that attention is called to the Concert in this way. It is on account of the high regard in which our Organist and Choir are held by the Officers and people of the Parish. There is no need to speak of the constant pleasure which they give by their work. That is known to every body. But what is not so well known is their unfailing kindness and courtesy in doing work over and above that which it is their duty to do. They have never yet failed to respond readily and heartily to any request for extra services whenever they have been asked.

But this courtesy on their part makes it but the fair thing that we should go out of our way a little to return the compliment when the occasion offers—as it does just now.

Tickets for the Concert can be procured at the leading music stores, or of our Verger, or of members of the Choir.

SELECTIONS.

REV. CHARLES KINGSLEY'S LETTER TO A PUBLIC SCHOOL-BOY.

The following letter referred to the boy having put into a lottery without thinking it any harm :

"My Dearest Boy :—There is a matter which gives me much uneasiness when you mentioned it. You said you had put into some lottery for the Derby, and had hedged to make safe.

"Now, all that is bad—bad, nothing but bad. Of all habits gambling is the one I hate most and have avoided most. Of all habits it grows most on eager minds. Success and loss alike make it grow. Of all habits, however much civilized men may give way to it, it is one of the most intrinsically savage. Historically, it has been the chief excitement of the lowest brutes in human form for ages past. Morally, it is unchivalrous and unChristian.

"1 It gains money by the lowest and most unjust means ; for it takes money out of your neighbor's pocket without giving him anything in return.

"2. It tempts you to use what you fancy your superior knowledge of a horse's merits, or anything else, to your neighbor's harm.

"If you know better than your neighbor you are bound to give him your advice. Instead, you conceal your knowledge to win from his ignorance ; hence comes all sorts of concealments, dodges, deceits—I say the devil is the only father of it. I'm sure, moreover, that the head master would object seriously to anything like a lottery, betting or gambling.

"I hope you have not won. I should not be sorry for you to lose. If you have won I shall not congratulate you. If you wish to please me you will give back to its lawful owners the money you have won. If you are a loser in gross thereby I will gladly reimburse your losses this time. As you had put in, you could not in honor draw back till after the event. Now you can give back your money, saying that you understand the head master and I disapprove of such things, and so gain a very great moral influence.

"Recollect always that the stock argument is worthless. It is this : 'My friend would win from me if he could ; therefore I have an equal right to win from him.' Nonsense. The same argument would prove that I have a right to maim or kill a man if only I give him leave to maim or kill me if he can and will.

"I have spoken my mind once and for all on a matter on which I have held the same views for more than twenty years, and trust in God you will not forget my words in after life. I have seen many a good fellow ruined by finding himself one day short of money, and trying to get a little by play or betting—and then the Lord have mercy on his simple soul, for simple it will not remain long.

"Mind, I am not the least angry with you. Betting is the way of the world. So are all the seven deadly sins under certain rules and pretty names ; but to the devil they lead if indulged in, in spite of the wise world and its ways.

"Your loving friend,

"C. KINGSLEY."

CHIEF Annosothkah, of the Mohawk tribe of Indians in Canada, is making a tour of Great Britain, delivering addresses in support of the missions of the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

MANY good stories have been told of the beadles of the Scottish Churches. The latest is as good as any. One Sabbath morning, when a minister of an Ayrshire Established Church was about to enter the pulpit, he found that Joseph, the precentor, had not arrived. He instructed the beadle, who was also bellman, to ring the bell for five minutes longer, while they waited to see if Joseph came. When he returned the minister inquirud, "Has Joseph come yet?" "No, sir," answered the beadle. "Most extraordinary! What are we to do! I see no help for it, but you must take Joseph's place yourself for a day." "Ah, no, sir," replied the beadle, "I couldna dae that. Aiblins I could tak' your place, but I couldna tak' Joseph's.

YOU may set it down as a truth, which admits of few exceptions, that those who ask your opinion really want your praise.

SOME people have the notion that their own welfare is the sole care of good, and all which does not meet their wishes and approval is from the devil. It is an opinion somewhat prevalent in Lock Haven. One sometimes thinks of an exeellent person who said to a bishop who could not endure ~~can't~~ aunt, "Bishop, my sister was about to voyage by such a steamer, and at the last moment changed her mind. The steamer sank, and all were lost. Wasn't that an instance of a kind Providence?" "Can't say," answered the bishop, "don't know your sister."—The Guild's Kalendar.

A few Japanese gentlemen, including two of the highest officials in the government, have subscribed $31,000 toward the enlargement of the college of the American Board at Kioto, so as to make it a Christian university.

THE Rev. R. Clark, a missionary in India, writes: "India is beginning to think in English, and you may send us as many English-speaking lay evangelists and clerical or lay missioners as you can, who will have no need whatever, necessarily to learn a word of any vernacular, unless they wish to do so.

MORBUS SABATTICUS.

Morbus Sabatticus, or Sunday sickness, is a peculiar disease. The attack comes on suddenly, every Sunday; no symptoms are felt Saturday night; the patient sleeps well and awakes feeling well; eats a hearty breakfast, but about church-time the attack comes on and continues until services are over in the morning. Then the patient feels easy and eats a hearty dinner.

In the afternoon he feels much better, and is able to take a walk, talk politics and read the Sunday papers. He eats a hearty supper. But about Church-time he has another attack and stays home. He retires early, sleeps well, and wakes up Monday morning refreshed and able to go to work and does not have any symptoms of the disease until the following Sunday. The peculiar features of the disease are as follows:

1. It quite often attacks members of the Church.
2. It never makes its appearance except on the LORD'S Day.
3. The symptoms vary, but it never interferes with the sleep or appetite.
4. It never lasts more than twenty-four hours.
5. It generally attacks the head of the family.
6. No physician is ever called in to attend the patient.
7. It always proves fatal in the end—to personal religion.
8. No remedy known for it except earnest prayer.
9. Religion is the only antidote that will cure.

THE number of Christian Converts in China, has more than doubled during the last ten years.

AT Tokio, the great capital of Japan, there are now no less than 500 conversions to Christianity in a single month.

OF the thirty-nine workers of the American Missionary Association among the Chinese in California, fourteen are Chinamen, who have been converted in the school of that association.

ECUADOR is the only country in South America in which none but Roman Catholics are permitted by the government to engage in evangelization. The custom-house is watched by Jesuits to prevent the entrance of Bibles and other prohibited books, and persons who do not confess to the Romish priests are stoned.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week from 11 to 12 o'clock.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, first to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

The Rite of Confirmation will be administered on Tuesday before Easter, April 16th, at 11 o'clock.

Confirmation Instructions will be delivered by the Rector at the Friday afternoon, and by the Assistant Minister at the Wednesday afternoon services during Lent.

The Assistant Minister will also instruct a class at the Parish House on Friday evenings, at 7.30 o'clock. Any one who wishes to consider this matter at all, whether he has made up his mind to be Confirmed or not, will please give or send his name and address to any of the Clergy.

WHEN you remove to or withdraw from a parish, always present or ask for your letter of transfer. Every communicant is required by the law of the Church to have one under these circumstances.

THE Sunday-school Teachers' Meetings, for the study of the lesson, are on Fridays, 3.45 P. M., in the Vestry Room adjoining the Church.

THE CHURCH WOMAN'S INSTITUTE.

The lectures for the month of March will be as follows:

Mar. 5th. By the Rev. Prof. Fullerton, "Baptism."

Mar. 12th. By the Rev. Dr. Tidball, "Christ in the Pauline Epistles."

Mar. 19th. By the Rev. Prof. Garrison, "The Post-Communion Office."

Mar. 26th. By the Rev. Dr. McConnell, "The 18th Century."

THE REV. MR. BURTON HAS RESIGNED HIS POSITION as Warden of the Burd Orphan Asylum, and the Rev. Summerfield E. Snively, M. D., has been elected to fill his place, and has entered upon his duties.

Mr. Burton has been at the head of this institution for nearly seventeen years. The Asylum being so far away from the other work of the parish, the Warden is not brought into such intimate relations with the people as would be desirable. For this reason few beside the Rector and Vestry know how faithfully and successfully Mr. Burton has, through all these years, discharged the very important and difficult duties of his position. Several generations of the girls have thus passed under his hands. Upon them all has been placed the mark of good, careful and godly training. The post is one of great importance and difficulty. The inmates of the Asylum come to it at such an early age, and are so completely removed from every other influence, that they become, humanly speaking, just what the Warden makes them. The highest praise that can be awarded the late Warden is to say that his training has proved itself by its results to have been good.

Dr. Snively, who takes his place, is hereby most warmly commended to the people of the parish as one well known to be worthy of their affection and esteem. He comes as an old and tried friend of the Rector, and as a man who has, by his faithful and successful work in other fields, proven his capacity.

SUNDAY, THE 17TH OF MARCH, has been set for an offertory for the Altar Society. As the congregation has not been asked for some years for money for this purpose, it may be well to say why it is now needed.

1st. For the flowers, which, after they have been on the altar, go to brighten some sick room, or to tell the members of a bereaved household, that they are thought of in their sorrow. Will not some one give something for this branch of the Society's work?

2d. The Embroidery Class is not only working on a green set for our own parish, but have begun on a purple Altar Cloth for All Souls' Church, "God's silent children," who have given the materials, only asking for the work. Altar linen for a mission church will soon be finished. A surplice and stole have been given to a colored clergymen in the South.

3d. The Literary Committee send papers and periodicals to twenty-five missionaries. They could send to as many more if the congregation would only supply the books. All this needs money. Will you not help the workers? Besides money, personal help is always needed, and more than welcome. The subjoined rules will show how to enter the Society, and the work which is done:

RULES.

I.

This Society shall be called the Altar Society of St. Stephen's Church, Philadelphia.

II.

Its object shall be

1. The care of the Altar Furniture, the Vestments of the Clergy, and everything appertaining to the Chancel, which belongs to the due and reverent performance of Divine Service.

2. To assist other churches as far as possible in making suitable provision for the worship of the sanctuary.

3. To collect and forward papers and periodicals to Missionaries in distant places.

III.

The Rector of the Church shall be ex-officio President of the Society, and preside at all meetings, when present, and nothing shall be done without his consent and approval.

IV.

Any lady, being a communicant in the Parish, may become a member by being elected thereto by a majority vote of the members and approved by the Rector.

PRAYER

To be used by the Members of the Altar Society.

O God, Who knowest that we are not sufficient of ourselves to think anything as of ourselves, but that all our sufficiency is of Thee, assist us with Thy grace in this work which we have undertaken in Thy name; direct us in it by Thy wisdom, and support us by Thy power; give us grace to do our duty diligently and to bring it to a good end; make it profitable to those for whom we labor; and grant, through Thy mercy, that it may tend to our own good, and to greater glory of Thy Blessed Name, through Jesus Christ our Lord. AMEN.

PLEDGE.

I pledge myself, the Lord being my helper, to be a faithful member of the Society so long as I shall continue in connection with it.

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE is greatly encouraged by the true interest shown towards it by its many members; and for the first time since its organition feels almost competent to meet all the many demands that may be made upon it from various sources.

The mild season bringing fewer demands, with the additional members and gifts, seem to have placed it on a more solid basis, upon which the Committee can now work with greater comfort. The gratitude of those receiving assistance is most touching.

The semi-annual condition of its finances was reported with the Benevolent Society last month; it should have been the Annual Report, which stands as follows:

Received	$10 00
Printing	$ 3 75
Stationery	3 00
Books	50
Wrapping Paper and Twine	1 30
Postage	1 39
Balance	6
	$10 00

The year ended November 30th, 1888.

Committee in attendance at the Parish School Building every Monday from 10.30 A. M. until 12.30 M.

March 4th. Miss Stoddard.
" 17th. Miss Bell.
" 18th. Mrs. Muirheid.
" 25th. Mrs. Arnold.

THE "QUIET DAY FOR WOMEN" will be held March 14th.

The services will be conducted by Bishop Potter, of New York, in the Church of the Incarnation, Broad and Jefferson Sts.

In the evening the Rev. Dr. McConnell will preach in St. Andrew's Church, 8th and Spruce Sts.

On Friday, the 15th, the Woman's Conference will be held at Holy Trinity Parish Building, 19th and Walnut Sts.

THE BOYS' GUILD OF ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH was organized on Friday evening, February 15th, in the Guild Hall of the Parish House. Boys over thirteen years of age are allowed membership. There are to be two meetings each month, on the first and third Fridays, at half-past seven o'clock. There are already many members. It is hoped this effort may be the means of bringing the boys of the neighborhood more immediately under the good influence of the Church. Any boy desirous of become a member, or willing to come under the rules of the Guild, can make application for membership to any of the officers.

THE BISHOP HAS APPOINTED TUESDAY in Passion Week, April 16th, at 11 o'clock in the morning, as the time to visit this Parish for Confirmation.

This Rite is the one by which, as the phrase goes, one "joins the Church."

Of course the phrase is misleading as every one knows; every man, woman and child who has been baptized is already a member of the Church. Being confirmed does not make him any more a member than he was before. Nevertheless, the popular phrase does, as popular phrases always do, express a real fact. It points out that by Confirmation one comes into a new relation to religion. What is it for therefore? Who is it for? What results may fairly be expected from it?

In the first place it is the public declaration of one's citizenship in the kingdom of God. The Church does not conduct her affairs in a corner? A man or woman comes to us, let us say, from another church. He brings his certificate of membership with him. We accept that certificate in all courtesy. It is sufficient witness that the bearer "believes the articles of the Christian Faith," and "intends, by the help of God, to lead a sober, righteous, and godly life." It is sufficient evidence also that he has a fair reputation in the Christian community.

These are all the qualifications which the Church demands, and are all that her Priests are allowed to require. But the man so coming intends to become and to be known as one of us. We welcome him, and, let him come from where he will, we belive that he gains enormously by coming. If he comes from Rome he finds freedom and sweet reasonableness. If he comes from another Protestant church he finds things which he could not find at his old home,—order, spiritual support and sustenance. These things, as churchmen we believe. That others believe so, too, is proven by the experience of the Rector of this church, an experience in which he is not at all singular. Of all those whom he has in the course of his ministry presented for Confirmation, nearly two thirds have been born and reared in other churches.

When they come to us, therefore, we welcome them with both hands,—but, we ask something of them. We are about to become publicly responsible for them; they must on their part publicly assume their place among us. There must be nothing secret or underhand about it. They must be admitted by the only Rite which we possess for that purpose, they must be confirmed.

But this is the lowest possible ground upon which to explain the meaning of this Rite.

The Scripture and the unbroken custom of the overwhelming majority of Christians have found much more than this in it. They have found in it the gift of the Holy Ghost. The term is a mighty one, but the thing signified by it is true. Religion is the gift of God. He is lavish in this as in all His gifts, but here as well as elsewhere His gifts are habitually given under definite conditions. If the conditions are not fulfilled the gift not only will not, but cannot come. Now, we believe that the condition of a certain valuable spiritual gift is "the laying on of the Apostles' hands." Not of course the mere physical contact, but the thing which is connected therewith. It is idle to argue that no connection can be traced between the means and the end; or that the means are so commonplace that such stupendous consequences cannot depend upon them; or that other people seem to get on without the means at all. The reply is that this is God's way, ordained arbitrarily if you will, but not the less ordained.

But ordained for whom? For those who are qualified to receive it. Not all are so qualified. Just as moral faculties cannot be given to an animal for the reason that there is no place in its nature upon which to fasten them, so the gifts of God in Confirmation can only be received by those whose spiritual nature has been otherwise developed to the point of receiving them. It is the experience of all that this is a point for which no arbitrary date can be fixed. It is not for any until they have ceased to be "children," and have come to be "discreet." Up to that time the child is under cover; God's gifts are held in trust and doled to them by those whom He has set over them. This is meant to be so, both for the sake of the child and the parents. If they allow it to go empty, it must suffer the loss—and better for them that they had never been born; but now the child, having passed through the ferment which attends the change from the boy to the man, from the girl to the woman, is to be brought by the parents, not driven but brought, to the Bishop to be confirmed, as the parents solemnly promised at his baptism that they would do. There is not to be any compulsion here. It is a place where compulsion defeats itself. The youth or maiden detects unerringly what their parents wish them to do in the matter, and they usually do it.

So again, the Rite is for that large class who are Christians in everything but name. They are honorable men and pure women who revere the Master, who live as best they may by His rule and expect to lie down in hope of His resurrection, and to be buried with Christian burial.

For many reasons, such as lack of opportunity, self distrust, shyness which borders close upon cowardice, from some speculative difficulty in unimportant doctrines, from sheer neglect which at first was venial, but which gradually changes into sin, from a hundred causes they have not yet done what they knew to be their duty. Confirmation is for these pre-eminently.

Does any one, therefore, who reads this, and who has not yet shown his colors, believe the articles of the Christian Faith as contained in the Apostles' Creed? Is he ready to promise that by the help of God he will lead a sober, righteous life?

Does he long for righteousness and grieve for his sin? Then he is one of those whom the Bishop is coming to confirm.

Let him give or send his name to the Rector. Let him intimate a time and place where he may be seen. Let him make any sign he sees fit, and it will be promptly answered.

SELECTIONS.

FELLOW-LABORERS WITH ST. PAUL.

"Those women which labored with me in the Gospel, and others of my fellow-laborers whose names are in the book of life."

They lived and they were useful; this we know,
And naught beside;
No record of their names is left to show
How soon they died;
They did their work and then they passed away,
An unknown band,
And took their places with the higher host
In the higher land.

And were they young, or were they growing old,
Or ill, or well,
Or lived in poverty, or had much gold,
No one can tell.
One only thing is known of them: they were Faithful and true
Disciples of the Lord, and strong through prayer
To save and do.

But what avails the gift of empty fame?
They lived to God.
They loved the sweetness of another name,
And gladly trod
The rugged ways of earth, that they might be
Helper or friend,
And in the joy of this their ministry
Be spent and spend.

No glory clusters round their names on earth,
But in God's Heaven
Is kept a book of names of greatest worth,
And there is given
A place for all who did the Master please,
Although unknown,
And their lost names shine forth in brightest rays
Before the throne.

O take who will the boon of fading fame!
But give to me
A place among the workers, though my name
Forgotten be;
And if within the book of life is found
My lowly place,
Honor and glory unto God redound
For all His grace!

—Marianne Farningham, in Missionary Outlook.

LIFE AND DEATH.

On parent knees, a naked, new-born child,
Weeping thou sat'st, while all around thee smiled.
So live that sinking on thy last long sleep
Thou then may'st smile while all around thee weep.

—Sir Wm. Jones, from the Persian.

" 19, Good Friday, City Mission.
" 21, Easter. To be designated by the givers.
" 28, Society for Increase of the Ministry.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week from 11 to 12 o'clock.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, first to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

The Rite of Confirmation will be administered on Tuesday before Easter, April 16th, at 11 o'clock.

Confirmation Instructions will be given by the Rector at the Friday afternoon, and by the Assistant Minister at the Wednesday afternoon services during Lent.

The Assistant Minister will also instruct a class at the Parish House on Friday evenings, at 7.30 o'clock. Any one who wishes to consider this matter at all, whether he has made up his mind to be Confirmed or not, will please give or send his name and address to any of the Clergy.

WHEN you remove to or withdraw from a parish, always present or ask for your letter of transfer. Every communicant is required by the law of the Church to have one under these circumstances.

THE Sunday-school Teachers' Meetings, for the study of the lesson, are on Fridays, 3.45 P. M., in the Vestry Room adjoining the Church.

THE CHURCH WOMAN'S INSTITUTE.

The lectures for the month of April will be as follows:

April 2d. Rev. Prof. Fullerton, "The Holy Communion."

April 9th. Rev. Dr. Tidball, "Christ in the Epistle to the Hebrews."

April 16th. Rev. Prof. Garrison, "The Baptismal and Confirmation Offices."

April 23d. Rev. Dr. McConnell, "The American Church."

April 30th. Rev. Dr. Perry, "The Resurrection and the Future Life."

THE Ladies of the Garment Committee will be in attendance during this month as usual, at the Parish School Building, every Monday from 10.30 A. M. until 12.30 M.

April 1st. Mrs. Lundy.
" 8th. Mrs. Stratton.
" 15th. Miss Stoddard.
" 22d. Miss Bell.
" 29th. Mrs. Muirheid.

The Committee will be very glad if the ladies, composing its members, will avail themselves of the opportunity, at present afforded, (before the Benevolent Society closes for the season) of supplying themselves with garments for the early Autumn, when many of them are still absent from the city and the necessities of the poor begin to be pressing; many articles are needed, and the demand for night-gowns is very great.

THE EASTER CAROL SERVICE of the Sunday-Schools, the Parish Day Schools and the Burd Orphan Asylum will be held on the Sunday after Easter, April 28th, at 4 o'clock. The offertory will be for the Home of the Merciful Saviour for Crippled Children.

THE BISHOP will visit the Parish to administer the rite of Confirmation on Tuesday, April 16, at 11 o'clock. The service will consist of the Confirmation and Holy Communion.

The Rector wishes to meet all who expect to be Confirmed in the Vestry Room after the 5 o'clock service on Friday, April 12th, in order to make arrangements about the details of the Service, and also to say some words to them of a more private character than can well be done at the public confirmation lectures.

On Easter-Day the services will be as heretofore, a celebration of the Holy Communion at 8 o'clock, morning prayer with sermon and Holy Communion at 11 o'clock, and service and sermon at 4 o'clock. At one or other of these celebrations it is expected that every communicant will be present.

The regular parishioners will enter by the North Transept door, and the Tenth Street doors will be opened promptly at 11 o'clock, after which visitors will be shown seats just as far as there are any seats.

Pew holders, of course, understand that it is to be taken for granted if they are not in their seats at the time of beginning service, that they are not coming, and their places will be at once filled by others.

It would be a great convenience if any seat or pew-holders, who do not expect to be at either service, would tell the sexton or some member of the vestry beforehand of that fact. In that case, it will be known where to put at least a part of the visitors.

For some years we have been very little annoyed by an unseemly behavior on the part of any visitors to the church at Easter. They mostly seem to be aware that the service is not a show, and they join in with as much reverence as is possible in such a crowded place. But there are always a few—and strange to say mostly women—who seem to have little notion of propriety, to say nothing of reverence. If any such one should become annoying in that way it is to be hoped that no right-minded man or women, who sees it, will hesitate, then and there, to administer such a rebuke as will put a stop to it at once. This is not only the right, but the duty of every one who has an interest in the decencies of public worship. Let no one be afraid that he will offend any well-bred person by so doing,—that will not be the kind of person to whom he speaks.

The Easter offering will, as usual, be devoted to whatever pious or charitable purpose the giver shall designate. So much of it as is not specially designated, the Rector will distribute to his best discretion.

Two things should be born in mind by every giver:

(1). That the gift should be a real gift, and not a sham one. If any one, on Easter day, with the hope of his own immortality before him, wishes to make a thank offering in token of this, his hope, let him do so in an honest and manly fashion. But don't let him go through the form of making an offering out of deference to custom and good manners. It is quite honest and honorable for one to give nothing, if he thinks he has nothing to give, or does not believe in the purpose for which it is asked, but it is neither honest nor honorable for him to give less than he thinks he could.

(2). It ought to be borne in mind by the many people who go out of town for the Summer, that our charitable obligations are calculated for a whole year, and need the equivalent of a year's offerings to redeem them. Of course, those who assume other obligations in the places where they go for the Summer ought to be free from the burden which they carry while here, and they are so, both in fact and in right, but to "evade one's responsibilities by flitting" is—well, we don't just care to say what it is.

Our memorandum of promises for the year ending at Easter, at present shows thus:—

For Diocesan Missions, - - -	Paid, $900.00
Theatre Service, - - - - - -	Paid, 500.00
Divorce Reform League, - - -	Paid, 100.00
Colored Student at Annandale, - - -	100.00
Church, Upper Fairmount, Md., - -	Paid, 20.00
Church, North Kent, Md., (Paid $100), - -	200.00
Church, Rushland Centre, Pa., - - -	50.00
Bishop Quintard, for Colored Chapel, - -	50.00
Parish House for Italian Mission, - -	100.00

A CONCERT will be given in St. George's Hall on Wednesday evening, April 24th, in aid of the Children's Friend Society, of this Parish.

A glance at the names of the musicians who will take part in it will be sufficient proof that it will be worth going to on its account. They are Mr. C. H. Jarvis, piano; Mr. Wm. Stoll, violin; Mr. Rudolph Hennig, violencello; Miss Emma Suelke (Mrs. Newkirk), soprano; Mr. Stanley Hulbert, tenor; Mr. Thomas a'Becket, Jr., accompanist. Musical people—the writer of this is not a musical people—will judge for themselves of the musical promise, but the object of the concert is one about which a word ought to be said.

The Children's Friend Society was formed a year ago, by a number of ladies who are interested in the children of poor people who do not have the opportunity to have the pleasures which the children of well-to-do people receive as a matter of course. It is difficult for most to realize how empty and barren of all amusement is the life of the very poor. To get food, lodging and clothes is quite as much as they can manage. The ladies of this society take the poor little creatures, whom they know, away to the country, or to the Park, or to the "Zoo" for a day, give them a glimpse out of doors, and a good, honest meal, and then take them home again, and have a chat with the poor tired mother, who is as completely unable to give her little ones such a treat, as she would be to send them to the moon and back. It is good for the mother, good for the children, and good for the ladies who take this trouble.

The Society would like to have more members. The membership is of two kinds:—Active and Contributing, and the fee for each kind is a dollar a year. The president is Mrs. E. S. Vanderslice, 127 S. 5th Street.

Those who either take tickets for this concert themselves, or call the attention of their friends to it, so that they will do so, will thereby help forward one of the best and most "common-sensible" good works we have.

SELECTED.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 4th, 1889.

REV. AND DEAR BROTHER:

I am constrained by the difficulties of my field of labor and its missionary character to ask the special aid of my brethren in extending and maintaining the Church in this central Western Diocese. We are working to establish the Church in many growing towns, having a population of from two to five thousand, and where the people are ready to welcome the Church and aid it. But the Bishop must be ready to encourage it in almost every case by promise of aid in building the church and in maintaining the missionary. The appropriations of the general Board of Missions, and our Diocesan Board are inadequate to meet the requirements here. We are also laying the foundations of educational and benevolent institutions, which have also to be aided by the Bishop until fairly on their feet. I realize the many calls upon every rector for the organized institutions and societies, and am sorry to add to their burden by putting in a special plea for Indiana. If it shall be in your power to aid by any sum we shall be grateful to you and your people, and to God.

Very respectfully,

D. B. KNICKERBOCKER.
Bishop of Indiana.

SELECTIONS.

SCHOLASTIC DIVINITY AND MODERN THOUGHT.

"Theology," says Dean Burgon in a recent article in the Fortnightly, "from its very nature can never, properly speaking, experience any change at all. * * The essential difference between theology and every other science which can be named is this: That whereas the rest are progressive, theology does not admit of progress." On the other hand, Dr. Fairbairn, in a recent article in the Nineteenth Century, asserts that "the only sciences that can really educate are those that live and grow in the hands of the student and teacher. Dead sciences generate no life and so know no gain; and sciences are dead when they have ceased to grow or to be handled as living things. Now, there is nothing more dead than scholastic divinity; that is, theology made from the schools out of texts and formulæ, framed by fathers, councils and school men." These two quotations indicate sufficiently the first unsettled question in theology. Clearly no man can interpret unsettled questions if he does not believe that they exist. I agree with Dr. Fairbairn and dissent from Dean Burgon. Nothing lives which does not grow, and no science is useful which does not live. In this growth the present and the future must not indeed cast away the past from which they are evolved and upon which they depend. Change and progress are not identical operations, and a changeful theology is not necessarily a progressive theology. But yesterday no more lays down the law for to-morrow in religion than in industry or politics. The command to grow in grace and in the knowledge of God is addressed to the race as well as to the individual. The fundamental question between conservative and progressive, between new theology and old theology, is the question sharply presented by these contrasted quotations from two famous English divines

John Morley says, "that at the bottom of all the great discussions of modern society lie the two momentous questions: First, whether there is a God; and, second, whether the soul is immortal." These are not what I understand by unsettled questions in theology. They are not unsettled in the Christian Church. If the Christian believer sometimes discusses them, it is only that he may bring those that are unsettled to his own clear conviction. If he is sometimes perplexed concerning them, it is only because the sensuous nature beclouds the spiritual, as the fogs which are the emanations of the earth sometimes obscure the sun. Modern thought recognizes in scholastic theology certain great fundamental truths, but they are imbedded in it as living forms in the heart of a rock. Very different is the interpretation which modern thought gives to the spiritual teaching of the Bible. Justice and mercy are not inconsistent attributes, and make no antagonistic demands; they are but different aspects of the eternal divine love. Mercy is love looking at the individual; Justice is love looking at the universe. The Gospel reveals not a plan, nor a scheme, but a divine person. It discloses in the life and character of Jesus Christ the true character of God, as one whose very nature it is to go out from itself, as heat and light go out from the sun, to give righteousness to those who do not possess it. This outgoing of righteousness for the suffering and sinful is itself a suffering; ever and always a suffering. Suffering is the great sin cleanser; suffering is the great reconciler. Sympathy, i. e., suffering with another, is the first condition of becoming at one with Him; becoming at one with Him is the first condition of exercising any moral or spiritual power over Him. Thus the Messiah is revealed as a suffering Messiah, through whom God descends by sympathy to man, through whom man, made sharer of His suffering, is lifted up by sympathy to God. This sympathy between the outpouring, affluent heart of God, and the empty, hungry heart of man, is, on God's part, mercy; on man's part, faith. Faith is the turning of the flower to the sun to receive the light; it is the opening ear of Lazarus to receive the life that trembles in the words, "Come forth." It is not a belief about God or His Christ; it is the receiving of God in His Christ. He who thus, through a suffering Messiah, receives a sympathetic, outpouring, life-giving God, is rightened through this faith. He is brought into loyal, filial relations to his Father. He receives, by the direct play of the higher divine nature on his own, a new and divine life, which translates and transforms him, raises him from the dead, emancipates him from his old time bondage unto sin, delivers him from all fear of future penalty, redeems him from all present destruction, and unites him in a living relation of love and sympathy to his God.—Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott, in the New York Press.

THE DAWN OF DAY.

Until about thirty years ago, Japan was closed to foreigners. Then, through America, its ports were thrown open to the world. Since then a mighty change has taken place in every way. The Japan of to-day and the Japan Commodore Perry found when he sailed into the port of Yeddo are utterly unlike. The Sun of Righteousness has been steadily and rapidly rising on the land, and all things are becoming new. The Japanese have been studying foreign countries, and have found that the secret of their wonderful power is Christianity. They are very eager for progress and power, and so as a nation they are nearly ready to adopt Christianity publicly. The government encourages our missionaries and invites our teachers into the schools. We have every opportunity of teaching Christ to the people. And the people are ready to hear.

Some years ago a young Japanese scholar got hold of a geography written by an American missionary. It began with the words: "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth."

The young man wondered who this God might be, and where He lived. In his ignorance he fancied that perhaps it might be in America, and at last he resolved to go to America and find Him. So he went all the way to Boston, but still could not find out what he wanted to know. At last he went to the captain of the boat and said, "I came all the way to Boston to find God, and there is no one to tell me." The captain took him to the owner of the ship, a true Christian man, and from him the young Japanese learned to know God. Afterward he went back to his own country, and now he is at the head of a Christian college in the beautiful city of Kioto, a college where young men are trained to go out as missionaries among their own countrymen.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week from 11 to 12 o'clock.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

WHEN you remove to or withdraw from a parish. always present or ask for your letter of transfer, Every communicant is required by the law of the Church to have one under these circumstances.

THE Sunday-school Teachers' Meetings, for the study of the lesson, are on Fridays, 3.45 P. M., in the Vestry Room adjoining the Church.

Chancel Committee	4-48
Total	$339 73

From Washington Territory a clergyman writes the papers sent him have been much enjoyed by himself; that as there was "so much solid information" in them, he gives them to others to read. Another letter of thanks says the same, so the papers and periodicals do double duty.

The Chancel Committee has performed the duties of taking care of the chancel, and vestment. Flowers were sent them for the altar on all Saints' Day and on Easter by some members of the congregation.

The Embroidery Class reports one Surplice and Stole given to a colored Clergyman in North Carolina, applied for by delegates to Freedmen's Committee from St. Stephen's church; one Corporal, two Chalice veils and one Post communion veil given St. Paul's Mission Chapel, Camden, N. J.; one Surplice to Rev. E. B. Beaumont, Nashotah Mission; one Corporal and two Purificators, ordered from Society; work for our own Parish; five Surplices; four Purificators.

The red altar set was finished and used for first time on Whit-Sunday. The materials for two white Stoles were given by a member of the Parish; the work done by two members of the class. Another lady gave the materials for an alms bag which was embroidered and made up by the Society.

One Stole and three Surplices were ordered from the Society. The purple altar cloth is nearly finished for All Souls' Church.

A NEW JEWELED CHALICE, given in memory of one now in Paradise, was used for the first time on Easter day. It is a beautiful companion to the jewelled Flagon which was placed in the same holy place a year ago. Both alike were offered in the spirit of her who broke the Alabaster box of ointment, very costly, over His head, and were only by Judas accused of wastefulness. "Let her alone, she hath done what she could," was His judgment.

THE EASTER CAROL SERVICE of the Sunday-Schools, the Parish Day Schools and the Burd Orphan Asylum was held in the church on the first Sunday after Easter, at 4 o'clock. The offerings, exceeded past years, amounting to $203.87. They were given to the Home of the Merciful Saviour for Crippled Children. The carols were well sung by the schools, and all passed off exceedingly well, much to the satisfaction of the teachers and others who interested themselves in the preparation required for the service. Many of the crippled children of the Home of the Merciful Saviour were brought to the service and seemed much pleased.

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE have received several articles of clothing, without name or address, for which they desire to return grateful thanks. Some have been already distributed and others will soon be. More of the same kind will be gladly received.

The Committee will close its active duties on the 1st of May, but any special case will be attended to, upon application to Rev. Dr. McConnell or Rev. Mr. Miller. The duties will be resumed on or about Sept. 22d.

They hope for the hearty co-operation of the members, the congregation generally, and outside friends, so that such interest may be taken as to make it a permanent charitable organization worthy of such a name, which surely will be, could they but see the gratitude of those who are made happy through their generous gifts.

The applications from deserving poor so far exceed our limited supplies that we are very often discouraged, and so feel our helplessness as to greatly need your assistance.

SELECTIONS.

THE hymns "It came upon a midnight clear," "Calm on the listening ear of night," "Come, said Jesus' sacred voice," "It is finished—Glorious word," "In the cross of Christ I glory," "Here in the broken bread," "Nearer, my God, to Thee," Watchman, tell us of the night," were all written by Unitarians.

I AM truly thankful to hear that I have helped to make a Churchman of you. The longer I live, the more I find the Church of England the most rational, liberal, practical form which Christianity has yet assumed.....Strange to say, Thomas Carlyle now says that the Church of England is the most rational thing he sees now going.—Charles Kingsley.

RUSKIN AND THE BIBLE.

Mr. Ruskin in a recent letter which has been quoted in many of our exchanges, refers as follows to the Bible.

"Let me tell your readers who care to know in the fewest possible words what it is. It is the grandest group of writings existent in the rational world, put into the grandest language of the rational world in the first strength of the Christian faith by an entirely wise and kind saint, St. Jerome, translated afterward with beauty and felicity into every language of the Christian world, and the guide since so transplanted of all the arts and acts of that world which have been noble, fortunate and happy. And by consultation of it honestly on any serious business you may always learn, a long while before your parliament finds out, what you should do in such business, and be directed, perhaps, besides to work more serious than you had thought of."

MRS. WILLIAM GAMMELL, of Providence, has given $50,000 to build a church at Olneyville, R, I., as a memorial to a deceased son. Mr. J. J. Astor has given $150,000 for the erection of a new building for the Cancer Hospital in New York. which makes $300,000 in all which he has contributed to that object. The late Mrs. Gen. Cullum left, by her will, $50,000 for the erection of a chapel for the hospital. Mr. John Ward Noble, of Anniston, Alabama, is building a church, at a cost of $75,000, as a memorial of James and Samuel Noble. Mr. George Bliss, of New York city, has built a chapel for the City Mission on Blackwell's Island, at a cost of $75,000 The Rev. Dr. C. F. Hoffman is building a church for the parish of All Angels, New York city, at a cost of $200,000. Roswell P. and Anson R. Flower are to build a church for Trinity Parish, Watertown, New York, at a cost of $55,000. Miss Mary Garrett, of Baltimore, is erecting a building for the higher education of girls at a cost of $200,000.

THE great effect of the Incarnation was to render human love for the Most High a possible thing.

The character of the Blessed Founder of our faith became an abstract of morality to determine the judgment, while at the same time it remained personal and liable to love. The written Word and Established Church prevented a degeneration into ungoverned mysticism; but the predominant principle of vital religion always remained that of self-sacrifice to the Saviour. Not only the higher divisions of moral duties, but the simple primary impulses of benevolence, were subordinated to this absorbing passion. The world was loved "in Christ alone." The brethren were members of his mystical body. All the other bonds that had fastened down the spirit of the universe to our narrow round of earth, were as nothing in comparison to this golden chain of suffering and self-sacrifice which at once riveted the heart of man to one who, like himself, was acquainted with grief. Pain is the deepest thing we have in our nature; and union through pain has always seemed more real and more holy than any other.—Arthur Henry Hallam.

A STREET INCIDENT.

A reporter called to a little bootblack near the City Hall to give him a shine the other day. The little fellow came rather slowly for one of that lively guild, and planted his box down under the reporter's foot. Before he could get his brushes out, another larger boy ran up, and calmly pushing the little one aside, said: "Here, you go sit down, Jimmy." The reporter at once became indignant at what he took to be a piece of outrageous bullying, and sharply told the newcomer to clear out. "O, dat's all right, boss," was the reply. "I'm only goin' to do it fur him. You see he's been sick in the hospital for mor'n a month, and can't do much work yet, so us boys all turn in and give him a lift when we can: savvy?" "Is that so, Jimmy?" asked the reporter, turning to the smaller boy. "Yes, sir," wearily replied the boy, and as he looked up, the pallid, pinched face could be discerned even through the grime that covered it. "He does it fur me, if you'll let him." "Certainly, go ahead," and as the bootblack plied the brush, the reporter plied him with questions. "You say all the boys help him in this way?" "Yes, sir. When they ain't got no job themselves, and Jimmy gets one, they turns in and helps him, 'cause he ain't very strong yet, ye see." "What percentage do you charge him on a job?" "Hey?" queried the youngster, "I don't know what you mean." "I mean, what part of the money do you give Jimmy, and how much do you keep out of it?" "You bet your life I don't keep none. I ain't no such sneak as that." "So you give it all to him, do you?" "Yes, I do. All the boys give up what they gets on his job. I'd like to catch any feller sneaking it on a sick boy, I would." The shine being completed, the reporter handed the urchin a quarter, saying, "I guess you are a pretty good fellow, so you keep ten cents, and give the rest to Jimmy there." "Can't do it, sir; it's his customer. Here, Jim!" He threw him the coin, and was off like a shot after a customer for himself, a veritable rough diamond. In this big city there are many such lads, with warm and generous hearts under their ragged coats.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

OFFERTORY FOR JUNE.

For General Charities.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week from 11 to 12 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 to 1 P. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

WHEN you remove to or withdraw from a parish. always present or ask for your letter of transfer, Every communicant is required by the law of the Church to have one under these circumstances.

THE Children's Friend Society of St. Stephen's Parish, acknowledge the receipt of many favors, especially during the last trip to the Zoological Garden, that of Mr. Hardt, the proprietor of the restaurant.

THE "THEATRE SERVICES" in which the Rector and people of the church have been so deeply interested for some years, are in danger of being compelled to end. For five years we have had there every Sunday night, on an average, fifteen hundred men, not six per cent. of whom ever set foot inside of a church door. They have listened with respect and interest to the plainest and most earnest preaching of the gospel. Many hundreds who had at one time been religious men, and who had fallen away, have been reclaimed. The crowd from being rude and boisterous, have become quiet and respectful. Not a week, hardly a day, has passed for a long time without the clergy being called upon for some service for the people who make up that great congregation. There has never been any difficulty in raising money for the expenses. It has commended itself in a most peculiar degree to the laity of our church and city.

But the Managers and Lessees of the Theatres all refuse to lease their places for this purpose! It is not at all a question of money. No one of them has been asked to even make a reduction in his rates. But from the very first it has been only with the utmost difficulty that any of them could be induced to rent his theatre for this purpose. The manager of the one we have had now refuses to lease it to us on Sunday nights for next Winter.

The reasons assigned for the refusal of the managers have been very various. One says he "has too much respect for religion to have it mixed up with the theatre business" Another says, "the theatre is needed Sunday nights for rehearsals." Another says that "if he begins by opening the theatre Sunday nights for religious meetings, he will be compelled to open it for other purposes also, which is against his conscience." Another says, that "the large Roman Catholic element among theatre goers are opposed to going to a theatre which has been used for Protestant services." And so it goes. It is plain that none of these are the real reasons. That reason is double. In part it is the mistaken notion that the theatre going population are not in favor of our services. This is a mistake. The other part is an instinctive feeling of incongruity between the Sunday night and the Monday night exercises. The truth is that the theatre people themselves are the last people to be convinced that their business is respectable. Long after the best element in the community have become convinced that play-acting and play-going is intrinsically just as innocent as any other business or pleasure, the managers still remain under the domination of a feeling which was ground in at a time when their business was under a ban. They are afraid to allow it to come into close contact with good things for fear of the contrast. They need not. The spectators at any respectable play are not the kind of people who are afraid of religion. They may not possess much of it, but they honor it and are not afraid of it. One by one the managers of whom we have leased our theatre have come to see the truth of this position, but in the constant changes which occur in that business it seems impossible to convince them before the experiment in order that they will be willing to rent us a house. It is a pity.

An election will be held in this State on the 18th of June, at which time the people will be asked to vote YES or NO upon the following proposed amendment to the State Constitution:

ARTICLE XIX.

The manufacture, sale, or keeping for sale, of intoxicating liquor to be used as a beverage, is hereby prohibited, and any violation of this prohibition shall be a misdemeanor, punishable as shall be provided by law.

The manufacture, sale, or keeping for sale of intoxicating liquor for other purposes than as a beverage, may be allowed in such manner only as may be prescribed by law. The General Assembly shall, at the first session succeeding the adoption of this article of the Constitution, enact laws with adequate penalties for its enforcement.

Inasmuch as this is not alone a political question, but one which has to do with public and private morals, it becomes of grave importance for Christian people to consider how they will vote.

The problem may be stated thus:

It is carefully estimated that about 60 per cent. of the adult male population use alcoholic liquors more or less as a beverage. They do so without violence to their consciences, believing that they have a right to do so.

But, on the same estimation, there is about one-half of one per cent. of the whole community who cannot use such beverages at all without the most disastrous effect upon themselves, and without entailing great danger and cost to the community. In addition, the liquor selling class, as a whole, have shown themselves liable to make political combinations which are a menace to the Commonwealth. The question then is: What ought society to do to protect those feeble and vicious people who cannot and will not protect themselves? And how are the liquor selling class to be prevented from making combinations which are politically dangerous?

The method at present in operation is that known as the "License System;" that is to say, the sale of liquor is restrained and regulated in two ways: First, the seller is compelled to pay to the Commonwealth an annual fee, which is estimated to be enough to defray the cost to the community which is caused by his selling liquor to his share of the feeble and vicious class mentioned above. Second, the judicial officers who determine upon the granting of licenses are required to give them only to such persons as may be trusted, and who will give sufficient bonds that they will observe the regulations.

Instead of this it is proposed to take away from everybody the right (not to use, but) to sell alcoholic beverages entirely. Two different reasons are stated by two classes of people for this proposed action. One class asserts that the use of alcohol in any degree, and by any person, is a danger and a sin, and should be prevented by law. Another class asserts that while the use of alcohol may be allowed to be intrinsically innocent and harmless, yet experience has shown that where its use is allowed at all, the grave evils attendant upon it cannot be prevented, and that therefore the only thing to be done is to compel the majority who use it innocently to do without it for the sake of those who use it viciously. Hence the proposed amendment to the Constitution.

These questions therefore arise:

(1). Ought this to be done?
(2). Can it be done?
(3). Is this the right way to do it?

In our own judgment all these questions must be answered in the negative.

The use of alcoholic liquors is almost as old and as universal as is humanity. If the question, "Is such use intrinsically wrong?" be asked either of Religion or Science, they both reply, no. For the Christian it becomes wrong only when he is convinced that it is harmful either to himself or to his fellow man—when he is convinced, not when some other man is. He is expressly forbidden to allow any man's judgment to be put in place of his own. It is therefore open to any one to persuade him to change his conduct in the interest of his brother, but so far as the Gospel has any voice in the matter, it is not lawful to compel him to do so. The power of the Sovereign must not be abused even in the interest of righteousness. A dreadful penalty always follows upon this attempt, and it nowhere follows so quickly as where the Sovereign is the people. The penalty is that the power of the Sovereign is quickly broken.

Again, in our judgment it ought not to be done because it is inequitable. It proposes to make it a misdemeanor to sell a commodity which it is legitimate to buy and use. It throws the burden upon the wrong party. It punishes the accessory, and allows the criminal to go free. The sin which the Scripture condemns in sternest terms is not liquor selling, but drunkenness. The man who is to be execrated and punished chiefly, both in this world and the next, is the man who violates the temple of the Holy Ghost by getting drunk. Current prohibition argument distinctly reverses this. It pities and coddles the offender, and punishes the accessory.

It sets aside our Lord's wisdom who rebuked gluttons and wine bibbers, and strikes the caterer and liquor seller. The false moral judgment at this point is the great stumbling block in the way of true temperance advancement. It would seem that the only sure way, albeit a slower way, to close the rum shop must be to take away not its license, but its custom. But this is a slow method. A certain type of earnest disciples have always been anxious, from the best motives, to "take Jesus by force and make Him a King," but He has always refused.

But is the proposed method practicable? How has it proven itself where it has been tried? Upon this question there is the flattest contradiction of testimony. Of those States where "Constitutional prohibition" has been tried, men of unquestioned veracity, and with opportunity to know the facts, assert that it has been an unqualified success, and equally trustworthy witnesses assert that it has been an ignominious failure.

From independent personal observation in two States where the law has obtained, an observation extending over several years, we believe the facts to be these:—It has, to a degree, lessened the gross amount of liquor sold and used in those States, though not to a large degree.

But on the other hand it has converted into law-breakers multitudes who would not willingly be so. In its effort to make good citizens of the few weak and vicious it has made bad citizens of very many strong and upright. This seems to be the judgment of the people generally in several States, which, after an experiment of several years with Constitutional prohibition, have deliberately reversed their previous judgment. The law enforcing power of a Commonwealth is able to carry just so much load, and no more. If it be overburdened it does not work up to the point of its highest ability and stop there, but it collapses.

In this State this law-enforcing sense has been able to sustain the present regulating and restraining system of "High License." The peril of overloading it until it collapses is very great. There is every reason to believe that the large disreputable class who feel the present restraint will vote for the Amendment in the confident hope that by laying too heavy a load upon law, all law upon this subject will break down. There will be every reason to expect this. The effort to embody the law in the Constitution which it is difficult to change, instead of in Statutes, which the law making power can readily modify or reverse, is an admission that the legislators who represent the sense of the community, from time to time, cannot be trusted. The only reason alleged for trying to put it into the Constitution is that the law cannot be depended upon. We believe this to be true. But if that be so, what reason is there to expect that the General Assembly will be either able or willing "to enact laws with adequate penalties for the enforcement" of the amendment?

As Christians and as citizens, therefore, it would seem to be our part to sustain the present method which is equitable and possible, rather than to imperil all we have already gained by striving after a chimera.

SELECTIONS.

To an unchanged person, Heaven itself would be no heaven. Were it possible for a sinner in his unrenewed state to enter that blissful world, he would not be happy there. The holy atmosphere would not suit him. The employment there would not be congenial to him. The companionship would be distasteful. It is true that heaven has been prepared for us by the Son of God Himself; but it is equally true that we must be prepared for heaven, or we can never dwell there. We must be moulded and fashioned according to the divine image.—Bishop Oxenden.

AD SPIRITUM SANCTUM.

Come, Thou Holy Comforter,
Be Heaven's own interpreter;
  Thy bright rays impart.
Come! Thou Father of the poor.
Come! Thou giver of all store.
  Come and light this heart.

Comforter the wealthiest,
Be my soul's most welcome guest,
  Be my sweet repose.
Rest me in my daily care,
Temper me the noon-day glare,
  Solace all my woes.

O most blessed Light Divine,
Fill this inmost heart of mine,
  Faithful unto Thee.
Only Thy Divinity
Recreates humanity
  Harmless, strong, and free.

Wash out every sordid stain,
Water Thou this arid plain,
  Heal my bruised sore.
Bend the stubborn iron will,
Nurse the truly weak and ill,
  Govern evermore.

Give to Thy own faithful ones,
Eager to be called Thy sons,
  All Thy sevenfold grace.
Give to virtue her reward,
Give a pardon's dry-shod ford,
  Give to see God's face.

TRUSTING IN GOD.

A bold Frenchman, while hunting in the Alps for the mountain goat, fell over a precipice upon a ledge, back of which was a cave. How to get away he knew not. A day and night passed and he was still a prisoner, expecting to be starved to death. But just as his heart began to fail, he saw a tiny tuft of the blue fringed-gentian.

That little flower saved his life! How? He knew that wind must have borne the seed from a distance, and that God's sun and rain must have made it grow. He said to himself, "God has cared for that little wild flower which grows where no one can see it but himself. Shall He not care for me also?"

Filled with this thought he grew happy, and began singing a song. His voice was heard by some shepherds on the mountain-top. They shouted. He answered. Guided by his voice, they lowered ropes down to his prison-house and drew him up. And thus, you see, his life was saved by the little blue fringed-gentian—one of the slender wild-flowers which you may find in the woods. For the little flower taught him to trust in the good God who cares for all.

One of the saints asked a monk to teach him a Psalm. He began with that, "I said, I will take heed to my ways that I offend not with my tongue." Having learnt the first verse, he asked to have it explained; and having heard the explanation, said he would not learn any more till he had done what this first verse commanded, and would afterwards learn the rest. He did not return for several years, and the monk meeting him, asked, why he did not learn the rest of the psalm; he replied, he had not yet done what was contained in the first verse.—Savonarola.

THE PERMANENCY OF RELIGION.

If one man's life could be protracted through three or four centuries, the changes which he would witness would be indeed astonishing; but certain things, it may be confidently predicted, would not have changed, for they have never been other than what they are. Sin, pain, death are what they were in the days of the Tudors, in the days of the Crusades, in the days of the apostles and evangelists, and in the days of David. Sin, pain, death, are the permanent elements in the life of human beings, and because they are permanent, religion, too, will last. Only a robust faith in the Unseen, only faith in our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ can relieve the human heart when face to face with the solemn, irreversible conditions of our life. So long as they last the religion of the Crucified will last too. If the sense of sin could be drugged by a false philosophy, if pain could be forgotten, if chemical science could only arrest the march of death, then the religion of Jesus Christ might die; but, as matters stand, it is too intimately associated with the facts of human life, it strikes its roots too deep in the experiences of the human heart to vanish at the bidding of any unbelievers. So long as men sin, so long as men suffer, so long as men die, Jesus Christ our Lord will be believed in, will be worshiped as the Light of the World, as the Divine Master, whose teaching and whose death has made the darkness of human destiny to be light indeed.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week from 11 to 12 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 to 1 P. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

THERE ARE FEW PERSONS better known to the Church people of this City than the Rev. Dr. Davies, rector of St. Peter's Church. It is now announced that he has accepted his election to the Bishopric of Michigan. His removal will leave a vacancy hard to fill in the rectorship of his old parish, where he seems to hold a place in the affection of his people quite unique. He has been identified with the affairs of this Diocese for many years, and will bear with him the earnest good wishes of many warm friends, and will probably leave fewer enemies than would any other man in the Church.

THE DISASTER AT JOHNSTOWN appealed most powerfully to the sympathy of our people, and it will be seen that they were not ungenerous in their response. The amount reported in this paper is only that which actually went through the Rector's hands. If the amounts given otherwise by the members of the Parish were included, it would probably make the amount at least five times as great. It will be observed that the amount given went directly to the relief of all sorts and conditions of men who were suffering. It was not sent for the rebuilding of our Church swept away, or to our own Church people more than to any others. It would seem that at such a time humane claims should override ecclesiastical ones. That Church will be most successful that most completely identifies itself with the common needs of men. But this being done, it must not be forgotten that those of our own household of faith have claims also. Our Church in that ill-fated town was obliterated, and the Rector with his wife and family were all drowned. To rebuild and start all over again will be a hard task. When people are stripped bare a church is not the first or most pressing necessity. There are a thousand claims upon their new accumulations before they get to that. Those immediately affected are not going to get to it for a long time. Don't forget them. Help them. The Rector will be only too glad to forward gifts to that object.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

LA CROSSE, Wis., June 24th, 1889.

Rev. and Dear Bro. :—I acknowledge very thankfully The Churchman, through the kindness of " St. Stephen's Altar Society." Will you please remember my grateful acknowledgement.

Sincerely,
THOS. K. ALLEN.

THE CORNER-STONE of St. Mary's Church, Wayne, was laid on Thursday, June 27th. The church is built by Rev. Dr. Thomas K. Conrad, the rector, as a memorial of his father and mother. South of it is rising a commodious parish building, and east of the church Dr. Conrad's residence. All three buildings are of white Avondale stone. The parish building is to be finished in September and the church in January.

THE CHARTER AND BY-LAWS of the Drexel College for girls, at the same place, have been published in an official pamphlet.

The incorporators are the first Trustees, viz.:

The By-laws provide for the election of a Board of Managers, consisting of twenty-four women, who are, in the first instance: Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel, Mrs. J. Bellangee Cox, Mrs. T. K. Conrad. Mrs. James W. Paul, Jr., Mrs. John R. Fell, Mrs. John R. Drexel, Mrs. A. J. Drexel, Jr., Mrs. Henry C. Gibson, Mrs. George W. Childs, Mrs. Joshua Lippincott, Mrs. James Rhodes, Miss Martha Brown, Mrs. Wayne McVeagh, Mrs. Harry Biddle, Mrs. Edward Roberts, Mrs. Horace Fassitt, Mrs. George R. Preston, Mrs. George D. Krumbhaar, Mrs. J. Dundas Lippincott, Miss C. Smith, Mrs. Henry J. Rowland, Miss Marion Biddle, Mrs. Arthur V. Meigs, Mrs. George B. Roberts.

THE Presbyterian Review tells a good story of how the Anglican Bishop of Saskatchewan in old days, when population was sparse in Western Manitoba, stayed all night at the house of a Presbyterian of the old school. Finding that the children had not been baptized he kindly offered to baptize them, having informed the family of course that he was a Bishop of the Church of England. "Tank ye, sir," said the good wife: "but the puir bairns hae gane sae lang without being bapteezed that I think we'll wait noo till a regularly-ordained minister comes!"

Two English women of the respectable farmer class, on leaving Church, were discussing the sermon. One said, "Oh! it were a beautiful sermon, weren't it?" "Yes," replied the other, "it were beautiful." "And did you understand it?" said the first woman. "Oh! no," said the other; "I should not be so presumptuous."

SELECTIONS.

At Trent's famed Council, when, on Reason's side,
A Frenchman's voice assailed the Pontiff's pride,
Some Romish priest, the Gallic name to mock,
Exclaimed, 'Tis but the crowing of a Cock!'
'So call it,' 'twas replied; 'We're well content—
If when the cock crows, Peter would repent.'

A QUARTER of a century ago the Rev. Dr. Hume, of Liverpool, told the following story at the first congress: The Bishop of Chester (Dr. Sumner) was going to hold an ordination, when a dissenting minister came to him and said: "My lord, I come to apply for admission to Holy Orders in the Church of England." "Well," said his lordship, "I require thirty new ordinations—that is sixty including priests. How many applications do you suppose I have from persons who, like yourself, are dissenters from the Church?" The dissenting minister did not know. "Just twenty-nine," replied his lordship, "and you will make up the required number of thirty."

A MOUNTAIN INCIDENT.

[The following story was told me by a young man who is an earnest Communicant of the Church. He witnessed all the incidents related, and read the burial service over the body of the child. I asked him to write out the story, and now send it to you for publication. It is simply an incident in frontier life. I am thankful to have, here and there, a man who is willing to do such deeds as this.—L. R. Brewer.]

We were seated around our cabin fire one evening early in the Spring of 1887. The Winter had been long and cold. We had passed it on a ranch in Northern Montana, and our first experience in the Rocky Mountains had been severe. We were thoroughly tired of the darkness that had shrouded the greater part of the day, and of the cold so crisp and keen. A week or two previously we had welcomed the first discernible green on the hills, and were waiting anxiously for the full Spring.

The pitch fire was burning bright, and its fitful glare furnished the only light in the room. Each of us was intent on his own thoughts.

Suddenly the door was pushed open, and John Andrews stalked in. We saluted him with the usual "Hello, John," and resumed our meditations. John settled himself on my trunk, his favorite seat, and slowly filled his pipe from his coat pocket. John Andrews is a study. He is short, stout and old. His piercing hazel eye is overhung by a shaggy brow. His spirit is a fountain of wit and mirth, while in appearance he is as sombre as a churchyard. He is a cyclopædia of practical knowledge, and a catholicon for ills arising from lack of handicraft.

He filled his pipe gravely and silently. He did not respond to our salutation, he scarcely looked at us. I knew by his actions that he had something on his mind, but waited for him to speak. Striking a light with great deliberation, he smoked a while in silence.

At last he leaned forward, took the pipe from his mouth, and broke the silence with these words: "I've got a mean job fur to-morrer—got to make a coffin."

"A coffin!" we responded, "who is dead?"

"Bowlin's 'kid,' he died 's'afternoon."

"Is that so?" we exclaimed.

"That's what it is," said Andrews, and he relapsed into a silence that was not broken, except by his steady puffing and the cracking of the fire, until he departed with a "so long."

The next morning Bowlin came to the ranch and asked me if I would "make a few remarks at the grave." He didn't "like to bury the 'kid' without anything."

One o'clock found me at his ranch. The day was beautiful and sunny, and the air was clear and crisp, so clear that the distant mountains were robbed of their purple, and the peaks seemed to tower above us. The tender shoots of bunch grass had tinted the hills the faintest green, and the distinctness of the chattering of a magpie impressed me with the intensity of the silence that prevailed. John Andrews had completed the coffin when I found him. It was made of a few boards he had found about the ranch. He was arranging an old white skirt around it, that the rough boards might seem less crude, and that there might be some appearance of an attempt at respectability.

I cannot describe the feeling that came over me when I realized that this was the last earthly resting place of a mortal body. I was conscious of a strong oppression. I was brought face to face with the real humiliation of death—a few old boards and a white skirt!

Those who live in cities and see death in gorgeous attire, cannot understand its degradation. In the wildness of the mountains death is awful. Its very approach overawes the friends of its victim. It comes and finds no opponent, and carries away the soul amid a fearful hush. A grave is dug, there is no one to tell of the beautiful hereafter, the body is interred, a sigh of relief, and all is over.

A farm wagon, with four men; a two-wheel gig and two women; a spring wagon, with a man, woman and the coffin; and old Bill Cary, on horseback, left the ranch and slowly descended the road. The little cemetery, with its four or five graves, near the post-office of C——, was our destination. We drove slowly down the steep grade into the beautiful canyon, a solemn cortege of death amid the gaiety of a new life. We found a newly made grave, and the poor little coffin was lowered into it with straps taken from the harness of the horses.

A number of cow-boys and freighters were attracted to the spot, and stood about the grave in curious but reverential expectancy. They removed their hats as I removed mine, and a deep silence preceded the solemn words of the burial service, more solemn than they had ever seemed before.

"I am the resurrection and the life, saith the LORD." The very mountains seemed wrapped in attention. "He that believeth in me, tho' he were dead yet shall he live, and who so liveth and believeth in me shall never die." How beautiful were these words amid the grandeur that surrounds the spot, a cathedral whose walls were the canyon's sides, whose ceiling was the sky, whose choristers were the warbling waters, and whose altar was the Throne of GOD.

"Earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust." As the earth fell upon the coffin the father felt the pang of the burial. We cannot realize that our dead are gone until the relentless earth calls back her own with these mournful, hollow sounds.

The shadows of Mount Aldine had enveloped our cabin, and darkness was coming on when we reached our ranch. I was still bound by a feeling of thoughtfulness and quietude when I again took my place at the fire. But the bright and crisp air of the following morning dissipated the last remnant of my solemn mood, and once more my thoughts ended with the present.

A VISIT TO MRS. LIVINGSTONE'S GRAVE.

In a recently published work on Tropical Africa, Professor Drummond thus describes a visit he paid to the grave of the wife of the great explorer and the daughter of Dr. Robert Moffat: "Late in the afternoon we reached the spot—a low ruined hut 100 yards from the river's bank, with a broad veranda shading its crumbling walls. A grass-grown path straggled to the doorway, and the fresh prints of a hippopotamus told how neglected the spot is. Pushing the door open, we found ourselves in a long dark room, its mud-floor broken into fragments, and remains of native fires betraying its latest occupants. Turning to the right, we entered a smaller chamber, the walls bare and stained, with two glassless windows facing the river. The evening sun, setting over the far-off Morumballa Mountains, filled the room with its soft glow, and took our thoughts back to that Sunday evening, twenty years ago, when in this same bedroom, at this same hour, Livingstone knelt over his dying wife, and witnessed the great sunset of her life. Under a huge baobab tree—a miracle of vegetable vitality and luxuriance—is Mrs. Livingstone's grave. The picture in Livingstone's book represents the place as being well kept and surrounded with neatly planted trees. But now it is an utter wilderness, matted with jungle grass, and trodden by the beasts of the forest; and as I looked at the forsaken mound and contrasted it with her husband's tomb in Westminster Abbey, I thought perhaps the woman's love which had brought her to a spot like this might be not less worthy of immortality.

"The day will come when that now 'forsaken mound' will be sacred of African Christianity. The cause for which the daughter of Robert Moffat and the wife of David Livingstone lived and died will triumph gloriously. Africa will be redeemed."

ST. SIMEON'S CHURCH.

Plans have been finally adopted for the buildings of this young and vigorous mission parish. Ground will be broken this month and the work pressed to inclose the church and parish building before frost. In the drawings a rectory is provided for, but this will not be built at present. The estimated cost of the church, exclusive of special windows, organ, and some other contemplated adornments, is $40,000, of which amount $36,000 is subscribed. The remainder it is hoped to secure before the completion of the church. The parish building is to be the gift of a friend of the pastor and parish.

The mission was begun October 17th, 1886, in a room over a stable. Mr. Cope took charge of it in the following February, and in a temporary structure, enlarged again and again, it has grown to a parish of three hundred and fifty communicants, with a Sunday-school of five hundred.

The church property is on the south side of Lehigh avenue, between Ninth and Hutchinson streets. The church will be on the corner of Ninth and Lehigh avenue, with a chancel at the eastern end. It will be 123 feet in depth and 70 feet in width. It is of the English decorated Gothic style, and consists of nave, aisles and transepts. This, with the chancel, makes a plan perfectly cruciform. There will be a stone clerestory carried on stone columns. The entire interior of the church will be lined with buff brick, with dark brick wainscoting, and will have buff Ohio sandstone trimmings. The construction of the roof will be exposed, and will be of worked yellow pine. The windows will all be ornamented with rich tracery. The organ chamber is on the northern side of the chancel, opening into it and the transept. The sacristy, vestry and choir-room are on the south of the chancel, and connect the church with the rectory, which is on the extreme south side of the lot facing Ninth street. The tower is at the western end of the church, and forms an entrance to both church and parish building. It will be finished with pinnacles and battlements and furnished with a tubular chime. The windows will be of stained glass. The chancel will be floored with tile, and there will be a reredos of oak. The vestibules and aisles will be floored in such a manner that they can be tiled at some future time. There will be an air space between the ceiling and the roof for ventilation. The vestry room measures 10 by 17 feet, and the choir room 25 by 30 feet. The gas fixtures and other metal furniture will be of wrought iron. Both church and parish building will be heated by steam supplied in separate systems.

The parish building occupies the western portion of the lot with a frontage of 50 feet on Lehigh Avenue, extending south on Hutchinson Street 95 feet. It consists of basement, which will be occupied for a portion of the gymnasium, toilet-rooms, etc.; first floor with Sunday-School and guild rooms; second floor with entertainment hall and guild rooms, and third floor, which will have accommodations for the sexton and his family, and assistant minister, and the lighter part of the gymnasium. The Sunday-school has a ceiling of 16 feet, and is furnished with Wilson's patent rolling sash, so that class-rooms may be divided or opened into the main room. The infant school is provided for over the vestibule of the church and parish building, in a space of 13 by 50 feet.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week from 11 to 12 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH WILL BE OPEN for morning service and sermon every Sunday in August at 11 o'clock. Evening prayer will be omitted during this month.

THE REV. DR. PETERS, formerly connected with the Church Woman's Institute of the Parish, now at the head of the Babylonian Expedition, has been paying a short visit to this city, but sailed for Europe to rejoin his party on Wednesday, July 31st.

ALL ACTIVE CHURCH WORK in the Parish has been necessarily suspended for the Summer season, owing to the absence of the people from the city. The time of work seems to grow shorter each year as the custom is becoming established for the people to remain in the country as long as possible in the Fall, so that it may be said but six months are left for really active and successful undertakings. At present the church seems dreadfully deserted.

CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY OF ST. STEPHEN'S PARISH.

This Society was started May 18th, 1888, by nine ladies, mostly of the Parish.

The object of this Society is to give fresh air excursions, a good time, and other aid to poor children, under the direct supervision of its active members.

Although the Society belongs to St. Stephen's Parish, the children are taken from all parts of the city without any questions as to the religious belief of the parents. Some might say, what is the use of this when they have the Country week?

Many mothers do not like to send their children away for a whole week, others cannot spare them, but they are willing and glad to have them go for an afternoon outing.

The writer visits many of the small streets of the city, and is asked by the children, when are we going on our next excursion? The delight on the faces of the children and mothers, is enought to show any one that such outings are necessary.

Many of the children we had out in 1888, had never been inside of the Park; it seems hardly possible, but it was so.

From May 18th, 1888, to Jan. 1st, we had about 75 children out on these afternoon excursions, going once a month. Of course, this was very few to what there are in the city, but with the funds we had it was all we could do. Donations were small, but all were glad to help us, and each month up to this time we have met with nothing but encouragement. These 75 children, different ones each month, were taken to different parts of the Park, sometimes giving them a treat in the merry-go-rounds, swings, goat carriages, and once a stage ride and a trip on the boat up the Schuylkill. They were always treated to a lunch, and occasionally a glass of milk.

In January these same children were given a stereopticon entertainment by the Society. It was held in St. Stephen's Sunday School room, and the Sunday School children were our guests for the evening. Mr. Wilbur, who showed the pictures, giving us quite a large donation towards the entertainment, which was said by all to be delightful; and the children are constantly asking when we intend to have another, which I hope we may be able to do this Fall.

Besides the entertainment, each child went home with gifts and a small souvenir. This was all done with $32.24.

We also received donations of clothing, and have helped the children and families in many other ways. This ends 1888.

The President is surprised at the good behaviour of the children, all do what they are told, in hopes that they may get another outing.

After January the children, many of them, were entertained in the Guild Hall of the Parish building, playing games, singing and reading, it being too cold to take them any place.

The next thing was to get money for our Spring work, and how to do it was the question, having on hand a very small amount to do it with With the kind advice of Mr. Wood we went to work, and April 24th, 1889, had in St. George's Hall a very fine concert. The talent being so fine, of course, the hall was well filled. With its proceeds we were able, May 18th, 1889, to celebrate our Anniversary by taking our first trip to the Zoological Gardens, taking 26 children, giving them a nice lunch at the Restaurant, the Proprietor, who is a member of St. Stephen's, donating that part.

Next trip, June 13th, 30 children were taken to the Centennial Grounds, but a heavy storm came up, and we were obliged to take them into Memorial Hall until it was over.

The baskets of provisions were all before them, but each child behaved nicely, when told we were not allowed to eat in the building. When the storm was over they were taken to the restaurant, the President asking permission to use the porch. For their disappointment each child was given a saucer of ice cream, and that seemed to make up for all.

Our next trip, July 13th, seems to have been enjoyed the most. We engaged a four-horse omnibus to take 30 children and ten ladies out to the Burd Orphan Asylum Grove. Dr. Snively very kindly offering the Grove to us. It had been threatening rain and raining at intervals all day, however 22 children and 6 ladies and omnibus came, so off we started.

The more the wagon jolted the better the children liked it; they sang most of the way going out and coming in, and were very happy. Just as we got out it commenced raining hard, what to do we could not tell, but Miss Bullock, one of the teachers at the Burd Asylum very kindly invited us into the children's playroom, the little girls giving up their room to us. There the children played games and ten-pins, and enjoyed all very much. They were then taken on the porch and given lunch by the ladies, afterwards treated to milk by the teachers and little girls of the Burd Asylum. Everything was very enjoyable; the children being able to get a swing in the Grove before starting for home.

Besides all this, many of the children have been given clothing, and several pairs of shoes have been bought, so that the little ones could go on their outings. The Society also helped the sufferers at Johnstown with a five dollar donation.

We have helped in many little ways, sometimes in money and eatables.

We are still nine Active members and 14 Contributing members. We would be glad to add more on our list of active and contributing members. Our work never stops all the year round, and the more help we have the better we can work.

Besides taking the children out we try to have some kind word for the mothers, they are glad to see us, and seem very grateful for the little we do. We have received a number of donations from different ladies of the church and friends outside, but would be glad for donations of any sort, either in money, clothing, tickets for Zoological Garden, or tickets for a boat excursion, or anything that would help us to add to these children's happiness, for some of them have very little indeed.

We could tell of some very hard cases, particularty down near the water front, where it seems impossible to get these little ones to have a glimpse of green grass and fresh air.

Any donations sent to St. Stephen's Parish House for the Children's Friend Society gladly received.

THOUGH faith in the old religions is certainly declining in Japan, yet there are still over 250,000 Buddhist priests in the Empire—over eight times as many priests as Christians—and the old superstitions have yet a very strong hold upon the masses.

SELECTIONS.

EXAMPLE.

We scatter the seeds with careless hand,
And dream we ne'er shall see them more;
But for a thousand years
Their fruit appears,
In weeds that mar the land,
Or healthful store.

The deeds we do, the words we say,
Into the still air they seem to fleet,
We count them ever past;
But they shall last;
In the dread judgment they
And we shall meet.

I charge thee by the years gone by
For the love's sake of brethren dear,
Keep thou the one true way,
In work and play,
Lest in that world their cry
Of woe thou hear.

—John Keble.

I WILL REJOICE.

I know not how soon for me wild affliction may darken, and the grief storm come, and the death-shade gather. But, blessed be my Redeemer, I do know, I do know that amid the strife and the storm my God will be with me, and in the shadow of his glorious wings I will rejoice, I will rejoice. O, thrice blessed assurance! And who that hath a sorrow to expect, a beloved one to die, a death pang to suffer, who of these mortal-immortals would not then be a Christian? Why, tell me why, ye beloved ones, ye will not come to my Saviour—from these shadows and storms of life to his strong and sheltering pinions? O, harken ye to-night to his most tender and beautiful words," "How often would I have gathered you as a hen gathereth her young under her wings, but ye would not." "How often!" In every sorrow you have experienced, in every gladness that has comforted you, in every mercy you have received, in every ordinance you have witnessed, in every sweet wooing of the Spirit, in every wild thought of eternity, O, in them all hath Jesus my Master, my blessed and loving and dying Redeemer, been moving upon your hearts, feeling tenderly for your affections, and striving longingly and ever to gather you from the oncoming tempest unto the strength of his wings. Yea, "from the oncoming tempest;" for the tempest will come and ye will need the shelter. Your life will lose all its beauty, and your dear friends will die, and your home will become desolate, and ye yourselves will lie in the wild death agony, and in the midst of the down-falling of your mortal tabernacle will the soul rush forth to the dread pomps of the judgment and the great realities of eternity. And it will be a storm and a tempest. Then ye will need a great wing. Come then to Jesus. How often, how often, hath he called you! And now again he calleth you. He calleth you tenderly, sweetly, earnestly. And O, my son, that ye were wise, that ye knew the terror of the great storm and the sweet rapture of the shelter. Would to God we could tell you how blessed we are in him. How sweeter than the coming of an angel is it to have Christ walking toward the imperilled bark in the hour of the tempest. Hear then, that beloved voice sounding out even now amid the gloom of the oncoming tempest. O, I would, I would, that as a homesick child to the mother's bosom, as the imperilled bird to the sheltering parent pinions, ye would rush to the shadow of his wings and rejoice, forever rejoice.—Dr. Charles Wadsworth.

HOW TO STUDY THE BIBLE.

Mr. Gladstone has written a letter to the leader of a Bible class in Manchester, on how to study the Bible. He recommends the use of the table of lessons appointed by the Church, and especially urges two things:—"Christianity in Christ and nearness to him and to his image is the end of all your efforts. Give precedence, therefore, to the gospels. Remember that in the Scriptures the purposes are, one, to feed the people of God in green pastures, the other to afford proof of the doctrine. This last is good and desirable work, but not for us all. It requires external helps, more learning and good guides, more knowledge of the historical development of our religion, which development of our religion is one of the most wonderful facts of all human history, and affords one of the strongest demonstrations of its truth and of the power and goodness of God.

MISTAKES OF LIFE.

Somebody has condensed the mistakes of life and arrived at the conclusion that there are fourteen of them. Most people would say, if they told the truth, that there was no limit to the mistakes of life; that they were like the drops in the ocean, or the sands of the shore in number, but it is well to be accurate. Here, then, are fourteen great mistakes: "It is a great mistake to set up our own standard of right and wrong, and judge people accordingly; to measure the enjoyment of others by our own; to expect uniformity of opinion in this world; to look for judgment and experience in youth; to endeavor to mould all dispositions alike; to yield to immaterial trifles; to look for perfection in our own actions; to worry ourselves and others with what cannot be remedied; not to alleviate all that needs alleviation as far as lies in our power; not to make allowances for the infirmities of others; to consider everything impossible that we cannot perform; to believe only what our finite minds can grasp; to expect to be able to understand everything.—Exchange.

UNNOTICED LABOR.

Many Christians have to endure the solitude of unnoticed labor. They are serving God in a way which is exceedingly useful, but not at all noticeable. How very sweet to many workers are those little corners of the newspapers and magazines which describe their labors and successes; yet some, who are doing what God will think a great deal more of at the last, never saw their names in print. Yonder beloved brother is plodding away in a country village; nobody knows anything about him, but he is bringing souls to God. Unknown to fame, the angels are acquainted with him, and a few precious ones whom he has led to Jesus know him well.

Perhaps yonder sister has a class in the Sunday-school; nothing striking in her or in her class; nobody thinks of her as a remarkable worker; she is a flower that blooms almost unseen, but she is none the less fragrant.

There is a Bible woman; she is mentioned in the report as making so many visits a week, but nobody discovers all she is doing for the poor and needy, and how many are saved in the Lord through her instrumentality. Hundreds of God's dear servants are serving him without the encouragement of man's approving eye, yet they are not alone; the Father is with them.

Never mind where you work; care more how you work; never mind who sees, if God approves.

If he smiles, be content. We cannot always be sure when we are most useful. It is not the acreage you sow, it is the multiplication which God gives the seed which makes up the harvest. You have less to do with being successful than with being faithful. Your main comfort is that in your labor you are not alone. For God, the eternal One, who guides the marches of the stars, is with you.—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

EDUCATION AND INDUSTRY.

Many persons believe that under the present system of education young people are acquiring a distaste for manual labor, and that there is, consequently, danger that the trades and agricultural occupations will be deserted by all but the most inefficient classes of workmen. But the London Spectator directs attention to the fact that no dislike of work, even of the roughest character, has appeared among two of the best educated races. The Scotch, who have been taught for two hundred years and are now more thoroughly trained than English national schoolboys, show no disposition to avoid labor, but are remarkable for persistent and fairly contented industry. The Prussian peasants "who are as educated as the English will be twenty years hence, work exceedingly hard, and in the country, where the holdings are their own, show none of the resentment at their fate which is manifested in the towns in the form of Socialistic aspirations. Gardeners, who all over Great Britain are the best instructed of manual laborers, work, more especially when working for themselves, with unusual diligence; and it is a matter of constant observation that a laborer who happens by any accident to be "a bit of a scholar" can be depended upon when work presses and every man is required. The people of Rome, who can read and write, are far more diligent than the Neapolitans, who cannot; and the best workmen in Italy are those who have passed through the army and obtained what is practically an education. There seems to be no a priori reason why it should be otherwise.—Popular Science Monthly.

OFFERTORY FOR SEPTEMBER.

For General Charities.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week from 11 to 12 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

THE SERVICES IN ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH during the month of September will be held every Sunday, in the morning, at 11 o'clock as usual, and in the evening at 5 o'clock. On every Saint's Day there will be a celebration of the Holy Communion at 11 A. M.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL of this Parish will re-open on the first Sunday in October. The scholars and teachers have had a long vacation, and will be gladly welcomed back to the school again. The past year was a year of active work and, from all that was evident, there is no reason to doubt much good was done. There are many children round about the neighborhood of the church who are attached to the school, and others there are who ought to be gathered in and put under Christian influences and trained up in the way that may help them to be of service to themselves and to the community. We have a host of earnest and active women teachers, but too small a number of men. In a congregation as large as St. Stephen's, and to which so large a proportion of men belong, it is reasonable to expect that out of this number, some earnest Churchmen can be found, this Fall, who will come forward and offer themselves as teachers in the school. Much has been done. Much more can be done. Who will engage in this work? Let the Rector know of this resolve, on your part, to take a class this coming season.

THE Times OF THIS CITY in making mention of the various places of interest in Philadelphia, speaks thus of Christ Church:

What true Philadelphian does not want to know that Christ Church is the "mother church" of Episcopalians in the United States? Or that during the Revolution Benjamin Franklin was a vestryman and Francis Hopkinson organist? He already knows that Washington attended service here while President, and the place of his pew is still shown. Also that Bishop White was baptized and buried here. Perhaps he may not know, as the same story is told of other colonial churches, that the communion service was presented by Queen Anne.

Some may wonder why there is a vacant niche in the front wall of the church. Before the Revolution this contained a statue of King George. This was removed as soon as the Colonies declared independence, and has never been replaced by anything else.

And then in mentioning St. Stephen's Church, says, that we are apt to forget its antiquity—but we would be obliged to travel many a long day before we could find a finer specimen of Norman architecture than its gray granite front. Then, too, the church contains some of the finest statuary in the United States. The Mosaic picture of the "Last Supper" over the altar is a copy of the one in Westminster Abbey, and the only one of the kind in the country.

THE NEW TESTAMENT is occupied from first to last—specially the Sermon on the Mount—in showing that acts are nothing except as they are fruits of a state, except as they indicate what the man is; that words are nothing except as they express a mind or purpose.—F. D. Maurice.

SELECTIONS.

Why thus longing, thus forever sighing
For the far off, unattained and dim,
While the beautiful, all round thee lying,
Offers up its low, perpetual hymn?

Wouldst thou listen to its gentle teaching,
All thy restless yearnings it would still;
Leaf and flower and laden bee are preaching
Thine own sphere, though humble, first to fill.

Poor indeed, thou must be, if around thee
Thou no ray of light and joy canst throw,
If no silken cord of love hath bound thee
To some little world through weal and woe;

If no dear eyes thy fond love can brighten—
No fond voices answer to thine own;
If no brother's sorrow thou canst lighten,
By daily sympathy and gentle tone.

—Harriet Winslow.

CHRISTIAN PROGRESS.

The Providence Journal has the following:—

Without insisting on an accurate definition of orthodoxy, as Dr. Lyman Abbott is inclined to do in his recent controversy with Rev. M. J. Savage, it would be idle to deny the modifications of Christian doctrine that have been forced upon the Protestant Church during the latter part of the present century. These changes may not be as great as Mr. Savage claims, and they are very far from indicating "the inevitable overthrow of orthodoxy," as he assumes, but they have been great enough to give some ground for the assumption in circles where the wish is father to the thought. Orthodoxy is indeed a variable term, the heresy of one generation being often the orthodoxy of the next, a process which has been going on at a varying rate of speed since the Christian theology was formulated, but it may readily be admitted that no other century has seen such rapid changes as our own. This, however, is only natural, and it is but a part of the great intellectual movement which is re-examining and recasting all the institutions which are our inheritance from earlier ages. The various sciences have all restated themselves, and must do the same again with nearly every new decade; old theories of government have been revolutionized; while, in the opinion of calm observers, no social or economic changes of the past have been so great as will be those which are impending. It is, therefore, not surprising that theological doctrines, for the exact and final statement of which no divine authority could ever be justly claimed, should undergo the same modifications. The only fact which makes it surprising to any is that divine authority for these statements has been unjustly claimed. They have been formulated and announced with a Thus saith the Lord, and the dogmatism of the Athanasian creed has been too closely followed by too many teachers of theology. The inevitable reaction, which always follows when the tension has been great, has doubtless set in. Unitarianism early in this century forced a restatement of the doctrine of the Trinity, Universalism has done the same for the doctrine of rewards and punishments, criticism has greatly modified old theories respecting the Bible, while science has given us new conceptions of the universe, of the methods if not of the character of the Creator, and of the origin, history, and apparent destiny of man. A vast amount of knowledge, consisting of facts which are beyond dispute, is now in our possession, and Christian doctrine, like everything else, is obliged to express itself in accordance with them. It will probably be found that it is perfectly willing to do this. It may be excused for having been slow about it, since so much has been at stake, and the facts only recently, and so rapidly, made clear.

Short-sighted persons are quick to answer that because so many modifications of Christian doctrine have been made, and because they discern others which must be made, that the whole system is doomed, and already the advanced guards of agnosticism and unbelief begin to sound a note of triumph over its fall. This, to say the least, is premature. Christian doctrine has shown remarkable vitality in its conflicts with various forms of scepticism, and its hold upon the world is greater to-day than ever before. It may be taken for granted that the last word has not been spoken yet. There must be something permanently true and beautiful in doctrines which have endured so long, which have appealed to so many minds, and which have brought so much of actual blessing to mankind. Whatever is true in them will take care of itself and cannot be destroyed, any more than any other truth of science or government which has made itself really useful to mankind. Whatever truth there is in the Christian religion, duly appearing after every possible investigation has been made, and stating itself in the best language of its own time, is all the orthodoxy that any one need to be concerned about, or which can be preserved.

Meanwhile it needs to be remembered that practical Christianity is something very different from its doctrines. It is above all other things a way of life, embodying a pure morality, principles of action which may guide one in all the details of life, and teaching a dependence upon the highest Powers, which never fails to be inspiring and comforting. It is unquestionably a regenerating influence, and however clearly its results are seen in the redemption of individuals from sinful living, its beneficial results upon society are still more apparent. There is no serviceable institution of mankind which it does not foster, no disastrous custom which it does not condemn and set itself to destroy. Under the control of bigoted authorities, and with a mistaken idea of its own nature, it has sometimes been made the opponent of liberty, learning and progress; but in so doing it has been placed in a false position, and its fostering care of these conditions of human happiness and prosperity, wherever it has been free to show its real spirit, has proved how beneficial it can be. Ever since the great revival of learning began to change all human institutions for the better, it has been working itself free from the superstitions and traditions of men which have obscured its divine truths, and proportionately as it has done this its numbers and influence have increased. It is more powerful to-day than ever before, because it is more spiritually discerned, its conceptions more rational, its methods wiser, and the life of its members conformed to a higher standard. That Christianity has further progress to make in this direction is certain, and it may be trusted to make it rapidly, compelled both by outward criticism and a progressive force from within, which is now too strong to be resisted, and which well understands its strength. The best judgment that can be formed of Christianity is that it is in the line of human progress, gradually modified by and conforming to whatever truth is actually established. Meanwhile it is the highest form of religion which the world has, and without any trembling as to its ultimate destiny, with ceaseless energy and with much self-sacrifice, it is laboring for the elevation of humanity.

THE New Century Guild in Philadelphia has a gymnasium where tired working women may exercise; exhibitions of dress reform garments with patterns from which they may be cheaply made; lectures on hygiene with charts and casts of the female form, showing the co-relation of the organs; experiments in ventilation so impressive that the girls have begged for fresh air in workrooms and have often obtained it; cooking classes with a special branch for the preparation of invalid food; emergency lectures, classes in all useful subjects; a mending bureau for helpless bachelors and incompetent house-wives; trained menders who go out by the day to renovate the family laundry, and who patch anything from a stocking to a lace curtain; and peripatetic house-workers who may be engaged by the hour or the day to dust parlors, clean lamps or silver, do light housework and relieve overburdened mothers. One branch of the guild pledges its members to perform each day some service for one whom there is no obligation to serve; and in a paper published by the Guild is recorded every deed of unusual thoughtfulness or kindness on the part of any proprietor, on the principle that one good act encouraged begets many more.

What are the requisites for effective club work among girls, is often asked. Brains, or enthusiasm, or willing youth, singly or united. A special obligation towards their poorer sisters enslaved to toil rests upon young women of leisure. Time, individual effort, personal interest and influence are a gift more precious than money. In every successful club, while older and wiser heads direct, the active work is done by the young. In New York, fully one hundred girls supposed to be mere idle, exclusive, fashionable belles, may be found on certain inviolable nights, simply dressed, in lovely fellowship and sympathy, serving, guiding, amusing their working friends. The affectionate respect and understanding are mutual and beautiful. Neither home nor social duties are neglected for this club work, which, in time, beneficially reacts on the mind and character of the young woman, who, perhaps, began it from a wish to be useful to others, without hope of reward or personal enjoyment. Nothing broadens like contact with lives set in a different frame from our own. The "Girls' Endeavor Club" has been conducted entirely by four sisters of one family, their cousin and their friends—all well known in New York social circles. The young woman who has charge of the "literary night" declares that it has been the highest education. She thought she knew Scott and Dickens, but when required to make up programs, choose selections, cast parts and often herself write the sketch of the author, she found more profound study needed than in her dilettante school days.—Faith and Works.

TRUE SUCCESS.

To be beaten but not broken; to be victorious but not vainglorious; to strive and contend for the prize, and to win it honestly or lose it cheerfully; to use every power in the race, and yet never to wrest an undue advantage or win an unlawful mastery; verily, in all this there is training and testing of character which searches it to the very roots, and this is a result which is worth all that it costs us.—Bishop Potter.

THE Bishop of London states that when he first went to Oxford, drinking clubs of a low type were numerous. Now such are not to be found either at Oxford or Cambridge.

I HAVE no fear for England; she will stand till the Day of Judgment.—William Pitt. What I fear for England, is the Day of Judgment.—Burke.

BY desiring what is perfectly good, even when we cannot do all we would, we are making ourselves a part of the divine force against evil, widening the skirts of light, and making the struggle with darkness narrower.—George Eliot.

WHERE Christ brings his Cross he brings his presence; and where he is, none are desolate, and there is no room for despair. As he knows his own, so he knows how to comfort them, using sometimes the very gift itself, and straining it to a sweetness of peace unattainable by those ignorant of sorrow.—E. B. Browning.

GEN. SHERMAN was once a patient of the late Dr. Bliss. The doctor had been treating him for some time when one day the General said: "Doctor, I don't seem to be getting any better for all your medicine." "Well, General," replied the doctor, jocosely, "perhaps you had better take Shakespeare's advice and 'throw physic to the dogs.'" "I would, doctor," replied the sick man, as he turned his head on the pillow, "I would, but there are a number of valuable dogs in the neighborhood."

THE HOUSE OF SAVOY figures in history as a race of atrocious persecutors, who shed the blood of martyrs without hesitation or compunction. Years have wrought changes in that famous house, and its present representative, King Humbert of Italy, indicates how great the change is by the contribution of five thousand francs sent lately to the Church of the Waldenses. It came on the occasion of the recent Bicentenary of the "Glorious Return" of the Waldensians to their native valleys. In the accompanying note it was frankly testified that the faithful Waldensians "had supplied to Italy brave soldiers and deeply attached sons and daughters." They were once loaded with anathemas and their names cast out as evil.

FLOSSIE is six years old. "Mamma," she asked one day, "if I get married will I have a husband like pa?" "Yes," replied the mother with an amused smile. "And if I don't get married will I have to be an old maid like Aunt Kate!" "Yes," "Mamma"—after a pause—"it's a tough world for us women, ain't it?"—The Beacon.

OFFERINGS FOR SEPTEMBER.

General Charities.....$178.54

OFFERTORIES FOR OCTOBER.

October 20th.—Third Sunday of month, Domestic Missions.
Other Sundays.—General Charities.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week from 11 to 12 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

THE RECTOR REGRETS EXCEEDINGLY that an unexpected and painful illness kept him out of his place during September, where he had expected to be.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL will begin its sessions on Sunday, October 6th, at 9.45 A. M. The teachers will please endeavor to be present at the reopening, to take charge of their classes. If unable to do so, please inform the Assistant Minister that he may be able to secure others to take their places.

THE WOMEN'S BIBLE CLASS will begin on Sunday, October 6th, at 2½ o'clock, in the Parish Building. Miss Stoddard will be the teacher of the class.

THE MOTHERS' MEETINGS will be resumed on Wednesday, October 6th, from 2 to 4 P. M. Miss Stoddard will take charge of these meetings.

THE CORNER-STONE OF THE NEW CHURCH OF ST. SIMEON, a memorial to the late Bishop Stevens, at 9th & Lehigh Ave, will be laid on Saturday afternoon, October 12th, at 4 o'clock. The consolidated vested choirs of the N. E. Convocation, numbering four hundred voices, will be present, and addresses will be made by the Bishop of the Diocese and by Dr. McConnell, the President of the Convocation. This Mission has been preeminently successful under its Minister, the Rev. Mr. Cope. Beginning with nothing three years ago, it now numbers over 300 communicants, and they have built with their own hands and three times enlarged the wooden chapel which is now to be replaced by a handsome stone church, toward the building of which $40,000 has been raised in the Diocese. Many of the people of this Parish have contributed towards it, and we cannot but think that they would find a pleasure and interest in being present at the laying of the corner-stone.

APPEAL FROM GARMENT COMMITTEE.

In response to the appeal made by the Rector of this Parish, Sunday, June 2d, on behalf of the Johnstown Sufferers, the ladies forming the Garment Committee emptied their closets of every available article of clothing. Over two hundred garments being sent by this Committee alone. They now open the season of 1889-'90 unable to meet the needs of our own deserving poor. Some of our members have not yet sent in their annual contributions as the year does not close until November 30th; others have done so long since; but as the demand in June was so urgent, and the amount required from each member (two garments) so trifling, would it be expecting too much to ask this year for a more liberal contribution?

The feeling most naturally and properly is that too much could not be done for the unfortunate sufferers in the flooded district, but neither should our own deserving poor suffer for want of plain, warm clothing. All articles should be sent not later than November 20th, so they can be distributed before the very inclement weather overtakes us.

Every Monday morning, from 10.30 until 12 o'clock, one of the Committee will be at the Parish School Building (rear of the church) to receive all contributions.

Monday, October 7th, Mrs. Muirheid.
" " 14th, Mrs. Arnold.
" " 21st, Mrs. Lundy.
" " 28th, Miss Cleemann.

Oct. 1st, 1889.

THE ATTENTION OF THE PEOPLE is called to a number of Rubrics in the Prayer Book which are too generally neglected, chiefly because they are not known to exist, or are believed to be obsolete. This is not true. They are all in force and all valuable intrinsically. It is known to all that certain changes in the Prayer Book have been under consideration for some years. There is in many minds the feeling that no changes ought ever to be made in so venerable an authority. The specific changes proposed may be good or bad—we think some of them are the one and some the other—but that changes can and ought to be made from time to time is evident from the very first paragraph of the Preface to the Prayer Book as it now stands:

> It is a most invaluable part of that blessed liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, that in His worship, different forms and usages may without offence be allowed, provided the substance of the Faith be kept entire; and that, in every Church, what cannot be clearly determined to belong to Doctrine must be referred to Discipline: and, therefore, by common consent and authority, may be altered, abridged, enlarged, amended, or otherwise disposed of, as may seem most convenient for the edification of the people, "according to the various exigencies of time and occasions."

In public worship the only time when a member of the congregation needs a Prayer Book is at the reading of the Psalter. In all the rest of the service he will probably worship more devoutly and with less distraction if he lays down his book and listens to the voice of the Minister. It is not an edifying spectacle to see a whole congregation standing during the reading of the Gospel, for example, every one with his eyes fixed on his own copy, to observe that the Priest reads with a proper emphasis.

But there are rubrics which deal with things of more importance than behavior in church. For example these two following:

> If among those who come to be partakers of the Holy Communion, the Minister shall know any to be an open and notorious evil liver, or to have done any wrong to his neighbors by word or deed, so that the Congregation be thereby offended; he shall advertise him, that he presume not to come to the Lord's Table, until he have openly declared himself to have truly repented and amended his former evil life, that the congregation may thereby be satisfied; and that he hath recompensed the parties to whom he hath done wrong; or at least declare himself to be in full purpose so to do, as soon as he conveniently may.
> The same order shall the Minister use with those, betwixt whom he perceiveth malice and hatred to reign; not suffering them to be partakers of the Lord's Table, until he know them to be reconciled. And if one of the parties, so at variance, be content to forgive from the bottom of his heart all that the other hath trespassed against him, and to make amends for that wherein he himself hath offended, and the other party will not be persuaded to a godly unity, but remain still in his frowardness and malice; the Minister in that case ought to admit the penitent person to the Holy Communion, and not him that is obstinate. Provided, that every Minister so repelling any, as is herein specified, shall be obliged to give an account of the same to the Ordinary, as soon as conveniently may be.

It is not an unknown thing for a "notorious evil liver" to bring the Church into disrepute by his remaining a communicant while dozens of men know of his unfitness and keep silent. The Minister is usually the very last man to suspect it. It is not a nice thing to be an informer, but on the other hand, what would be thought of a member of a Club who would allow the organization to suffer shamefully rather than to bring to the attention of the authorities the facts within his knowledge?

The following are the regulations of the Church concerning the Baptism of Children. Please to read them and remember them when they are needed:

> The Minister of every Parish shall often admonish the People, that they defer not the Baptism of their Children longer than the first or second Sunday next after their birth, or other Holy Day falling between, unless upon a great and reasonable cause.
> And also he shall warn them, that without like great cause and necessity, they procure not their Children to be baptized at home in their houses. But when need shall compel them so to do, then Baptism shall be administered there.
> The People are to be admonished, that it is most convenient that Baptism should not be administered but upon Sundays and other Holy Days, or Prayer Days. Nevertheless (if necessity so require), Baptism may be administered upon any other day.
> There shall be for every Male-child to be baptized, when they can be had, two Godfathers and one Godmother; and for every Female, one Godfather and two Godmothers; and Parents shall be admitted as Sponsors, if it be desired.
> When there are children to be baptized, the Parents or Sponsors shall give knowledge thereof, before the beginning of Morning (or Evening) Prayer, to the Minister. And then the Godfathers and Godmothers, and the People with the Children, must be ready at the Font, either immediately after the last Lesson at Morning Prayer, or else immediately after the last Lesson at Evening Prayer, as the Minister at his discretion shall appoint.

The Church also assumes that parents will recognize their duty in the proper instruction of their children:

> The Minister of every Parish shall diligently, upon Sundays and Holy Days, or on some other convenient occasions, openly in the Church, instruct or examine so many Children of his Parish, sent unto him, as he shall think convenient, in some part of this Catechism.
> And all Fathers, Mothers, Masters, and Mistresses, shall cause their Children, Servants, and Apprentices, who have not learned their Catechism, to come to the Church at the time appointed, and obediently to hear and to be ordered by the Minister, until such time as they have learned all that is here appointed for them to learn.

The following is a Rubric which has often been misunderstood:

> And there shall none be admitted to the Holy Communion, until such time as he be confirmed, or be ready and desirous to be confirmed.

The difficulty is in the case of "members of other churches" coming to the Holy Communion with us.

The common sense answer which custom gives is, that they are more than welcome, on occasion, as guests, but that if they think to make their church home with us they must be confirmed and give the same pledge of allegiance which is required of the rest of us.

In Marriages the Minister is not always at liberty to do as he would:

> The laws respecting Matrimony, whether by publishing the Bans in Churches, or by License, being different in the several States, every Minister is left to the direction of those laws, in everything that regards the civil contract between the parties.
> ["No Minister of this Church shall celebrate the Marriage of any persons who have been divorced, except of the innocent party in the case of divorce for the cause of adultery."]

When any one is sick he shall not expect the Minister to find out the fact by intuition, but—

> When any person is sick, notice shall be given thereof to the Minister of the Parish; who, coming into the sick person's house, shall examine whether he repent him truly of his sins, and be in charity with all the world; exhorting him to forgive, from the bottom of his heart, all persons that have offended him; and if he hath offended any other, to ask them forgiveness; and where he hath done any injury or wrong to any man, that he make amends to the uttermost of his power. And if he hath not before disposed of his goods, let him then be admonished to make his Will, and to declare his Debts, what he oweth, and what is owing unto him, for the better discharging of his conscience, and the quietness of his Executors. But men should often be put in remembrance to take order for the settling of their temporal estates, whilst they are in health.

The Minister shall not omit earnestly to move such sick persons as are of ability, to be liberal to the poor.

After the birth of a child—

The Woman shall come into the Church decently apparelled, and then shall kneel down in some convenient place, as hath been accustomed, [or in her pew], and the Minister shall say the "Prayer of thanksgiving for recovery from Childbirth."

The Woman, that cometh to give her Thanks, must offer accustomed offerings, which shall be applied by the Minister and Church-wardens to the relief of distressed women in child-bed.

In the Burial of the Dead—

The Minister, meeting the Corpse at the entrance to the Churchyard, and going before it, either into the Church, or towards the Grave, shall say, or sing, [the Office for the Burying of the Dead].

Here is to be noted, that the Office ensuing is not to be used for any unbaptized adults, any who die excommunicate, or who have laid violent hands upon themselves.

In every household, at some suitable hour in the morning or evening—

The Master or Mistress having called together as many of the Family as can conveniently be present, let one of them, or any other whom they shall think proper, say, all kneeling, [the Form of Prayer to be used in Families].

THE THEATRE SERVICES in Philadelphia will not be resumed until the first of November. Where they will be held is not yet determined. The Rev. J. E. Johnson has seized the opportunity to make another missionary voyage, and sailed for Liverpool with the intention of holding evangelistic services in the steerage going over and coming back, more particularly the latter. His trip last year aroused some interest, and this Summer several ministers of various denominations have made the experiment from the other side. The Methodists have organized a society for this purpose. Mr. Johnson dons a flannel shirt and goes among the immigrants as one of them, counseling them where to go and what to do on their arrival in this country, as well as holding services every day. He has taken no unusual ecclesiastical vows, wears no extraordinary ecclesiastical clothes, and claims "neither praise nor pudding" for what he is doing. He is content with the bean-soup and "duff" which falls to the indistinguishable mass of the clergy before the mast in the Ministry of the Church. We shall hope to hear from him on his return.—Standard of the Cross.

SELECTIONS.

LEVELING SOCIETY UP.

A clever writer thus paraphrases the spirit of Christianity and the teaching of Tolstoi: "You are my brother," says Tolstoi, "therefore let me live with you and be dirty." "You are my brother," says the true Christian, "therefore live with me and be clean." The poles are not wider apart than these two points of view, these two ends proposed. The true spirit of fraternity and equality is not that which says, "I am as good as you are," and would drag down to its own level all that is above it; but that which says, "You are as good as I am," and lifts up to its plane all that are below it. The former spirit often masquerades as the true friend of mankind, the force that underlies all modern progress. In truth it is destructive, disintegrating, paralyzing. It is pagan, not Christian, for its basis is the love of self and the hatred of one's neighbor. The leveling-up principle underlies all progress, because it is the fulfilling of the law, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."—New York Examiner.

CONSIDERATION OF OTHERS.

One imbued with this high quality never sees personal deformity or blemish. A lame man could easily classify his friends as to their breeding by drawing a line between those who ask how it happened, and those who refrain from all questions. I say distinctly, the gentleman never sees deformity. He will not talk to a beggar of his rags, nor boast of his health to the sick, nor speak of his wealth amongst the poor; he will not seem to be fortunate amongst the hapless, nor make any show of his virtue before the vicious. He will avoid all painful contrast, always looking at the thing in question from the standpoint of the other person. —Theodore T. Munger.

OFFERTORIES FOR NOVEMBER.

Third Sunday, November 17.—Female Benevolent Society.
Other Sundays.—General Charities.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week from 11 to 12 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

THE GENERAL CONVENTION of Our Church, which meets once in three years, held its sessions in New York in October. The Convention is composed of (1) all the Bishops who sit as an Upper House, and (2) the House of Deputies, composed of a delegation of four clergymen and four laymen from each Diocese.

It is not easy at this writing to say just what the Convention did, and what it did not do.

A concurrence of both Houses is necessary to give validity to any measure, and from the daily reports of the debates and motions, it is hard to extract exact information as to what was passed and what was not. In due time the official statement will be available of what action was completed.

The feeling in the Church, however, is very general, that very little of any great consequence was accomplished. The truth is that our Ecclesiastical Parliament has been for fifteen years very much in the same predicament as is the British Parliament—i. e. it has a question before it which it cannot get satisfactorily settled, and cannot get its hands free to do any thing else till it is settled. What the Irish question is to Parliament, so is Prayer Book Revision to the General Convention. The Church has become so entangled with this subject that it has not been able, for many years, to give attention to any thing else.

At the opening of the Convention it was moved to proceed at once with this business. At the same time a resolution was offered, that this subject must be definitely concluded at this Convention, leaving unconsidered all proposed changes which could not secure action at this time. This on the ground that the Church is tired of uncertainty and desires a finality. The latter resolution was lost by a small majority, from the feeling that as so much time and care had been already given to this matter, this ought not to be thrown away in the effort to come to a sudden stop. As between the two plans, of a sudden end and an indefinite continuance, it was agreed that no matter would be considered which could not be settled finally at the next meeting of Convention in 1892. The more important changes which were finally agreed upon were the following:

1. In Evening Prayer, after the Response "And our mouth shall show forth thy praise," there be inserted:—

Minister—O God make speed to save us.
Answer—O Lord make haste to help us.

And in Evening Prayer, after the Response, "And our mouth shall show forth thy praise," there be inserted:—

Minister—O Lord save the State.
Answer—And mercifully hear us when we call upon thee.
Minister—Endue thy Ministers with righteousness.
Answer—And make thy chosen people joyful.
Minister—O Lord save thy people.
Answer—And bless thine inheritance.
Minister—Give peace in our time O Lord.
Answer—Because there is none other that fighteth for us but only thou O Lord.

2. Insert in the Litany a suffrage for deliverance "from flood and earthquake."

3. Insert special prayers "For Rogation Days;" "For Church Unity;" "For Missions;" "For those who labor in the Gospel."

4. Substitute Psalm lxiv for lxix in Psalter for Good Friday Evening.

5. Additional Collect, Epistle and Gospel for Christmas and for Easter.

6. Additional Offertory Services.

7. Insert the Apostles' Creed and a Scripture Lesson in the Confirmation office.

Almost the whole time of the Convention was taken in the discussion of the above, and of a hundred other changes which were proposed but not adopted. For this reason but few other matters were acted upon. Among the things done were the following:

1. The Diocese of Missouri was divided, and a Missionary jurisdiction from the Diocese of Nebraska.

2. A Resolution to Congress to pass an uniform and more stringent Divorce Law.

3. The Committee on Church Unity reported, that it was in communication with similar Committees appointed by the Presbyterian General Assembly, the Lutheran Synod, and the Moravian Provincial Synod, and expressed a good hope that reunion will be a possibility in the near future, and asked that the Committee be continued.

4. In the Convention sitting as a Board of Missions it was determined that the money collected for the "Enrolment Fund" of $1,000,000, which fund failed of being raised, should be turned over to the Managers of the Board of Missions with power to distribute it.

During the Convention two public meetings were held of a very noteworthy character. One was a public Missionary Meeting in the Academy of Music, at which the Bishop of Nova Scotia, the Rev. Dr. Brooks, and the Bishop of Idaho made addresses which will be long remembered by the great audience which packed the huge building.

The other was a meeting held under the auspices of the Church Unity Society, The presiding officer was the Bishop of Pittsburgh, and very remarkable addresses were made by the Rev. Dr. Schaff and the Rev. Dr. Hawkhurst, of the Presbyterian Church. It was the first time in two hundred years that representative men have come together publicly to consider "the great evil we are in by reason of our unhappy divisions."

Of the General Convention just closed it must be said, with all respect to the honored men who composed it, that they left undone those things which they ought to have done, and spent their time and energy in doing those things which are of comparatively little consequence when they are done. The revision of the Prayer Book is an important matter. All we who believe in and use a Liturgy believe that. But it is not a thing of the first rank of importance. All will agree that it is of more importance that men should be induced to pray at all than that they should be induced to pray after a certain fashion. Whole races, classes, sorts and conditions of men are in this country "without God and without hope in the world," and the first duty of the Church when she meets in council, is to plan for their welfare. Everything else, while of importance in its rank, is subordinate to this. This work the Convention did not do. The secular press, which usually judges fairly of Ecclesiastical things has not hesitated to point out the Church's failure here. The general feeling throughout the Church seems to be one of disappointment. But in all candor it is difficult to see how it could have been otherwise managed. The Church had embarked upon Liturgical Revision and unless she was content to be perpetually at sea, she must get ashore even if it took the whole time of this Convention to make a landing.

It may now reasonably be hoped that having got once more on solid earth, she will look over the land and concern herself for a good many years to come with the things which concern her growth, if not her very existence.

DEAR FELLOW-LABORERS IN THE LORD:

Each succeeding year affords fresh illustrations of the power and blessedness of the organized work of Christian women. The recent meetings of the Women's Auxiliary in New York, in connection with the meetings of the General Convention, as the Board of Missions, were not only means of spiritual refreshment to those who were present, but they moved each heart anew to do more than ever before to make known the Saviour's love, and to help and comfort those who are laboring in His name. It would be a great benefit if the spirit of those meetings should be diffused throughout the Church until every heart is warmed and every hand is busy in the work of Christ. In the hope that by coming together for conference and prayer we may all be quickened to greater diligence in the Master's service, I have appointed an All-day Meeting of the Pennsylvania Branch of the Women's Auxiliary, to be held on Thursday, November 21st, in St. Andrew's Church, Eighth Street, between Locust and Spruce, to which I cordially invite you.

The following will be the order of the day:

10 A. M., Holy Communion.

11 A. M. to 12.30 P. M., Addresses.

12.30 to 2 P. M., Lunch in the Parish Building for all.

2 to 4 P. M., Addresses.

It is expected that Bishop Morris, Bishop Talbot, Bishop Kendrick, Rev. Wm. B. Gordon, of Mexico, Rev. A. H. Lacke, of China, and Rev. Paulus Moods, of Africa, will speak.

Faithfully yours,

O. W. WHITAKER,
Bishop of Pennsylvania.

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE TO ITS MEMBERS.

Remember that our present year closes on the last day of this month (November), and our third year, 1889 and 1890, will commence December 1st. To many this may seem a strange division of the season, but after mature reflection, it was deemed advisable by the Committee to do this so that the warm Winter clothing collected could be distributed before the coldest weather would overtake the suffering poor. We are greatly in need of all articles of clothing—plain, warm and substantial, as we emptied our closets of everything available on June 2d for the Johnstown sufferers, and now feel we are at the mercy of the liberal-minded. Who will help us? Every contribution for this year should be sent in by November 20th, so as to enable the Committee to make a judicious and conscientious division and distribution. As there are not only private cases to be considered, but applications also from many charitable organizations, supported by voluntary contributions, it would be a pleasure, as well as a duty, to assist.

When our 2d Annual Report appears in our Parish Paper, it is to be hoped it will compare favorably with the former year, as it will then be an encouragement to all interested to continue this good work.

Every Monday morning, from 10.30 until 12.30 P. M., one of the Committee will be at the Parish School Building (rear of the Church) to receive all articles sent.

Monday 4th, Mrs. Stratton.
" 11th, Miss Stoddard.
" 18th, Miss Bell.
" 25th, Mrs. Muirheid.

THE LADIES OF THE PARISH HOUSE COMMITTEE, of St. Stephen's Church, intend holding, on the 20th, 21st and 22nd of November, their annual sale of the handiwork of gentlewomen, who are obliged, by their own efforts, to support themselves.

In this sale will be found articles of useful and artistic needle-work, and delicious home-made jellies, preserves, pickles, etc.

The ladies of the Committee hope it is understood that no commission is charged the depositors for selling their goods, and earnestly trust that the congregation will do all in their power to further this good work.

LAST SPRING the Rev. Mr. Syle, Rector of All Souls', asked the Embroidery Class to work for his church a purple altar cloth; the members of his parish would give the materials. The request was readily granted. The Altar Society found, when the altar cloth was finished, that, through the generosity of the congregation, they would also be able to give the materials. The presentation took place last June, at All Souls', the Rectors of St. Stephen's and All Souls' making the speeches, which we regret not to be able to give. As a mark of appreciation, Mr. Syle has given the Altar Society a photograph of the workers among the deaf mutes, which is now in the vestry-room.

THE Children's Friend Society took their last out-door trip to the Zoological Gardens October 12th.

Thirty-four children enjoyed seeing the animals, and were again treated to a nice lunch by Mr. Hardt, the proprietor of the Restaurant.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Hardt have been very kind to the children this Summer.

It is the intention of the ladies of the Society to try and brighten the lives of these little ones once a month during the Winter, in the Parish building, the children helping to make the time pleasant by reciting any pieces they may know, or by singing. Anything to make them have at least two happy hours in a month.

If any of the congregation would like to see some of these little ones, they will be gladly welcomed by the members.

The date is not yet fixed for November, but any one can find out the time by asking the Sexton, who will be told as soon as we decide.

AN APPEAL FROM MRS. BUFORD.

The sixth year of the existence of my hospital for sick and infirm colored people draws to a close.

The number of patients now in the hospital is forty-nine; the number dismissed, twenty-four; the number received since the first of October last, thirty-seven; seventeen have died—a fearful death rate. But could you realize the frightful condition in which they are brought to us, you would readily understand the impossibility of curing them. A dying woman was brought, a few weeks ago, a distance of twenty-five miles. She was carried in insensible, and died the next day. We have many cases just as sad.

It is hard to make these negroes understand the necessity of taking disease in its incipiency. They keep their suffering wives, or husbands, or children in their poor hovels, without medicine, or proper food, or attention, until their vital energies are exhausted, then put them in an ox cart and bring them over our rough country roads ten or twelve miles, and then expect us to bring back the ebbing life. Many of the patients are old men and women, worn out, covered with hideous cutaneous diseases brought on by hard labor, scant food, and want of cleanliness.

One of our most pitiful cases is Uncle Eaton, who sits aloof from the other patients under the shade of a distant tree nursing his foot, his suffering companion for more than thirty years. He dresses it himself, and keeps it bound up with green leaves, and will allow no one but the physician to see the hideous ulcer or cancer. When I see the stricken, silent old man, bowed and bent by thirty years of agony, I think of the leper standing afar off too, the sack-cloth covering, "unclean, unclean" hissing from cracked, parched lips, and I remember One who, with tenderest pity stretched out Hands Divine, and touched with gentlest healing even that loathsome object.

So horribly diseased are many of these old people, that I have been compelled to have a detatched building erected for them. It is impossible to keep them under the same roof with the other patients. With forty-nine sick and dying people, and helpless little children, I need not tell you our wards and hands are full. I need more nurses—I have only two, Mary Courtney, a most faithful and efficient woman, who has been with me several years, and Victoria Barner, who takes good care of the children. Besides these, I have George Crichton, my man of all work, who takes care of the old men in addition to his other manifold duties.

It would also be a great comfort to me if I had the means to have another building erected for children—an orphanage it would be. I keep them in a large, separate ward up stairs, but they are loud and noisy, and disturb the sick ones with their mirth and childish playfulness. And it is cruel to them to keep them in that crowded building, reeking—tainted with disease. These children are very dear to me. Many of them have been left to me by the poor mothers who sleep in the quiet grave-yard, who, with dying breath, commended their helpless children to my care. Let me tell you of one sorrowful case. A few days ago I received a message from the matron of the hospital, begging me to come up quickly—"Molly was worse and wanted to see me." Molly was a poor girl, who had been with us about two months. Her little baby had been born several months before. Neglected at the time, she took violent cold; motherless, friendless, she wandered from one relation to another, begging for bread for herself and the baby in her arms. The father of the child drove her off with curses. when she begged for a cup of meal to keep it from starving. At last one man to whom she applied, out of sheer pity, put her in his cart and brought her to me. "All her kinfolks flung her away," he explained, "and I did not know what else to do." She was evidently in the last stages of consumption—a slender girl with a gentle face, clasping a limp, half-starved, hungry-eyed baby. We knew her days were numbered. For weeks she had been very ill, and when the message came to come quickly, I knew the end was very near. She was propped up in bed, a ghastly object, her teeth unnaturally large and gleaming, her eyes wild and suffering, coughing, coughing all the time. With a shudder I saw the handkerchief she held to her lips was crimson with blood. "I wanted you to come," she gasped. "I know I am going; I can't last. My baby—I never thought I could give her up. I love my child, but now you must promise me you will keep my child—promise me My poor, poor baby. I am so tired I want to rest. I can't till you promise." Old Hannah sat near her feeding the baby, and then undressed and rubbed her, and laid her in the cradle. The little one's eyes were very bright and wide open, but she was happy and unconscious that her mother's heart was breaking. I promised. God help me to keep the promise made by that death-bed, and take care of the little child. Walking home in the solemn starlight, watching the calm depths of the blue heavens, and the cold unfeeling stars who every night look down unmoved, and have for centuries, on breaking hearts and quivering human woe, again and again came the old, old question, which is ever uppermost in my thoughts, and will not down at my bidding, which Job in his day and generation vainly tried to fathom, that question which has resounded down the corridors of time all the mighty ages since, and awakened no re-echoing response, How came sin into this fair world, whence its mysterious advent, with pale-faced suffering following with stealthy footsteps ever in its shadow? Why were such poor, blind creatures as those I had just left ever made to drag out lives of misery and sorrow, and go out in the bleakness of darkness at last? When will the shadows flee away, and God's dealings with His children, the great mystery of pain and sorrow, be revealed? The next morning Molly was at rest, the baby motherless. I have many such sacred bequests. Lilly, Baron Trenck, Rosa, Alice, Estelle, Ashby, George, Molly, all belong to me, and the oldest and most apish looking men and women in the hospital never fail to inform me that I am like a mother to them, and profess the most filial devotion to me. I am a little oppressed by so large and ill-assorted a family, and find it rather burdensome.

One little sufferer touches me almost as much as old Eaton. Milton, surely a "mute inglorious" one, little Milton, too, has a helpless foot—crushed and broken by a fall from a wagon—and all the long, bright sunny days the little fellow lies in a reclining chair, watching with sad, wistful eyes the happier children at play. He is so weak and emaciated he cannot bear the amputation yet, and we are trying to build him up to stand it. Beside these are many chronic sufferers. Nora King, a sad, patient woman, who has not walked for years, and never will again; and Annie Woodley, another helpless sufferer; and poor Ben Green, with his dangling feet, and many others I will not harrow up your feelings by telling you about. A weary mass of suffering humanity. Nothing but negroes—unattractive, repulsive, loathesome even—with only vacant soulless faces, caring for little but warmth and food, bearing untold suffering patiently, dumbly, as if pain and privation were their allotted portion. And have they not been?

We who are older have not forgotten the sorrowful days of the past. These men and women are relics and wrecks of the old slavery days, a remnant of a peculiar people whose race is almost run. Not long will I beg for them, not long will they need your gentle charities. Only help me to take care of them a few years longer. Even for these let there be light at eventide, a shimmer of glory in the western sky after sunless days, all gloom and thick darkness.

The best years of my life have been spent in vainly trying to solve the vexed question: How best to elevate—to raise to a higher, a nobler manhood—our poor, black brothers? I have failed. The glorious opportunity presented twelve years ago of gathering into the bosom of our beloved Mother Church thousands of these wild negroes was lost, that hope crushed, broken by hands hard and relentless. These things no longer pain or grieve me. My life for years has been only a ministry to their suffering bodies. Bitterly misrepresented, harshly judged, misunderstood, I feel safe now, there can be no harm, no presumption, no breaking rubric unawares in caring for the sick and dying, in tending the little ones.

I am content to be a failure! Now, I only pray to be faithful to this sacred trust till the shadows lengthen and the evening comes, and the fever of life is over and my work done.

The receipts for my work since the first of January have been three thousand and sixty-eight dollars and seventy-six cents; the disbursements two thousand nine hundred and fifty-one dollars and eighty-one cents. This includes, also, the expenses of my school, in which I have two teachers and one hundred and thirty children. But there are heavy expenses to be met before the close of the year—the salaries of the matron and physician, and wages of the nurses and servants for four months, beside food and medicine for the patients. The hospital is crowded now; it always is. Being a small building it can only accommodate a limited number of patients, but it is a sore pain and grief to me to be forced, as I often am, to send off many pitiful applicants for admission. Besides the patients in the hospital, since the first of October seven hundred and fifty-six old helpless creatures have been supplied with good, warm, substantial clothing. Many of these were sick, and supplied also with food and medicine. The large number of valuable and excellent boxes sent me have enabled me to help so many. Believe me, I have tried faithfully to distribute these blessed charities wisely and judiciously.

As we are now connected by railway and telegraph with the world, and my friends can visit me without danger to life or limb, I earnestly beg when they come South they will remember me, and stop sometimes and see this poor hospital in the woods and its pitiful inmates.

PATTIE BUFORD.

Lawrenceville, Va., Oct. 1, 1889.

[The Rector knows personally of the admirable work which Mrs. Buford is doing, and has been one of the Trustees of her hospital from the beginning. Will not more than one person send him money which he can forward to Mrs. Buford?]

SELECTIONS.

WE may by a contentious spirit put ourselves farther from God than we can by all our studies draw near to Him. Not miles, but sins measure the soul's distance from God; and not pilgrimages, but penitent prayers, bring it near the kingdom of Heaven. This too familiar power of sin, therefore, to dull the feeling of Divine things, and to obscure religious knowledge, is a sufficient answer to any objections to our reasoning to be drawn from the apparent absence in many of anything like a religious nature. For even when that nature suffers no violence from immoral conduct, it can be greatly impaired by neglect, or rendered rudimentary by persistent and inherited disuse. Absorbing exercise in other pursuits may leave the mind empty of religious convictions, and well nigh impotent to gain them. A specialist may sink his shaft so deeply into a particular mine of investigation as to be able at last to look up and see above him hardly a bit of the broad sky. Specialists in science, like miners, discover, indeed, much precious ore; but they need frequently to leave their shafts, and to dwell in the light of common day, to see things in general as men should look upon them. The eye kept daily at the microscope may be in danger of losing something of nature's larger meanings. How quickly, and how surely, any power, and especially, therefore, our finest and best powers, may be rendered impotent through abuse, or even by disuse, is one of the truisms of education. The power of man to feel the touch of the finger of God, is no exception to the general law of culture. Final inability to believe in anything worth believing may sometimes be predicted from the observed habits and lives of men naturally capable of better things. The stimulus of some extraordinary religious excitement sometimes recalls in such the religious faculties to life, as paralyzed nerves have been known to quiver under powerful galvanic currents. Atheists under strong excitement of danger, or of great duties, have become believers; but it does seem possible, nevertheless, for the religious nature of man to become in this world, under the most powerful motives of a moral life known to us, an incurable paralytic. Our souls have fearful power of moral suicide. But no number of cases of partial or complete religious paralysis can prove that man is by nature a religious imbecile. One living man would be enough to prove that life is a possibility, a whole cemetery of dead bones to the contrary. Jesus Christ is enough to prove that man can live by the word of God, though the whole world lies dead in sin.—Newman Smyth.

OFFERTORIES FOR DECEMBER.

December 15.—Third Sunday in Advent, Missionary Box Commttee.
Other Sundays.—General Charities.
Christmas Day. Aged and Infirm Clergy.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week from 11 to 12 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

The Sunday-school Teachers' meetings, for the study of the lesson, are on Fridays, 4 P. M., in Guild Hall, in the Parish House.

THE RECTOR EXPECTS TO BEGIN, on Sunday afternoon, December 1st, a course of lectures on the History of the American Church. The story of our Church in these United States is an interesting one. It would seem also to be a legitimate work for the members of an organization, to which they are so closely bound as church people are to the church, to make themselves acquainted with their own family record. It is good Sunday work. It is "to edification."

Considerable more time will be necessary to each lecture than is ordinarily taken for a sermon —probably an hour for each—so that any who have not the time, or the interest in the subject to make this desirable, should not attend.

On the other hand it is much to be desired that our own Church people should in large numbers give some attention to this subject.

A WIDOW LADY OF FIFTY wants a home for herself and her little boy. She is capable and good. After a life of more than comfort, she is now, by a set of circumstances, not in any wise her fault, left helpless. Is there any household in which is needed the services of a competent "house mother?"

A CLASS OF YOUNG PEOPLE has been organized, to be taught evenings in drawing, wood-carving and clay modelling, by Prof. J. Liberty Tadd, at the expense of this parish. There is good reason that some at least can thus be put in the way to earn a livelihood, and be made better men and women thereby.

THE CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL of the Sunday-school will be held on Friday, Dec. 27th, the eve of Holy Innocents Day, in the Parish Building, at the rear of the Church, at seven o'clock. This hour of the evening has been selected that the children who are engaged in stores at work may be able to attend and enjoy the festival with the other members of the school. The children will sing their Christmas carols. A tree will be handsomely dressed in the way dear to childhood, and candies, cakes etc., will be distributed among the scholars. It is hoped all may have a bright and happy time.

MR. WOOD has selected a few of the girls of the Parish, and has organized a small choir for the purpose of leading the children in their singing at the opening of the Sunday-school services. It has already helped to more thoroughly interest the children in their school.

THE Children's Friend Society gave an entertainment for children of the neighborhood, whom they had gathered in, on Tuesday evening, in the Guild Hall of the Parish House. This little society of the Parish is busy doing its kind work in Winter time as well as in the heated term of the Summer. Many a child's life is made happy by reason of the existence of this little society.

EASTOREO, Nov. 18th, 1889.

MY DEAR MRS. ARRISON:

Your letter of the 12th only reached me to-day. Many thanks for it, and also for the offer of a box from St. Stephen's. Of course I would like it very much, particularly if it can reach us by Christmas, so as to help with the tree. Half-worn men's clothes, as well as boys', will be acceptable, and cloaks and jackets for the girls and women; these they are seldom able to buy, and if they do, they are of the commonest sort. I feel my trip North has done me much good, both in body and spirit; for although I did not meet with much success, as far as money is concerned, still I made many friends and much kindness was shown me. I was very glad to get back to my own home and dear daughter, as well as my colored flock. They too evinced their pleasure at my return by a surprise collection of 85 cents. This touched my heart, knowing their poverty, but will help to get a covering for the aisle. To-day I commenced school. Had but a slim attendance, as there is still much cotton in the fields and they are the gatherers; however, they will continue to come in, until there will be more than I can well teach. We have had beautiful weather since my return until Saturday, when it began to rain, and yesterday was gloomy indeed. However, I had a few at the chapel, and I catechised them all, teachers as well as scholars. Next Sunday is Mr. Joyner's regular appointment, so hope it will be clear, as he only comes to us once a month. I send you by this mail the Church Year, in which was copied the memorial of which I spoke; by reading it yourself you will better understand. You can direct, Mrs. Thos. B. Clarkson, Eastorea, S. C., and I will get anything sent. Should money be sent at any time, please let it be by check or draft. I have sent to Whittaker, N. Y., for some brick cards for collecting small sums of money. Perhaps, when they come, you will kindly take a few and distribute among the church people interested in the welfare of my poor people? With kindest regards to the ladies I met in your city, believe me to be,

Sincerely your friend,

S. L. CLARKSON,

Miss. Teacher Watesee Col. Mission.

THE RECTOR WISHES VERY MUCH to know the addresses of the following persons. Their names are recorded among those confirmed during the last ten years, but either the present rector has never had them, or has lost them, or they have removed, or in some instances changed their names by marriage. Any one who will help in this matter to correct the record will do a great favor:

THE SALE HELD IN GUILD HALL of the Parish House on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday (Nov. 20, 21, 22), in charge of the ladies of the Parish House Committee, realized $945.25. Those who undertook to sell the goods made by gentlewomen in reduced circumstances, have every reason to feel that their efforts were not in vain. Grateful acknowledgment is make by them to the members of the congregation who liberally patronized the sale.

It may be well to say to those not familiar with the object of this charity, that the money realized from the sale of the articles is given without any charge or commission to the depositors.

THE SECOND YEAR of the Garment Committee closed November 30th, and the Annual Report will appear in the January number of the PARISH NEWS. As yet we scarcely know the ground upon which we stand, but our hope is that we will compare favorably with our first year. New members have been added, great interest and confidence appear to be felt in the organization, and very many kind things are said of its usefulness, all of which is most encouraging.

The Committee strive to do justice to the contributors in their distributions, and it is now proposed to publish a list of the contributing members for the season of 1888-89, as a guarantee that the articles sent have been received; and after this first annual list, to publish instead the names each month of those contributing during that time, so that each one may have the satisfaction of knowing that the Committee appreciates their kindness.

With December 1st our third year commences: the very season we need good, warm, plain clothing the most; and while we are supplying our own needs, let us not forget the less fortunate who are unable to supply their own.

One of the Committee is always at the Parish School Building every Monday, from 10.30 A. M. until 12 M., to receive all articles sent.

"Do you use grace at your meals? If not, why not? You are very careful to say "thank you" when you are helped to a dish, and you instruct your children to use the same courtesy. Why not express your gratitude to Almighty God for His bounty, and cultivate in your household a spirit of thankfulness toward the great Giver of all things?"

PERHAPS in some families the head of the house does not know what prayers to use. Why not use your Bible and Prayer Book, and ask your rector's advice.

TROP DE RITUALISME.

Mrs. B., catholique romaine, exprime à son amie Mrs. P., épiscopalienne, le désir d'assister à un des services de notre culte, afin d'avoir une occasion de juger par elle-méme de sa catholicité. Mrs. P. ne croit pouvoir mieux faire que de conduire son amie à l'église de Philadelphie connue entre toutes pour son ritualisme avancé. Le service terminé, elle lui demande ce qu'elle en pense:—Je préfère, répond la fidèle-romaine, la simplicité des services de mon église.

MISSION NOTES.

The ratio of the gain in converts in all the Protestant missions in China during the last decade is about 140 per cent.; and in Japan it is over 300 per cent.

In Sumatra, since 1878, it is stated that the number of Christians has increased from 2,500 to 12,000, and there are hundreds of Mohammedans who have been baptized, or are at present under religious instructions.

The first donation to missions in English Protestant annals was a gift of £100 by Sir Walter Raleigh in 1658, in aid of a Society formed to convert the Indians in Virginia. This was the year of the Armada, and the Protestant mind was aflame with zeal.

A rather remarkable testimony to the excellence of mission schools is given by a recent great representative meeting of Moslems in India, at which it was resolved that in all places where they had no schools of their own, the young men of their community should be sent to missionary schools, rather than to Government schools. This was by a vote of 170 to 30.

Ladies of education are now joining the ranks of the Church Army, in England, as mission nurses. Many of them have volunteered to go to India and work among the lepers if their services are thus needed.

The Syrian mission in 1827 had only secured twenty converts; to-day its church roll exceeds 1,500. The mission in Egypt reports an addition last year to the membership of 365—one for each day of the year.

An English lady, who has visited, at her own expense, many mission stations in India and China, has stated that she could distinguish native Christian women from non-Christians "by the light in their faces."

The Christian college at Lucknow, India, has 11,507 pupils enrolled, of whom 2,027 are Christians.

The Rev. W. H. Barnes, Honolulu, says that there are 20,000 Chinese in the Sandwich Islands; that two congregations of them are connected with the English Church Mission, and that they make good Christians.

The Church Missionary Society has decided that hereafter missionaries, as a rule, will be expected to go to their fields unmarried and serve a term of three years before undertaking the responsibilities of family life.

The Moravians have projected a mission on the Victoria Nyanza; but they have been unable to establish it by the lack of funds. Just before the opening of their General Synod this year news was brought that a legacy of between $25,000 and $30,000 had fallen to the Church, and it is probable that the work will speedily be carried forward as the men are ready.

SELECTIONS.

THE Moslems of Delhi have opened a seminary in which preachers are taught all the objections of Western infidels against Christianity, that they may go forth to oppose the Christian preachers in town and country,

E. PAYSON PORTER'S table of statistics for Sunday-schools in the United States shows that there are in all 101,824 Sunday-schools, with 8,345,431 scholars and 1,100,104 teachers, making a total of 9,445,535 in the Sunday-schools of the country. Pennsylvania continues to be the banner State in the number of schools—8,729—though New York has more scholars. Pennsylvania has 964,599; New York, 979,415. Among the States, Louisiana seems to stand at the foot. It has only 522 schools and 32,617 scholars. The little State of Rhode Island exceeds it in scholars by about 12,000. Of the cities, Philadelphia is in the lead, with 616 schools and 178,865 scholars. New York comes next, with 600 schools and 172,000 scholars. Brooklyn, the city of churches, has 263 schools and 97,033 scholars, easily holding third place.

THE General Convention which has just adjourned in New York city, represents 50 dioceses, 14 missionary jurisdictions, 70 bishops, including 4 who have resigned their jurisdictions, 14 missionary bishops, and 4 assistant bishops, 2 bishops-elect, 3,500 clergy, and 450,000 communicants in round numbers.

EVERY clergyman knows that there are always among his communicants some who are not up to the mark, and some who are, even at the present moment, no credit to the Church. What does he do? Cut them out as dead-wood? Send them off under the idea that the Church people think themselves too good for his company? Disgust them to such an extent that they brand all Church members as a parcel of hypocrites and all churches as humbugs? No! The only possible course is the pastoral method of Christ—to "seek the lost sheep until he find it."

IT IS hardly understood, except by those brought directly in contact with the masses, how steadily most of the laboring men in our city are drifting away from any direct Christian influence and faith. They are not generally hostile to the Church, they are simply indifferent. The prevailing idea, e. g., in the trades unions and among the vast numbers who make up what is called "organized labor," is that Christianity has no adequate answer for the problems in which the workingman is chiefly concerned.—Archdeacon Mackay-Smith.

ON the West coast of Africa there are now about 200 churches, 35,000 converts, 100,000 adherents, 275 schools, 30,000 pupils; and portions of Scripture and religious books have been translated into 35 languages or dialects.

A PLAN is under discussion in Episcopal Church circles in India for the establishment of a Christian university. The idea is to build up an institution of the highest grade, under the exclusive control of Christians, in which the study of the Bible will be required of all who attend, and by which degrees in divinity, as well as in the arts and sciences, shall be given.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week from 11 to 12 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

The Sunday-school Teachers' meetings, for the study of the lesson, are on Fridays, 4 P. M., in Guild Hall, in the Parish House.

A CHANGE OF RUBRIC made in the revision of the Prayer Book at the last General Convention provides that, on days when Holy Communion follows Morning Prayer, the Minister will begin the Service with a sentence, and proceed at once to the Lord's Prayer (omitting the Exhortation, Confession and Absolution), and end Morning Prayer with the Prayer for the President. This order will be observed hereafter, according to the law as it now stands.

THE ATTENDANCE AT THE DAILY PRAYERS is not what it ought to be. Is the hour, 11 o'clock, an inconvenient one? If so, won't somebody say so? In households, when Family Prayer is said every morning, its members may fairly go about their business for the day without going to church. But when this is not the case, and we may as well face the fact, that in most families it is not, then its members ought to go to Morning Prayer. They cannot afford, either as Christians or honest men, to live their days and do their work without some recognition of God. If they try to do so, then their religious lives will surely starve—and ought to starve.

The Rector would be extremely glad to have candid expressions of opinion as to the hours at which the Daily Prayers might best be said, so as to make it convenient for people to come.

THE ATTENTION OF THE PEOPLE is earnestly called to the work of Bible study about to be undertaken, under the "American Institute of Sacred Literature." A local Board, consisting of the following gentlemen, has been constituted for Philadelphia:

DIRECTORS.

Rev. Dr. George D. Barker, Rev. Dr. Edward T. Bartlett, Rev. L. W. Batten, Rev. Dr. John T. Beckley, Rev. C. W. Buoy, Mr. George H. Crozer, Rev. Dr. S. W. Dana, Rev. Dr. Chas. A. Dickey, Prof. W. R. Harper, Prof. J. Rendel Harris, Mr. Chas. C. Harrison, Rev. Dr. Wayland Hoyt, Prof. H. V. Hilprecht, Rev. Dr. Henry E. Jacobs, Major W. H. Lambert, Rev. Dr. W. J. Mann, Rev. Dr. S. D. McConnell, Rev. Dr. W. N. McVickar, Mr. Robert C. Ogden, Hon. Robt. E. Pattison, Dr. Wm. Pepper, Rev. Dr. J. DeWolfe Perry, Rev. Dr. Henry G. Weston.

The following from the circular of the Board will explain the method of work:

This Board will hold a series of Weekly Studies in the English Bible.

For the current year there will be a course of ten such studies, conducted by Prof. W. R. Harper, of Yale University. They will begin Tuesday, January 14th, 1890, and continue weekly until Tuesday, March 18th. There will be an afternoon study at 4 o'clock, and the same study in the evening at 8 o'clock, for those who find the afternoon hour inconvenient. The tickets will be good for either the afternoon or evening, but not for both. The class will meet in the lecture room of the Church of the Holy Trinity, Nineteenth and Walnut Streets.

THE COURSE.

1. Subject. Old Testament prophecy of the Assyrian Period.

2. Books Studied. Amos, Hosea, Isaiah, Micah and Nahum.

3. Plan. The plan will include the study of (1) the history of the particular circumstances which called forth the prophet's words. (2) The literary characteristics of the prophetic writer. (3) The chapters of the prophecy one by one, in order to ascertain the real thought of the prophetic sermon. (4) A summary of the prophet's teaching upon the more important subjects.

4. Method to be pursued. (1) A printed syllabus containing an outline of the subject of each study will be placed in the hands of the students. (2) Upon the basis of this outline the subject will be studied, the lecturer presenting to the class brief statements under each topic. (3) After the presentation of the subject, attention will be given to questions by members of the class. (4) During the week the student will follow up the subject with such reading as it may be possible to do. (5) At the close of the course, an examination will be offered to all who may desire to take it; those who pass this examination will receive certificates for the same from the American Institute of Sacred Literature.

Each student will please bring a Bible, revised version if possible. Books of reference will be recommended at the first meeting of the class.

Special Aim of these Studies.

It is felt by the Board that this course will be of peculiar interest and value to Clergymen, Theological Students, Sunday-School Teachers, Bible Classes, and to all others interested in systematic Bible study. The aim is not to take the place of anything now being done, but to supplement and encourage, that more and better work may be accomplished. It is believed that it will be possible for those whose use of the Bible is limited to the English, to obtain from these studies the results of the best modern scholarship.

Fees.

Tickets for the course, $3.00; a class or group of five, $2.50 each; a class or group of ten or more, $2.00 each; Clergymen, $2.00; Theological Students, $1.00; single lectures, 50 cents.

Tickets may be obtained by addressing the Secretary, or at the following places; Lutheran Book Stores, 117 North Sixth Street, and 42 North Ninth Street; American Baptist Publication Rooms, 1420 Chestnut Street; Presbyterian Board of Education, 1334 Chestnut Street; M. E. Book Rooms, 1018 Arch Street; James Hammond, 1224 Chestnut Street.

Financial Support.

The fees have purposely been put as low as possible. To make educational work self-supporting, the tuition must be high, or the remuneration to instructors inadequate. In this case it is proposed to do neither, trusting to the generous friends of Biblical education. Subscriptions for the work will be gratefully received by the Treasurer, Major W. H. Lambert, 1001 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

For circulars and other information, address the Secretary, Rev. L. W. Batten, 61st and Hazel Avenue, Philadelphia.

THE DAILY SERVICE.

BY ISAAC WILLIAMS.

"And are we then alone on holy ground,
Most gracious Father? Are we then alone,
Because the world regards not and is gone?
Where are the solemn dead which lie around;
Are they not with us? Are Thy courts not crown'd
With spiritual hosts about, while the sweet tone
Still lingers round Thine altars? Are they flown?
Bearing no more to see their God disowned!
Has the great Michael left us—mighty arm,
Gabriel our fortitude, and the blest charm
Of Raphael's healing?" In my heart's fear
I heard a voice—"Be still and lowly bend;
While two or three remain; thy Lord is here,
And where His presence is, His hosts attend."

REPORT.

January 1st, 1890.

The Garment Committee presents its 2d Annual Report to its members and other contributors during the past year with the full assurance that they will all be interested in its welfare. There are now 148 names on the list, and out of that number we have received, during the past year, contributions from 124, and three contributions without name or address, that may possibly have come from members, but as we have no way of knowing, can only express our thanks and gratitude.

We commenced our year, December 1st, 1888, with a balance of 204 garments, and have received to the close of the year, November 30th, 1889, 603 garments, making a total of 807. Of these we have distributed to individuals, 255; hospitals, 48; Johnstown, 221; Missionary Box Society, 41; total distributed, 565, leaving a balance of 242; total garments, 807.

The wish was to distribute all supplies by November 30th, but a large proportion of the clothing came in too late for this purpose, and perhaps it is as well, as we can better meet the constant demands made upon our resources, and which we too frequently have to neglect. We cordially thank all the members for their liberality, and also for their confidence in the Committee in charge, and append for their satisfaction a list of all contributors for the year 1888–89, and after this will publish a monthly list of the names of the contributors during the previous month.

The Industrial School, started in this Parish in December, under the direction of Professor J. Liberty Tadd, is now fairly under way. The class has been selected from the wide-awake boys and girls of the Sunday-school, and now numbers about forty members. It meets on Monday and Thursday evenings, at 1714 Chestnut street, and from the reports of Professor Tadd, is doing well and compares very favorably with the classes that have been formed in other places. The boys and girls are taught drawing, wood-carving and modeling.

In response to the appeal of the Rector the children of the Parish brought toys, books and Christmas cards to the vestry room of the church on Tuesday Morning, Dec. 31st. These various gifts are distributed by the ladies of the Altar Society to the Hospitals and Homes of the city—the Home of the Merciful Saviour for Crippled Children, being especially remembered.

The design of the rector in making this appeal from the chancel to the children of the congregation, from year to year, is not simply that some of the gladness of the Christmas-tide be brought to the children of the poor, but also that good may come to the children of the well-to-do and rich. In kindness of heart and tenderness of feeling they consider their less fortunate companions, and thus doing, in some God-given way a blessing descends upon their own lives, and they are made the better boys and girls. It is to be hoped that the young people of St. Stephen's Church will more generally take an interest in this movement the coming year.

THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY, received at the Easter collection $20, which they have kept to give the 150 children, they had out during the Summer, a Christmas treat. It is to be a stereopticon entertainment shown by Mr. Wilbour, on the 2d of January, 1890.

It is the intention of the Ladies of the Society to invite the Sunday-school children and their teachers. Also the Contributing Members, and a few of the mothers of the little ones,

Each child, under the care of the Society, will be presented with a gift from Santa Claus.

SELECTIONS.

THE movement for a National Sunday-rest law is growing, enlisting railroad employers and many others who believe the Sabbath was made for man.

IF some our Sunday-school folk will put a little more of Jesus and a little less of Santa Claus into Christmas celebrations this season, it will be well for the cause we all love.

ARCHBISHOP WHATELY once wrote to Mrs. Arnold: "I remember one of my parishioners at Halesworth telling me that he thought a person should not go to church to be made uncomfortable. I replied that I thought so too, but whether it should be the sermon or the man's life that should be altered to avoid the discomfort, must depend on whether the doctrine was right or wrong.

EIGHTY-FIVE years ago the honorable directors of the East India Company placed on solemn record:—"The sending of Christian missionaries into our Eastern possessions is the maddest, most expensive, most unwarrantable project that was ever proposed by a lunatic enthusiast." A few months since, Sir Rivers Thompson, Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, said:—"In my judgment, Christian missionaries have done more real and lasting good to the people of India than all other agencies combined."

THE Rev. Dr. A. P. Putnam, in writing of the overture of our House of Bishops, says: "The Episcopal Church has entered upon a larger and nobler life. If it may not arrogate to itself the name of the American Church, it is possible that more than any other it may really become such. It is laying aside much of its exclusiveness. It is more ready to work with other denominations. It is more active than ever in its missionary operations. It is seeing, as never before, that the field is the world. It has of late been formost in grappling with the great, living, practical questions of the time, such particularly as affect deeply the interests of the laboring classes. More and more it abounds in all kinds of philanthropic service."

BISHOP TEMPLE relates a good story of the inconvenience which he has experienced from his musical defect.

Worshiping on one occasion in an East End Church, where a hearty musical service is a distinguishing feature of the congregation, the Bishop, as is his wont, joined in the singing to the best of his ability. He has a strong, if not stentorian voice, and the effect of his efforts on those sitting near him may be imagined.

At the conclusion of the second verse of the hymn, the patience of a workingman on his immediate left seemed fairly exhausted. Not recognizing the dignitary beside him, the poor man, in sheer desperation, gave the Bishop a sharp dig in the ribs, and the latter, on turning round for an explanation, was thus addressed in subdued but distinct tones:

"I say, guv'ner, you dry up; you're spoiling the whole show."—The Voice.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week from 11 to 12 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

The Sunday-school Teachers' meetings, for the study of the lesson, are on Fridays, 4 P. M., in the Parish House.

LENT COMMENCES THIS YEAR Ash-Wednesday, Feb. 19th, and Easter occurs April 6th, The attention of the congregation is called to the schedule of Lenten services which they will find on the first page of this paper. The arrangement of services is the same as has obtained during Lent in previous years.

IT IS A SOURCE OF CONSTANT regret to the Rector of this Parish that he cannot better know his people personally. Probably the people do not feel half so badly about the matter as he does. The pastoral relation is one, which in modern conditions of life, especially in a large city, seems to be practically impossible. Many of the people with whom the clergy would gladly be upon terms of intimate personal acquaintance, are hardly known to them, even by sight. It is a great loss to the clergy, and, the Rector ventures to think, maybe a loss also to the people. He would gladly correct the evil if he could. He does not see how. An ordinary sized man is capable of a certain amount of activity and not more; if he expend it upon one object, or one class of objects it is not available for other purposes. When he has taken care that the machinery of the Parish is well adjusted and in good working order; when he has done the honest work which every preacher has to do in connection with the pulpit; has visited the sick, afflicted, unfortunate, he finds that not only he has not time left for the social intercourse which he so much desires, but that he has not more than half done the things he undertook to do. He would like nothing better than to go from house to house and learn to know individually the souls committed to his cure. This is impossible until there shall be more than three hundred and sixty-five days in the year. Meanwhile, he does the best he can and begs for patience and good will.

A COURSE OF SPECIAL SERVICES for Medical Students was begun in the church last Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. Seven hundred students were present. Dr. D. Hayes Agnew made an address before them upon the subject of personal religion,—particularly concerning its necessity in the full equipment of a physician—which the students present will not be likely soon to forget. The rationale of these services is this; there are in the city about 3000 young men who are studying, in one or other of its forms, the art of healing. They are for the most part strangers in the city. Attempts have been made with but little success to secure their presence at church. It seemed to us that they would be more likely to attend a religious service if the sermon would be preached by a physician than by a clergyman. Several of the most celebrated physicians and surgeons in the city, or even in the country, have most kindly consented to speak to the assembled students in our church upon successive Sunday evenings.

Dr. Agnew was the first. The success of the first service was beyond all expectation. Dr. Parvin, of the Jefferson Medical College, and Dr. John Ashurst, Jr., of the University, will follow. These services are solely for medical students. Others are not invited, nor would there be room for them if they came. They can best assist in the matter with their good will and their prayers for God's blessing upon the enterprise.

THE ANNUAL OFFERING FOR DIOCESAN MISSIONS will be placed on the Altar on Sunday morning, Feb. 16th. This annual offering has come to be a well known institution in St. Stephen's. We will say, however, for the sake of those who have come to us within the year, that the way of doing it is as follows: On Sunday morning, Feb. 9th, the Rector will say what he knows about the work of the Church in the way of Missions, in this Diocese. During the week which follows, every family and individual in the Parish will be waited upon by a committee of gentlemen, among whom the Parish is districted for that purpose. The Committee simply calls to receive the offerings of those who are willing to give. They will make no argument or explanation or appeal of any kind. The Rector will do all that. Of course the Committee will be courteously received by all well-bred people, whether they can see their way to contribute or not. The amount wished for this purpose is supposed to be equal to $5.00 from each person. This is what we have done heretofore, and nobody is any poorer, while many a Missionary and struggling handful of poor people are much the better off. The result of our plan has been to put our Parish for several years at the head of the list in the Diocese in this matter.

Of course, there is many a one in the Parish who cannot afford to give anything like the amount mentioned above, but there are many others who can, and heretofore have given for their poorer neighbors. There is no fear but that they will do so again. The whole amount gathered by the Collectors will be by them put in the Alms-basins, Sunday, February 16th. Last year the offerings amounted to $1;500; the year before to $1,300.

CONFIRMATION.

The Bishop has appointed Tuesday in Holy Week, April 1st, at 11 o'clock, as the time for the annual Confirmation in this church. This is the date to which we have been accustomed for many years.

Who should be confirmed? (1.) Such children of Christian parents as have come to discretion, and are old enough and wise enough to take upon themselves the promise which their parents took for them at their Baptism. This does not mean children who have not come to discretion. The Rector of this parish will not present children for confirmation. Of course no definite age can be fixed. One child at fifteen may be as old as another at twenty. It means young people who are old enough to form moral judgments, and to know what they are doing. The candidate is called upon to declare that he "believes the Apostles' Creed." It is not required that he should be old enough or learned enough to say clearly why he believes it, but he must be old enough to know whether he does or does not believe it. He is called upon to promise to "lead a sober, righteous and godly life." This promise he cannot fairly be asked to make until he is old enough to have some intelligent notion about what it is to live, and what sobriety and righteousness mean. Not that it requires any great age or wisdom to understand these things. The judgment of the young man or maiden is often much more clear here than is that of their more sophisticated father or mother. He who is old enough to prefer right to wrong as the rule of his life, and who humbly begs Divine aid and sustentation therein, is the one who ought to be confirmed.

(2.) The man or woman whose life is already fairly honest, pure and upright, but who is not openly identified with the Church of the living God, or doing that which in him may lie to bring his fellow-men to the righteousness of Christ. It is worth while for such a man to consider whether his present attitude is honorable? He believes in Jesus Christ, rules his life as well as he may by his counsels, expects to be buried as a Christian man, and to face the Son of Man when he wakes up again, but declines to acknowledge in the only practicable way what is the source and ground of the very real goodness which he now possesses. The things which prevent him ordinarily are not sufficient. They are a foolish shyness, which is childish; the notion that he "is not good enough," whereas he knows perfectly well that the very purpose of the Church is to nourish and produce goodness; the fear that he "may not be able to keep his promises," whereas he ought to know that the same obligations precisely rest upon him whether he promises or not.

(3.) Those who at present possess membership in other churches, but are attracted by what they and we believe to be our "better way." As a rule, this class of persons constitute a large proportion of those confirmed in our Church. A curious mistake sometimes obtains that by being confirmed they tacitly treat with disrespect their present membership, or rather that our Church does not recognize them as having been members of the church. As a matter of fact, we do precisely what all other churches do. We have our own way of public avowal of membership as they have their way. The certificate of membership, which such a one brings with him takes the place of all examination as to religious character and moral fitness. It does not compel the reception of the member by us any more than a certificate from us would compel reception by Lutherans or Presbyterians. In either case it is an act of courtesy.

But we ask those who come that they shall stand up before our people and publicly identify themselves with us, as we become responsible for them.

But what is the meaning and use of the Rite? Ideally it is simply this: the young man or woman who has been up to this time sheltered under parental care, now begins his own religious life. At the outset, the Church, (to which he already belongs), bids him call to mind what his profession is, bids him kneel and receive her benediction at the hands of the only man who can act for the Church. This benediction is not only a prayer, but something more. It gently constrains the Spirit of God, which moveth as the wind, to touch and fill the humble soul, striving for goodness with "wisdom and ghostly strength."

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE.

Annexed is a list of all Contributors and Contributing members for the month of December, 1889 (the first day of that month being the commencement of the year). We have, through their liberality, started our third year splendidly, many of the members having sent duplicate packages in answer to our appeals, and we have never been so well supplied as now, nor so well able to meet the daily appeals of distress that come under our notice. It is true that unless the supply is continued the demands will soon be in excess, but after our recent experiences in liberal and spontaneous giving, we have no right to think that our supplies will ever give out. Our trust and confidence cannot so easily be shaken. At present the great need is for Infants' Clothing; we have a pitiful amount on hand for these poor little helpless creatures who, in many cases must die if those who have the means do not clothe them. A mere handful of garments of thinnest texture, and too scanty in numbers to allow a change, is all we have; while warm flannels and cottons are necessities. Please think of this while the weather is so cold.

Every Monday morning from 10.30 until 12.30 M. one of the Committee will be at the Parish School building (rear of the Church) to attend to all business.

THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY gave their Annual Stereopticon Entertainment January 2d, for the children they had out during the Summer.

The Sunday-school room was well filled by the children, their mothers and invited guests.

The pictures were enjoyed very much, particularly the funny ones, several of the children have already repeated the little stories that Mr. Wilbour so kindly told them.

Mr. Wilbour first showed pictures of a trip across the water, starting from New York, visiting France, Venice, Germany, Rome and many other places, landing home again within the interior of St. Stephen's Church.

The girls in the Sunday-school Choir led the singing, the other children and friends joining in.

Then another visitor was announced. Who should it be but Santa Claus himself! Although late, he had not forgotten our little ones; 170 gifts were then distributed, consisting of clothing of different kinds, books and toys.

The children were told not to open their packages until they left the room; the temptation was too great for several, but the most of them waited patiently until they got outside or in the cars.

One little boy went down Chestnut Street trying to get at the contents of a Noah's Ark, much to the amusement of several persons.

The members of the Society take this opportunity of thanking those of the congregation and other friends who have helped them from time to time.

One little boy sent fifty cents out of his own spending money (five ten cent pieces), which he wished to be used to buy a little child a Christmas gift, which was given to a very poor little girl.

Last year the Society entertained 75 children; this year, 170. The children are all known by the ladies; most of them visited, and the interest kept up the entire year.

It is the intention of the Society to give an entertainment for the children in the Guild Hall of Parish House, February 11th, at 7.30 o'clock.

For the month of March, and during Lent, the ladies will sew and visit the little ones.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 19th, 1890.

MY DEAR PASTOR AND FRIENDS:—"The poor ye have always with you."

Animated by a feeling of sincere gratitude for help received in time of pressing need, I wish to express this gratitude, through THE PARISH NEWS, to the people of St. Stephen's.

The recipient has been a constant attendant of the church during the present Rector's time, and has added her "mite" to the Offertory, glad to give a little and longing for the privilege of giving more.

The time came when help was needed and upon acquainting the Rector of the case, he at once gave from the charity fund of the church, which fund, I understand, is sustained by the contributions each Sunday for "General Charities."

My object in making this acknowledgment is that those who occasionally or habitually give to this fund may realize the good done as it is wisely used by one who takes a personal and loving interest in the Church's poor,—and that, realizing this fact they may be incited to give more bountifully and in the spirit of true benevolence for "God loveth a cheerful giver."

Gratefully yours,

SELECTIONS.

There is a burden of care in getting riches; fear in keeping them; temptation in using them; guilt in abusing them; sorrow in losing them; and a burden of account at last to be given up concerning them.

THE faith that is looking to God to do everything hardly accords with the teaching of the Book. While it is our duty and privilege to pray for God to work as only He can work, we are not to leave Him to do all the work. We are God's fellow-workers. That being the case, if we fail to do our part, that vitiates the promise of the Lord's help, and He leaves us in our laziness, and nothing but failure can result.

PRIDE is the character of the children of Adam; humility the mark of the Son of God.—Quesnel.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week from 11 to 12 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

CONFIRMATION INSTRUCTIONS WILL BE GIVEN in the Parish House Mondays at 7.30 o'clock, and in Church Wednesdays and Fridays at 5 o'clock.

THE BISHOP WILL CONFIRM at the morning service, Tuesday in Holy week, ~~April 1st.~~ March 24

All those who expect to be Confirmed will meet the Rector on Friday March 28th, immediately after the 5 o'clock service, to sign the Parish Register, and make final arrangements. The Rector begs to repeat that it will give him sincere pleasure to meet half-way, or the whole way, for that matter, any one who is thinking of Confirmation. He wishes also to point out that the question for every man and woman to ask is not "Why should I be confirmed?" but "What reasonable apology have I for not doing so?"

Seats will be provided for those candidates who have no regular places of sitting.

The ladies to be Confirmed, will come to the chancel bare-headed. The class will assemble at the chancel rail, and remain standing until the Rector gives them the signal to kneel. (The proper attitude for the congregation in the Confirmation office, is to stand until the Bishop bids them to prayer.) There will be a celebration of the Holy Communion immediately after, at which all the newly Confirmed are expected to receive. (It is one of the "lesser morals" of the Church, that the consecrated Bread shall always be in an open, ungloved hand.)

Those to be Confirmed will, by some means, find a little time in the morning before coming to Church, to be alone with God, and ask His blessings upon what they are about to do.

THE OFFERINGS ON EASTER DAY will be for whatever good object each person contributing may mark his gift. If he does not designate it for anything special, the Rector will distribute it among such Church and charitable objects as, in his judgment, may be most useful. It is the custom of the Rector, as of all rectors, to pledge his parish to do certain things, and then to ask his people for the wherewithal to redeem these pledges. It is understood, in all such promises, that he is only to do his best, and not make promises over and above what he may reasonably expect his people to do. Our memoranda of promises for the year ending May, 1890, at this writing has the following aspect:

For Dioscesan Missions.	(Paid)	$800 00
" Theatre Services,	(Paid)	500 00
" St. Simeon's Mission Church.		700 00
" Support of Colored Students at Fredericksburg, Va.	(Paid)	25 00
" Colored Mission at Washington.	(Paid)	50 00
" " Church of Crucifixion.		25 00
" Hospital for Colored Children in Virginia.		100 00
" Hospital Mission, Cairo, Ill.		50 00
" Children's Friend Society.		100 00
" Mission Church, West Phila.	(Paid)	25 00

Will somebody be good enough to redeem each of these unpaid promises at Easter? Sir, which will you take? Madam, which do you prefer? At what do you estimate this year your duty in sense of gratitude for your hope of resurrection?

At the Easter Services it will be impossible to keep the seats unoccupied after the time to begin services. The pew holders and regular attendants will be admitted through the north transept doors. The front doors will be opened five minutes before the service time, after which all pews will be filled as full as they will comfortably hold.

We are quite aware of the inhospitable look that this method has. Reasonable people, however, will see the reasonableness of it; unreasonable ones will not, but that cannot be helped. The vociferous complaint that he was not given a seat on Easter day is usually heard from the man or woman who has not been inside a Church since last Easter. He declines to identify himself anywhere, to do any work, to take any responsibility, and then when he concludes to go to Church once, simply and solely for his own entertainment, he is indignant because a seat is not reserved for him, and because those who go always do not make way for him. Still, there is not very many of him, and it is hardly worth while to be much disturbed by him. He can be set over against that other very rare individual, who looks inhospitable when strangers are shown to his pew. If it would only always happen that the two would get into the same seat!

Most of our visitors—who, we delight to say, are very many—are reasonable, courteous, and recognize the fact that we wish to treat them just as well as we know how—only we must be allowed to make our own rules for it.

A Committee of the Altar Society will attend at the Parish House after Wednesday and Friday Morning Services, to give out prices of sewing to any lady who will be willing, during Lent, to make up and return one or more garments for distribution in the Children's Hospitals and among the poor.

The Garment Committee reports that among our many friends in the congregation there seems to be a few who scarcely understand the object and uses of this organization, which in a very quiet and modest way really does a vast amount of good.

To become a member, simply means to give two plain, substantial garments, (for either sex and of any age) in the course of the year; new of course preferred, although there are many woolen goods such as partially worn dresses and mens' outside clothing that are most acceptable and useful. These are placed in the hands of a Committee of Seven Ladies of the Parish, who exercise their judgment conscientiously in distributing to the worthy poor such garments as will protect them from illness and the sufferings from cold weather. They receive twice the value of the material, or money, in giving them articles of clothing ready to put on, as in many cases any delay in supplying their necessities might be a serious matter. There is also another class most difficult to reach, those with too much self-respect to allow their needs to be generally known, and here we have been most fortunate and successful in relieving their necessities so delicately as not to wound.

The sympathy extended by means of these garments has brought sunshine and cheerfulness into many sad and weary hearts. Assistance is also given as far as our supplies will allow to Missions and Hospitals, supported by voluntary contributions. The aim of the organization is far-reaching, and the demands upon it incessant, the amount of good accomplished depends altogether upon its members, our object being to help the old, the very young, the sick and the helpless, those whom God has especially given us to do for, and for whom all can do if they desire.

One of the Committee will be at the Parish School Building, (rear of the Church) every Monday from 10.30 A. M. until 12.30 P. M. to attend to all business, and packages may be left at any time at 9 South 10th St., marked for the Garment Committee.

Dear Dr. McConnell:

Permit me to thank the "children of St. Stephen's Church," through you, for their donation of toys, books, &c., received yesterday at this office, for distribution among poor children who have but few pleasures, and who will be delighted to receive the toys thus contributed.

Please say to each of the dear children, who thus remembered the poor for whom we care, that, we recognize in them fellow-workers in dispensing comfort and joy to the children of the very poor, and pray that in such Christ-like deeds, they will each and all abound and grow, realizing more and more that, "it is more blessed to give than to receive," and wish them all for me a Happy New Year. Very truly yours,

Herman L. Duhring, Supt.

Philadelphia, February 15th, 1890.

Dear Dr. McConnell:

The committee on the Increase of the Episcopal Fund, appointed by the Diocesan Convention, has begun work, and, in order to make that work successful, the co-operation of every rector in this diocese is absolutely necessary.

The following facts are stated for your information:

The present Episcopal Fund amounts to a little over Sixty thousand dollars. In order to relieve the parishes entirely from assessment in the future, this fund must aggregate Two hundred thousand dollars. This involves the raising of One hundred and forty thousand dollars more.

As a beginning, Thirty thousand dollars have already been subscribed, in accordance with the terms of the plan hereinafter set forth.

It is unnecessary to tell any rector how desirable it is that this fund should be raised speedily.

The annual assessment is a severe burden on many parishes; the collection to meet it generally falls far short of the amount required, and the sum has to be made up from other sources.

It is believed by the committee that the sum needed can be raised if everybody who ought to work to that end will work.

The committee promises to do its share, but it needs your co-operation; and lest it be thought that this bare request is indefinite, we suggest a few methods of co-operation likely to prove effective·

1. By explaining to your people (a) What the Episcopal Fund is. (b) The present amount of it. (c) The further sum needed. (d) The great relief likely to accrue to the parishes from the raising of the fund. (e) Commend it to the earnest attention of the congregation.

2. By sending to the Treasurer the names of those in your congregation whom you think likely to contribute to this fund, in order that one of the committee may confer personally with them.

3. By agreeing to accompany one of the committee, if it be thought desirable, in visiting a limited number of your congregation and presenting the subject. (Signed.)

Philadelphia, February, 15th 1890,

The Committee on the Episcopal Fund appointed by the convention in May, 1888, has adopted the following resolution:

Resolved, That the basis upon which this committee will ask for subscriptions to the Episcopal Fund be as follows:

1. The amount asked for is One hundred and forty thousand dollars.

2. Subscriptions shall not be binding unless Seventy-five thousand dollars be pledged before July 1st, 1890.

3. Subscriptions may, if desired, be paid in annual or semi-annual installments extending over a period of three or five years; or instead of this installment plan, they may be paid at any time within five years, the subscriptions meanwhile bearing interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum.

4. When Seventy five thousand dollars shall be raised, the income thereof shall be added to the principal until the fund shall amount to One hundred thousand dollars, after which time the income shall be available for the use of the Episcopal and Convention Funds.

THE ITALIAN MISSION WANTS HELP, and ought to have it.

There are about twenty thousand Italians in Philadelphia. They are congregated for the most part in the south-east part of the city.

At present only two churches are known to be doing any work among them—the Italian Mission and the parish of Santa Magdalena, of the Roman Catholic Church.

The mission reports that its work is influencing, directly or indirectly, a thousand people. If an equal number, or three times that number—and no one else claims these figures—receives attention from the Roman Catholic Church, there is still left an army of fifteen thousand at the least who are under no religious or educational advantages of any kind. They seem to be a neglected community in the midst of a large Christian city—a community liable at any moment to become a menace to our laws and institutions.

They are in most cases the dupes of unprincipled agents who lured them with false promises from their native land to this country, where what would have kept many of them in comfort at home has been quickly expended in traveling and living expenses. Uneducated, even in their mother tongue, wretchedly housed, and with only a precarious livelihood, they present a spectacle which must touch the hearts of the lovers of humanity.

Some seven years ago, a number of Christian gentlemen became interested in these people and founded an Italian Mission for work among them. It is the only organized mission of Protestant Christians for this people in this city. In connection with the mission are day and night schools, where the children are taught the English language, so that they may in time receive moral and religious instruction through this channel. On Sundays there are religious services in Italian for the adults, who can only be taught religious truth in their own tongue. WE HAVE THESE PEOPLE, WE HAVE THEIR CHILDREN, BUT WE HAVE NOT A SUITABLE BUILDING IN WHICH WE CAN FOSTER ALL THE WORK OF OUR VARIOUS BRANCHES. A parish building is of great necessity, and for this we most earnestly appeal to our Christian friends. Poverty of dress and other considerations practically exclude Italian children from our public schools, and a difference in language necessitates much preliminary training to enable them to get any advantage from our schools. The mission has prepared already over five hundred children to enter the public schools. We have all the funds for this parish building except $4,000. We want eight people who will give $500 apiece for this.

This work is receiving the careful attention of the mission and deserves public recognition.

The mission stands ready to minister to suffering and sickness. It is the only agency in the city through which relief can be practically and judiciously applied by the hands of a native Italian clergyman.

Living in our midst, exercising a moral and political influence for good or evil, increasing in numbers daily, capable of being reached with but a fraction of the expense attending distant missions, unacquainted with the principles of our civil and religious institutions, these Italians present a case that appeals to our patriotism as well as our Christian sympathy.

"I know of no work in this Diocese more worthy of confidence and support than that which is carried on by the Rev. M. Zara, in the Italian Mission. A parish building is greatly needed, and I earnestly hope that the means for providing it will be speedily contributed.

O. W. WHITAKER,
Bishop of Pennsylvania.

"THE VISITING NURSE SOCIETY" has for its object "To give to the poor and those of moderate means the best home nursing possible under existing circumstances." A visiting nurse works with missionary spirit, giving of her own life and energy to aid others, now tending a sick mother, again soothing an ailing child or easing the last stages of consumption. With tact and strength of character she must control nervous symptoms, she must encourage the depressed, teaching everywhere the plainest rules of cleanliness and hygiene.

Those of us who have ourselves known the comfort of good nursing, or have watched its results on some dear member of our household, say we will never again be without a trained nurse, but do we always think what may be the fate of our poorer neighbor in like distress? Were we to see for ourselves the needless suffering occasioned by want of care, we could not help putting forth a hand to ward it off, but we do not see. In the country, or in small towns, each member of the community is interested in each other member, but in large cities that cannot be. Because the subject is large are we the more exempt from considering it? The Visiting Nurse Society is established to assume this duty when there is sickness which can be tended at home, thereby keeping the family together. It is also often of service to ladies of smallmeans, who could not otherwise possibly receive the care of a trained nurse. Its nurses bathe patients in bed, arrange the clothing, make a poultice, or otherwise carry out the physian's orders, leaving a house as soon as they have accomplished these tasks, but returning at stated intervals, according to the severity of the illness. They go from one patient to another, and often, thanks to the benevolent Guilds which send them nourishing food, they carry with them much needed diet. In a year's time these nurses pay many hundred visits, seeing about five hundred patients each, in all forms of disease, (except where there is contagion which they cannot risk carrying). Their work will be extended as fast as the means given it will permit, and its managers ask not only for contributions, but that those knowing the deserving sick poor will send to 1203 Race street to claim assistance from those whose object is "To go about doing good."

THE Children's Friend Society gave an entertainment, February 11th, to one hundred and twenty-five children. It was made very enjoyable through the kindness of Mr. Hopper, who engaged Mr. Yost, the ventriloquist, to entertain the children for an hour, which he did very delightfully.

Master Arthur Hartman, violinist, eight years old, offered his services for the evening. His music was delightful and very much enjoyed by all in the room. One of the members of the Society accompanied Master Hartman on the piano.

The Sunday-school choir sang their lullaby which Mr. Wood so kindly taught them; Mr. Wood playing the accompaniment on the piano.

Several other songs and recitations by the children, all doing what they could to make the evening pleasant.

The ladies of the Society again take the opportunity to thank all who so kindly helped them, and regret, owing to the room being small, that they could not invite more to share the pleasure with them. At the close of the entertainment each child went home with a large orange and a happy face. In two months the Society has entertained and brightened the lives of one hundred and eighty-five children; the first year we started seventy-five, last year one hundred and seventy. Our work seems to be everywhere and everything. We are always finding something new to do.

SELECTIONS.

GOOD BOOKS TO READ IN LENT.—Everybody who wants to make the most of Lent, will make a difference in his reading during this season. The whole purpose of Lent is to deepen the spiritual life. Emphasis must be laid from all sides upon the spiritual side of life. Toward this good books will help greatly.

The following are commended: Robertson's Sermons: Padre Augustino's Sermons; Bishop Huntington's "Helps to a Holy Lent," (two series); Phillips Brooks' Sermons (any volume); Mrs. Oliphant's "Francis of Assisi;" Mrs. Gilman's "Saint Theresa" in the "Famous Women" series, published by Roberts Bros.; Thomas a'Kempis.

[From the Guild's Kalendar; Rev. C. J. Wood.]

It is a fact worth nothing that defections from the Church are from the High or the Evangelical wing. We know of only one from the Broad Church party and he only nominally a latitudinarian.

The late Bishop Horatio Potter once said of an acquaintance of ours who was assistant minister in the famous Church on Fifth avenue, New York city: "He'll do for the Church of the Heavenly Rest, but is not worth a cent for the Church of Earthly Conflict."

It is a happy thing to be a great preacher like Dr. Talmage, who has a congregation of 4,000, but that congregation gave last year, to objects outside their own parish, not $250, and now, although they have got from insurance companies some $300,000, they are out begging the Christian world at large to help them rebuild. What good has Dr. Talmage's preaching done?

It seems to be a question whether the American Board of Foreign Missions will crush Dr. Lyman Abbott, or he will blow them into "flinders." War has been declared. It is a duel to the death. The Methodists as well as the Congregationalists are virtuously shocked. The truth is they are too stupid to understand him.

The other day a few people gathered to make a monster celebration of the anniversary of Thomas Paine? Why? Because they hate the Christian religion, or think that they do. It is probable that their knowledge of both Christianity and the writings of Thomas Paine is vague and thin. We never found a ranting infidel who knew the religion he was abusing.

The following from Meister Eckehart the mystic, is an admirable antidote alike to extreme Calvinism and to universalism: "God's goodness does not insure my salvation, nor would I require of God that because of His goodness He should save me. It may be that He wills not to save me. My salvation is that God is rational and that I know it." If you do not immediately preceive the meaning, take it for a Lenten study. It will bear protracted meditation.

Mission Notes.—The Chinese coast, 2,000 miles in extent, is lighted at night by as complete a system of light houses as the shores of any civilized country.

Denmark, Norway and Sweden contribute annually about $300,000 for foreign missions, having 100 missionaries in the field, with a membership of 29,000 in their missions.

Nine new missionaries have been appointed to Japan the present year by the American Baptist Missionary Union, an addition of thirty-three per cent. to its working force in that country.

A Hindu gentleman has called a congress of Brahmin priests and learned men for the purpose of incorporating the Bible among the sacred books of India, and officially recognizing Christ as the last spiritual Avatar, or incarnation of Brahma, the supreme deity.

The Roman Catholic Bishop and many of his clergy attended the reception given to Bishop Davies, as did the ministers of Detroit generally.

Sam Small, the noted Evangelist, has withdrawn from the Methodists and applied for ordination in the Episcopal Church. The unexpected is always happening.

The number of conversions of ministers of different denominations to our Church from Advent 1888 to Advent 1889 is 37, as follows: Methodist, 11; Reformed Episcopal, 3; Baptist, 3; Congregationalist, 5; Adventist, 1; Unitarian, 1; Presbyterian, 3; Reformed, 6; Roman Catholic 4. Of these two returned to the Church of their first love.

The Governor of Florida is a Churchman, and this is what the Church Year says of him: "It is pleasant to note the active personal interest which Governor Fleming takes in the work of this (St. John's Tallahassee,) parish, regularly attending his class in the Sunday-school, and opening and closing its services, and in the absence of a clergyman reading the Sunday services, morning and evening, at St. John's, and in the afternoon at the chapel for colored people."

OFFERTORIES FOR APRIL.

Easter—To be designated by the giver.
Sunday after Easter.—Society for the Increase of the Ministry.
Other Sundays.—General Charities

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week from 11 to 12 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

THE EASTER SERVICES will be as follows:

Celebration of Holy Communion at 8 o'clock.

Morning prayer, Sermon and Holy Communion, 11 o'clock.

Evening prayer and Sermon, 4 o'clock.

The pew holders and regular congregation will be admitted through the north transept door. The front doors will be opened promptly at the time of service; after which all unoccupied seats will be filled at once. There are not enough seats in the church to accommodate much more than half of those who are enrolled as members of the parish, if they should chance to all come at one time. In the nature of the case this never occurs. But it is more likely to occur at Easter than any other time. A larger proportion of the congregation is present then than at other times. This leaves all the less room for visitors. Nevertheless, the visitors who come to worship with us are very welcome, and we will do our best to make them comfortable. The visitors who do not come to worship but for sight-seeing, are not welcome. We do not want them. We can do them no good. They deepen their own brazen moral obtuseness by being present at a service whose motive is not intelligible to them. They are "the dead fly that causeth the ointment of the apothecary to stink." But the hope still remains that they having come to stare, may be caught by the sweet spirit of Easter, and may stay to pray.

AT ONE OR OTHER of the celebrations on Easter-day it is confidently expected that every communicant will be present. To absent himself on this day cannot be regarded otherwise than that he has fallen out of harmony with the movement of the Christian world. This, all sober-minded men will regard as a great misfortune. If he be wise he will at once ask himself whether the loss of relish which makes him indifferent to the feast be not due to his own spiritual ill-health? He may need food all the more because he has little or no appetite. It is an ancient and reasonable custom that on two days at least in the year, Christmas and Easter, the anniversaries of His birth and resurrection, all the members of the family should gather about His table. Let there be no vacant places.

On Easter-day Christian people are expected to do something substantial for religion and charity. It is not to the point to say that they are giving something to these purposes every Sunday and every day as well. Of course they are. That goes without saying. So are they constantly paying their taxes and their butcher's bill. Does one expect that his citizenship, his food, his education, his amusement shall be to him a constant cost, while his religion should cost him little or nothing? To fancy so, simply shows that he has misapprehended the whole situation. If it were true, as he sometimes imagines, that religion consisted simply in "saving his own soul," and that that being accomplished all other religious activity were surplusage, the cost would be small, for it would be a small soul saved. But that is not Christianity. To be a Christian is to be a partaker of the same spirit which was also in Jesus Christ. That spirit was a divine heartache for the ills of men. The Church has many agencies at work trying to help the bodies and souls of those who cannot help themselves. No doubt many of these agencies are poorly planned, and conducted with little sagacity. The missionaries may lack wisdom, their machinery may be clumsy and costly, the agents of benevolence may not be "scientific;" but if all these things were true,—as they are not,—whose fault would it be? Whose charitable machinery is this? the Church's? But who constitutes the Church? You, and you. If the missionary and charitable machinery is not right, in God's name set it right. If you will not do that, then help those who are trying honestly to run it as best they can.

You are "always being asked for money?" Certainly, and you always give it. But, now, just for once, in a way, tot up what your amusements have cost you and your family since last Easter. Please include in that all tickets to theatres and balls, banquets, bouquets, china painting, special lessons in art, or literature, club dues, cigars, little trips away, cost of entertainments given by you in return for entertainments which you had previously enjoyed. And please do not be ashamed of any of these. They have, no doubt, been perfectly innocent and proper; but tot up the cost. Then foot up your charities for the year. Be honest. Strike the balance between the two totals. Is it not fair to say that balance ought to be the amount of your Easter offering?

How would this retort sound; "You were in prison and I did not visit you, because my society engagements would not allow me; you were sick and I did not minister unto you, because my amusements had already cost me so much?"

In the Ter-Sanctus a change has been made by order of General Convention. Formerly the priest and people were directed to say or sing it together but now the rubric is as follows:

¶ Here shall follow the Proper Preface, according to the time, if there be any specially appointed, or else immediately shall be said or sung by the Priest,

Therefore with Angels and Archangels, and with all the company of heaven, we laud and magnify Thy glorious Name; evermore praising Thee, and saying,

Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God of hosts, heaven and earth are full of Thy glory: ¶ Priest and People. Glory be to Thee, O Lord Most High. Amen.

An election will be held in the Parish House of St. Stephen's Church on Easter Monday, April 7th, to elect twelve vestrymen to serve in this Parish for the ensuing year.

The polls will be open from half past eleven to half past twelve o'clock.

In the early part of the Winter the rector asked for contributions from a number of ladies and gentlemen for an Industrial School for poor boys and girls. The response was ready and cheerful. A school of forty scholars was organized, and Professor J. Liberty Tadd secured to teach them drawing, wood-carving, and modeling in clay. They have had instruction two evenings in each week during the Winter. Their progress has been so marked that all concerned must be gratified. There will be an Exhibition of their work, in the Parish House on the afternoon and evening of Thursday, April 24th. The children will be specially pleased if the patrons who made this instruction possible will come and see what they have done. The rooms will be open to everybody, and it is hoped that many members of the parish will come and see the children and their work.

The Easter Carol Service of the Sunday-schools, the Burd Orphan Asylum and the Parish Day School will be held on the Sunday after Easter, at 4 P. M. The offertory will be for the Home of the Merciful Saviour for Crippled Children.

The Children's Friend Society has come to be so well known both in the parish and out of it that any explanation of its purpose seems hardly necessary. It is an association of ladies who try to brighten the lives of the children of the very poor. In Summer is their season of most active work. Committees of the society take little groups of poor little creatures out to the country for a day, go with them, get them a good dinner and a day's amusement, and return them safe in the evening to their narrow homes. These days are glimpses of heaven for the children. The society wants a few more active members, of ladies who will be in or about the city during the Summer, and will share the work with them. They want also any number of contributing members, at a dollar a piece. Either names or money should be sent to Mrs. Vanderslice, in care of Mr. Joseph Clayton, the sexton.

The Ladies of the Children's Friend Society have met in the Parish building Monday evenings during Lent to sew for some of the poor children they entertained during the Winter.

They have made up twenty-five garments, dresses, boys' waists, aprons and other articles. They have already given some of this clothing out to children that were very destitute.

Donations received: March 11th, $2.00.

The Benevolent Society of the Parish is about closing its work for the season, and the managers call the attention of the congregation to a number of articles still on hand for sale. A committee will be at the Parish House on Easter Monday, after morning service until one o'clock, for the purpose of selling.

The Committee of the Altar Society having in charge the Lenten Sewing wish to thank the ladies of the congregation not only for the work they have done but also for their very generous gifts of money and materials. The Rector and the members of the Altar Society will be glad if those interested in this work will come and see the finished work on Thursday, April 10th, at eleven o'clock in the Guild Hall. After which inspection the garments will be distributed to poor families, charitable institutions and hospitals. A detailed account of the work will be given in the yearly report of Society's work.

The Girl's Friendly Society has a branch of the organization within our Parish. Several ladies of the congregation have volunteered their services and have interested many young women in the society. There are meetings every Monday evening at 7½ o'clock. Many girls come to the meetings direct from their daily work and have tea, sandwiches, etc., served to them in the Parish House. A competent dressmaker is engaged to give them lessons in cutting and fitting dresses, while the ladies teach them plain sewing. Music lessons are given to quite a large class. The meetings are closed by the special prayer and hymn used by the General Girl's Friendly Society throughout the United States.

During this Lenten Season the Altar Society has cut out over six hundred garments, which have been made up by the ladies of the congregation. The committee having this work in charge thank those who have aided them by their work and most generous gifts of money and materials. They hope those interested in this work will come to the Guild Hall on Thursday, April 10th, to see the work accomplished, after which the garments will be distributed among the Charitable Institutions and worthy needy families.

IF ANY LADIES CAN DO SOME SEWING in the way of making linen cottas for choir boys, for a Mission Church, will they kindly report at the Parish House, Wednesday morning after service.

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE most gratefully acknowledges the very liberal supply of infants' clothing sent in answer to the last appeal; the contributions have truly been most generous and judicious, and, for the first time since our organization, our closets are now well provided against the many demands that will be made upon them in behalf of these helpless little ones—a never-ending cause for anxiety and charity.

We now desire to make an appeal to the male members of the parish for outside woolen clothing which they will be more comfortable in ridding themselves of, and our deserving poor more comfortable in receiving. We suggest that on any day this week, most convenient to themselves, each one will take thirty minutes to overlook his wardrobe and decide what articles he will never wear again, and send all such to No. 9 South Tenth Street, marked "For the Garment Committee." He will, in this way, lessen the trouble of putting away from the moths for this season, and we will not mind in the least taking the trouble and the risk of the remaining garments after distributing those actually needed. Underwear and boots can constantly be given judiciously also.

One of the Committee will be at the Parish School Building every Monday morning from 10.30 until 12.30 P. M. to receive all packages and attend to all business.

Monday, April 7th—Miss Stoddard.

OFFERTORIES FOR MAY.

Third Sunday.—Italian Mission.
Other Sundays.—General Charities

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week from 11 to 12 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

TRINITY SUNDAY MORNING, June 1st, the annual Ordination will be held by the Bishop in St. Stephen's, the Rector preaching the sermon. A few of the people will be asked to kindly give up their seats on that morning to the candidates and their friends. Probably not more than three or four pews will be required for this purpose.

THE BACCALAUREATE SERMON before the graduating class of the University of Pennsylvania will be preached by the Rector in the Church, Trinity Sunday Evening, at 8 o'clock. The pews in the main aisle will be reserved for the University.

ON WHITSUNDAY EVENING, May 25th, at 8 o'clock, the annual sermon will be preached by the Chaplain before the Battalion of State Fencibles, in St. Stephen's. The pews in the main aisle will be reserved for the Battalion.

THE EASTER OFFERING amounted to $1,494.16. It included the following sums, designated for special objects:

THE ALTAR SOCIETY of St. Stephen's Church presents to the congregation its annual report:

The Chancel Committee has performed the duties of caring for the chancel and vestments, and received donations of flowers for Easter and Annunciation Day.

The papers and periodicals given by the congregation have been sent to missionaries and hospitals. The Library Committee only regret that so few are given them for distribution.

The Embroidery Class report: Work ordered and delivered;—four surplices, three black silk stoles, two white embroidered stoles, and materials for another white one. Among other work ordered we have now on hand a set of altar hangings for church at Cape May Point, and one altar cloth for Virginia. Work donated;—one surplice to St. Paul's Mission Chapel, set of altar hangings to All Souls' Church, Franklin and Green streets; one surplice and black embroidered stole to Rev. Thompson Carpenter, Richland Center, Bucks county; one set of green altar hangings (formerly belonging to St. Stephen's) to Holy Trinity Church, DeLair, Camden county, N. J.; one surplice and black embroidered stole to Rev. S. Miller Davidson, St. John the Divine Mission; two cottas for St. Michael's Church, Cairo, Ill.; application made through Miss Stevenson, one surplice and black stole for Rev. M. Zara, Italian Mission; twelve cottas for Mission Church in Erie, Pa. Work for our own parish, four surplices, set of green altar hangings.

At the request of the Rector, the ladies of the Altar Society gave an afternoon tea to some of the young ladies belonging to several boarding schools in the city who attend the services of this Parish. The committee having it in charge were so kindly helped by some of the ladies of the congregation, that it was a very enjoyable affair.

The children's response at Christmas time to the appeal for toys, games, books, etc., was so generous that many a child was made happy by the unexpected gift of a doll or a game.

The distribution of the Lenten sewing, the report of which appeared in the PARISH NEWS for April, is as follows:

MARY L. MELLON, Treasurer.

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE has closed for the season, and expects to resume its duties on or about Monday, September 22d.

Personal applications must be made to the Rev. Dr. McConnell, or Rev. Mr. Miller during the intervening time, when they will be attended to with as little delay as possible. The Committee desires to thank the gentlemen who responded so generously to the appeal of last month. All the articles sent were most valuable, and many of them have already been disposed of where they were really needed; they were received with joy and gratitude.

Contributors during the month of April, 1890:

Crawford, Mrs. G. L.	Richardson, Mrs. W. C.
Maulsby, Miss	Stevenson, Miss E.
Newlin, Mrs. Jas.	Stoddard, Miss
Watson, Mrs. W. C.

THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY is about to enter its third year. Before doing so, the managers would like to thank the many kind friends who helped them in their work during the past year.

By a Concert given at St. George's Hall, April 24, 1889, they realized	$150 00
Cash Donations and Contributions received	147 15
	$297 15
The expenses throughout the year were	$216 47
Leaving a balance of	$ 80 68

with which to begin their Summer work.

They have given out one hundred and fifty garments, and, besides helping them in many other ways, they have entertained five hundred children during the year, being three hundred and twenty-five more than they aided last year.

The Children's Friend Society, on April 15th, gave what was intended as an Easter entertainment in the Parish House, at which about one hundred children were present. This was only made possible by the liberal Easter offerings received, and was therefore gotten up so hastily that the usual notice in the PARISH NEWS could not be given.

Mr. L. H. Hall gave a most delightful show of "Punch and Judy," with an original dialogue and songs, followed by recitations and by games in which the children joined, making the evening very enjoyable to both young and old.

The use of the theatre and puppets were kindly given by Mr. Schwarz. After the performance the children were treated to ice cream and cakes.

Donations received for the month of April:

At the Easter collection.....$42 00
April 15th..... 0 35
April 21st, from a member of the Church. 10 00
72 garments from the Altar Society, 10 garments from the Garment Society, 7½ yards of cambric from Mr. Lalor for use at the entertainment.

WATCHING.

A general, after gaining a great victory, was encamping with his army for the night. He ordered sentinels to be stationed all round the camp as usual. One of the sentinels, as he went to his station, grumbled to himself and said, "Why could not the general let us have a quiet night's rest for once after beating the enemy? I'm sure there's nothing to be afraid of."

The man then went to his station and stood for some time looking about him. It was a bright Summer's night, with a harvest moon, but he could see nothing anywhere; so he said, "I am terribly tired. I shall sleep for just five minutes, out of the moonlight, under the shadow of this tree." So he lay down.

Presently he started up, dreaming that some one had pushed a lantern before his eyes, and he found that the moon was shining brightly down on him through a hole in the branches of the tree above him. The next minute an arrow whizzed past his ear, and the whole field before him seemed alive with soldiers in dark green coats, who sprang up from the ground, where they had been silently creeping onward, and rushed toward him.

Fortunately the arrow had missed him; so he shouted aloud to give the alarm, and ran back to some other sentinels. The army was thus saved; and the soldier said, "I shall never forget, as long as I live, that when one is at war one must watch."

Our whole life is a war with evil. Just after we have conquered it it sometimes attacks us when we least expect it. For example, when we have resisted the temptation to be cross and pettish, or disobedient sometimes when we are thinking, "How good we have been," comes another sudden temptation, and we are not on our guard and do not resist it. Jesus says to us, "Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation."—Every Thursday.

ABIDE WITH ME.

The hymn which begins, "Abide with me. Fast falls the evening tide," was written by H. F. Lyte, a poor curate of Broxham, who toiled twenty years under clouds of discouragement and suffering. When scarcely able to crawl he preached and administered the communion for the last time, addressing the tearful people as one who has already one foot in the grave. As the evening of the sad day gathered its darkness, he handed to a near and dear relative this immortal hymn, with music accompanying, which he had prepared. His last whisper was, "Peace, joy!"

DON'T.

Men have gained a reputation for great wisdom, and men have written books upon this reputation, by giving people advice about what not to do. They say "don't" do this and "don't" do that. Now, my son, that is all very well as far as it goes, but it doesn't go half-way to the spot. A bridge a hundred feet long is of no earthly account if the river is two hundred feet wide. You get just as wet wading half the distance as you would if you forded from shore to shore. The trouble with the "Don't" people is they tell you to "don't" things that you never thought of doing. If they could tell you all things you should "don't," leaving but one thing to do, that would make things easy for you. But they can't do this. They say "don't" do a few things and leave a hundred things untouched, which you can't for the life of you tell whether to do or don't. A man who can tell you one thing to do is worth ten thousand advisers who tell you a few things to don't. A pilot who avoids the rocks is good enough, if he knows all the rocks, but he doesn't; for there are 10,000 of them, and he knows only 9,500 of them, and is in constant danger of smashing you on some of the unknown 500. But the man who knows only one thing, and that one the channel, he's safe. He may not know where not to go, but he knows just where to go, and that is the main thing; that is the only thing, in fact. When a man tells you to "don't," ask him what you shall do. And if he says he doesn't know, smite him for personating a prophet under false pretenses. Out on the whole "don't" crowd! Miserable comforters and pilots are they all.—Every Thursday.

OFFERTORIES FOR JUNE.

General Charities.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week from 11 to 12 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

THE ROUTINE OF PARISH ACTIVITY has now gone upon the "Summer schedule." People have gone to their country places, gone abroad, disappeared variously into that unknown region into which people go in Summer. The various societies have wound up their year's work, and made their reports. The Sunday-school has closed. The teachers have scattered. The Parish School will soon close. The daily services have been intermitted. In a word, the stagnation of Summer has come. It is very discouraging, but there is no use quarreling with the inevitable. We venture to hope that all will return in the Autumn, rested and refreshed, and anxious to begin work again, as has been the case in previous years.

But, we venture to suggest that all this applies only to those activities known as "church work." In religion proper there is no such thing as a vacation,—any more than there is in breathing or eating. Indeed when all is said, the best Christian work which any one can do is simply to live. The "living epistle, known and read by all men," is likely to be perused by the world in Summer, quite as carefully in Summer as in Winter. In Winter the epistle lives at home, and is observed only by his own family. In Summer, while he has his "week off," or while she sits chatting with other epistles on the hotel veranda, they show what is written in them. Let them look to it that the writing is kept clear, and that nothing may be read from them which may offend.

After all, there is little reason why even the outward church life should be interrupted by the unsettledness of Summer. One would have to go very far indeed to find a place where their is no church. There is one at every Summer place, usually too, they are such as need and welcome help. They minister through eight months of the year to plain folk, and they have a right during the other four to expect aid and comfort from their more fortunate visitors. Don't hold aloof, that is unchristian, don't criticize, that is vulgar, but lend a hand.

THE LADIES OF THE ALTAR SOCIETY, after more than a year's work, have finished the green altar cloth, hangings and stoles for use during the Trinity season. These will be used for the first time on Sunday after Trinity, June 8th.

The white altar cloth which has been in use for many years is now considerably worn. It is the earnest wish of the members of the Altar Society that a new one be provided as soon as can be. There is at this time an excellent opportunity to purchase the proper materials. Were the material now on hand it would require two years to do the work upon it. A competent member of the society is going abroad, and would be willing to secure the cloth for the church. About $250 will be needed for the purpose. A lady of the congregation has already headed the list by a subscription for $25. No doubt there are many persons in the parish who will be glad to contribute the money needed. The ladies of the society are ready, as heretofore, to do the embroidery. Subscriptions, no matter how small, will be gladly received. It is necessary that donations should be promptly made, that the Society may know whether they can order the needed materials. The order must be given by July 1st. Please kindly send your amounts to

THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY had their first excursion May 17th. The weather had been stormy all the week, but at the appointed time the little ones came walking into the Parish House ready for their trip to Lemon Hill.

They were there given a ride in the Merry-go-round, or Goat Carriage if they preferred.

Afterwards they were treated to a luncheon of sandwiches, milk and cake.

If the Society had a few more members, both active and contributing, more of these poor little ones could have an afternoon outing.

The active members now are:

THE RECTOR HAS GOOD REASON to believe that the following pathetic letter, from an old physician, is entirely true.

MY DEAR DR. MCCONNELL:

On leaving you I came at once to——— and am stopping, for a time, with people who knew me when I was more fortunate than I am now, though I was then less so than I should have been. I am more comfortably situated than I was in Philadelphia, and can live here for less than I could there.

I have thought the matter over carefully and arrived at the conclusion that I had best tell you just how I am situated, and what I would like to do. It does not seem quite the thing to be idle for a few weeks, even though you "see me through with it," for then I might be, just as I am now, without a dollar and with no definite plans.

I can show my status, as a physician, by my diploma and by licentiate diplomas from the States of New Hampshire and Alabama. Other papers I have also, but these are probably sufficient. I can show you testimonials as to character from those who have known me. So much by way of promise. A severe hurt, received some fifteen years ago, left me unable to dress, without assistance, for over a year, and kept me unable to earn anything for some five years. Before that time I hardly knew what it was to feel a pain or experience even a sense of temporary discomfort. Since then I have been sorely afflicted. My business has been repeatedly broken up by the return of this miserable complaint, and I have grown less able to stand the practice of my profession in its various branches. Last year, a gleam of sunshine glanced across my troubled sky. Some city property, left in San Diego, Cal., years ago, and nearly forgotten by me, became of value, and I was looked up and written to regarding it. I sent out a power of attorney to a man I thought I knew, and through him effected a sale of some of it, and had, as I thought, good reason to suppose that I might get between four and five thousand dollars for what remained unsold. I had previously concluded that I could live in the high lands of East Tennessee, or Western North Carolina, with comparative immunity from my complaint, and I now sought for a place there where I could have a reasonable chance of success in the practice of my profession. I thought, for a time, that I had succeeded, and perhaps I should have done so, in both the one and the other case, had my hopes from California been realized, even to a small extent, but I found that from the negligence, indifference or dishonesty of my agent, all was lost there. Perhaps it was the mental worry of this which brought back, or helped to bring back, my physical discomforts, at any rate, back they came. I had found, too, that I had made a mistake in my location; I could do a good deal of business, but collect only a little pay for it; I should get into debt if I remained and without a chance of ever getting out; I broke up at once and left without a dollar, and with a new life to begin, at nearly seventy years of age, I doubled back, like the hunted hare, to my place of starting, which was the only place, after all, where my overcast sky had seemed to lighten, for a moment, in years.

It seemed to me that surely in that great city, with superabundant wealth on every hand, some of my professional brethren might loan me, if only a little each, yet enough in the aggregate, to give me a chance for life; but, alas! my age, which, it seems to me, ought to awaken compassion, only excites distrust, which my address, perhaps fairly good, only increases. The doctors of to-day do not seem to remember better than the disciples did of old, that those upon whom the tower of Siloam fell, were not necessarily sinners above all other sinners.

I wandered about the streets very sadly, with two lines of Hood's continually in my ears; the one was—

"Oh! 'twas pitiful in a whole city full,
Home, she had none:"

My bad fortune had made me feminine. The other was—

"Even God's providence seeming estranged."

Then I thought God never forgets. I will go to one of His household and tell him all. I went to you, but found the telling very difficult, and the difficulty was only increased by your great kindness.

Now things are thus with me: I am a good physician, but I give out under the strain of a general practice. I could succeed as a specialist—a specialty for which I have a liking, and for which I am competent, and for which there is an opening, but I have no means.

Failing in this, I can see only opening before me a way more wearisome to travel than that of the "Valley of the Shadow of Death," over the entrance to which is inscribed the first verse of "The Beggar's Petition:"

"Pity the sorrows of a poor old man
Whose trembling limbs have borne him to your door,
Whose days are dwindled to the shortest span;
Oh! give relief and heaven will bless your store."

I believe in God and all that that involves, else my way out would be easy. I must travel life's road to its weary end.

What can I say more? Do for me what you can. If fortune ever favors me, which is not likely, whatever you do for me shall be returned, or multiplied as often as I can multiply it, to such as it will fall upon as a benediction; if I fail I will die hoping to do in another world what I have failed to accomplish in this. I am

Very gratefully yours,

——— M. D.

SELECTIONS.

CHURCH UNION.

[Translated from the German.]

Forsake not proudly the place of public prayer,
Because you know that God is everywhere;
True, God is in the part as well as in the whole—
Not present in the Church if absent from the soul;
Still, where the flames from many logs unitedly arise,
A warmer glow of light and heat mounts upward to the skies.

"I HAVE been a member of your Church for thirty years," said an elderly Christian to his pastor, "and when I was laid by with sickness for a week or two, only one or two came to visit me, I was shamefully neglected." "My friend," said the pastor, "In all those thirty years how many sick have you visited?" "Oh," he replied, "It never struck me in that light. I thought only of the relation of others to me, and not of my relation to them."

THE following inscription, written by himself, will be placed on the late Charles Reade's tombstone:

HERE LIES

BY THE SIDE OF HIS BELOVED FRIEND, THE MORTAL REMAINS OF

CHARLES READE,

DRAMATIST, NOVELIST AND JOURNALIST.

HIS LAST WORDS TO MANKIND ARE ON THIS STONE.

I hope for a resurrection, not from any power in Nature, but from the will of the Lord God Omnipotent, who made Nature and me. He created man out of nothing, which Nature could not. He can restore man from dust, which Nature cannot.

And I hope for holiness and happiness in a future life, not for anything I have said or done in this body, but from the merits and mediation of Jesus Christ.

He has promised His intercession to all who seek it, and He will not break His word; that intercession once granted, cannot be rejected; for He is God, and His merits infinite; a man's sins are but human and finite.

"Him that cometh to Me I will no wise cast out." "If any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous, and He is the propitiation for our sins."

A BOY of twelve years of age, going to confession lately, revealed to his father confessor that he had been guilty of turning "flim-flams" on the previous Sunday. The good father, anxious to award a strictly suitable penance, but ignorant of the exact character of the offense, inquired, "What are these flim-flams, my son? "I'll show you, Father ——," said the boy; and straightway he jumped up from his knees and turned a couple of hand-springs before the confessional box, to the utter astonishment, but secret amusement of the priest. The next penitent in turn, who had anxiously witnessed this strange performance, was a stout, red-faced, middle-aged woman, who knelt, with evident trepidation, and stammered out, "Och, Father, dear, don't be givin' me such a Lenten pinnance as that, for the dear Lord's sake!"

TAKE a company of boys chasing butterflies: put long-tailed coats on the boys, and turn the beautiful butterflies into dollars, and you have a beautiful panorama of the world.

"A REALLY Christian life is the best answer one can make to unbelief. Do not let the unbeliever have it in his power to say, Why do you wish us to profess your creed if you, with all your religion and all your faith, are worse than ourselves? Alas, it is too often true! Pray, then, without ceasing; give alms of your goods; if ye suffer, take it patiently; be consistently gentle and kind towards all men, speaking to them by the actions of your heart rather than by the words of your lips. Do not attempt sermons or exhortations to unbelievers; they will have none of them. In this way you will win them back to religion, and make them once more acceptable in the sight of God, their Saviour."

—LE bienfaiteur a ordinairement de la mémoire pour deux

WORTHY GREATNESS.

Some weeks ago most of the religious papers noted the pleasing fact that Mr. Gladstone is a practical Christian believer, and some of them called the attention of their readers to the further fact that he has long been such.

We now find what has not been so generally known, that the only other great European statesman, Bismark, is also a firm Christian, and like his English compeer, is a member of the church. He is reported to have said, in 1876, "If I were not a Christian I would not consent to serve the the king, my master; if I did not obey God, if I did not put my trust in Him, I would not concern myself about the affairs of this world." And more recently he has used this language: "Were I not a decided Christian, if my faith did not rest on the miraculous basis of a revealed religion, you would not have in me a federal Chancellor; when you find me a man for a successor who is impregnated with the same principles, I will at once resign, rejoiced to be again free to follow a country life."

In this day when the smaller politicians are disposed to make light of Christian faith, and to live without taking God into their counsels, it is truly refreshing to know that the first statesmen of the century are glad to be controlled by the principles of the Bible. They who refuse to honor God, fail to honor themselves, and are in no condition, if they be public men, to honor their country.

BEING tired of life is always a selfish feeling; for no man is tired of living on the ground that there is nothing to be done by him for others. He who lives wholly for himself may, indeed, feel that he can no longer please himself; but he who lives for others is sure to see so much yet to be done in the line of his life-work that he is not ready to stop living by his own choice.—Sunday-School Times.

OFFERTORIES IN JULY.

General Charities.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week at 11 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 to 12 A. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

THE next Church Congress will be held in Philadelphia in November. The opening services will be held in St. Stephen's.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH, Eighth above Spruce, Rev. Dr. Paddock, Rector, has under consideration the erection of a parish building.

GROUND was broken on Tuesday, the 24th inst., for the foundations of the Memorial Church of the Advocate.

THE corner-stone of Holy Trinity Church, Lansdale, Rev. J. H. Burton, Rector, was laid on Saturday afternoon, June 28th, at 3.30 o'clock.

REV. C. GEORGE CURRIE, D. D., formerly Rector of St. Luke's Church, Philadelphia, will take charge, during the Summer, of St. Bartholomew's Church, New York.

MOST OF THE SOCIETIES of the Parish do their best work in Winter. In Summer the members scatter to the four quarters of the earth, and the work rests until they reassemble in the Autumn.

But there is one whose best work is done in the Summer. It is the Children's Friend Society. Every week, or oftener, the members take a batch of poor children to the country for a day. They take them; do not send them. Those who are able to go when and where they please, or to live all Summer in the country, can hardly realize what a boon it is to a poor, hot, stifled child to get a day under the shade trees or at the sea shore, with a good, wholesome dinner thrown in. The active members of the Society are ready to do the work, and there is no end to the amount of it which might well be done. They want an indefinite number of "contributing members" at $1 a piece to provide for the expense. When you are writing your letters some sultry morning, send your name and a dollar to the President, Mrs. Vanderslice, 127 S. 5th Street.

THE LADIES WHO PURSUED THE course of study in the Church Woman's Institute will be interested to know that a permanent school is to be established in New York, where a similar course of study will be carried on to fit women for Deaconesses. The moving spirit in the matter, as in so many good things, is Rev. Dr. Huntington. The following prospectus has been sent out:

"The Canon 'Of Deaconesses,' passed by the General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church, in October, 1889, provides that every candidate for the office, before she is set apart, shall have had 'an adequate preparation for her work, both technical and religious, which preparation shall have covered the period of two years.'

With a view to furnishing such as shall desire to receive it with the preparation required by the Canon, it is proposed to establish at No. 802 Broadway, New York, adjoining Grace Church, an institution to be known as GRACE HOUSE TRAINING-SCHOOL FOR DEACONESSES.

It will be the aim of the School to send out graduates thoroughly equipped to be the helpers of the parochial clergy in their missionary and charitable work. With this end in view, instruction will be given in the Holy Scriptures and the Book of Common Prayer, with special reference to Bible Class work; also, in household management and in the care of the sick. Special efforts will be made to familiarize the students with the actual work done in the hospitals, missions, homes, refuges, and reformatories of the City of New York. Object teaching of this sort will supplement the instruction of the class-room. Extra studies, for those who may elect them, will be the New Testament in Greek, church music, and ecclesiastical needle-work.

Candidates for admission must be at least eighteen years of age, and, unless provided with certificates of graduation at approved schools or colleges, must pass an examination in the usual English branches.

In the case of those who enter the school with the definite intention of becoming Deaconesses, there will be no charge for instruction or for text books.

Special students who desire to follow the course of study, but without reference to the Diaconate, will be received upon payment of an entrance fee of thirty dollars, to be renewed at the beginning of the second year. Text-books, in their case, will be charged.

The regular school year will begin on the first Wednesday in October, and end with the last Saturday in April, with a recess of one week at Christmas. In addition to this, however, three months hospital service, covering May, June and July, will be required of all members of the School, except the special students with whom this part of the course will be elective.

Students who do not live at their own homes may select boarding places from a list approved by the officers of the School. Living expenses must be borne by the students; but every effort will be made to procure favorable terms for students.

For extra copies of this Circular, or for any additional information with respect to the School, application may be made to the Secretary of the Faculty,"

THE UNITY OF THE VISIBLE CHURCH.

The day for eulogizing the division of the Church of Christ into "denominations" has gone by. Thoughtful and earnest Christians are coming more and more to recognize and mourn over it as evil in its origin and its results. We get the most vivid impression of the evil when we lay aside all abstract theories and look at the concrete facts as they exist before our eyes. We can not embrace the Christian world in our view; but we can consider a part as the type of the whole.

Here is a town, not a hundred miles from any of us, consisting of a thousand inhabitants, or about two hundred families—just enough to make one parish or pastoral charge—able to sustain the ordinance of the Gospel for itself, and to contribute to the evangelizing of the world; but instead of one self-supporting church, this town has five sickly organizations, two or three of which are sustained by some missionary board. One of these churches has a steeple surmounted with the cross, the common symbol of Christianity; the others, if they have steeples at all, have crowned them with a weathercock. All these churches claim to be Christian; but they all bear denominational names, and each is a rival of the others.

Now, the evil of this state of things does not consist only nor chiefly in its waste of Christian resources; but the chief evil is its demoralizing effect upon religious experience and Christian character. It narrows men's souls by concentrating on a sect the sympathies and affections which ought to expand upon the whole body of Christ; and this effect is the most shriveling when men succeed in deluding themselves into the belief that their sect is the body of Christ. It creates false tests and standards of personal piety. It mars the symmetrical growth of the soul in the knowledge of Christ by magnifying certain doctrines to the neglect or denial of others.

The notion that it is the mission of different denominations to bear witness to particular phases of divine truth might be well enough if the people to whom this witness is borne were brought under the influence of all the witnesses. But to subject one Christian to the teaching of divine sovereignty, and another to the insistence upon human freedom, cultivates two different types of character, neither of which is according to the truth. The idea of a "witness bearing church"—that is, a body of Christians with a special divine commission to bear testimony against other bodies of Christians, while it is pleaded in defense of denominationalism, is, in fact, one of the worst fruits of the system.

The effect of denominationalism upon the ministry is no less deplorable. It too often degrades the servant and ambassador of Christ into the hired man of a voluntary association, and suspends his reputation and influence upon his success in making proselytes from other "societies." That minister must be a strong man who, in adjusting his work to such conditions, does not lose somewhat of the spirit of his high commission and shrivel his own mind to the dimensions of a gossip.*

These evils are greatly aggravated by their complication with social distinctions and family pride. Denominational lines, in such communities as we have described, are very apt to follow the lines of class distinctions, and to deepen them with "the Gospel plow." Religious societies become social clubs, and get rid of the question about seating the poor man in vile raiment by making it practically certain that he will not come into the same assembly with the man in goodly apparel and a gold ring. "The Salvation Army," or any other outside effort, is good enough for him. And so we look with complacency upon the spasmodic movements of zeal without knowledge, and even patronize them from a distance as a salve to our conscience, not perceiving that the plea for their necessity, and, indeed, fact of their existence, is a standing reproach to the church.

What wonder, if in this state of things one-half of our settled ministers in all denominations are unsettled in their minds, and waiting for "a call!" What wonder if the doors of vacant churches are besieged by an army of candidates, composed not only of young men who are openly looking for their first charge, but largely of old soldiers, some of whom, by unworthy devices, conceal the fact of their candidacy?

Surely, if we need a civil-service reform in the state, there is no less need of a pastoral-service reform in the church. And this reform, to be effective, must begin at the denominationalism which fills the land with feeble churches and half-supported ministers, and wastes in sectarian rivalries what ought to go to the evangelizing of the world. The first and most important step toward the correction of any evil is to see and acknowledge its existence; and the second is like unto it—an earnest desire for a better state of things. The unity of Christendom—a unity that the world can see and be convinced by it that the Father has sent His only-begotten Son—is to-day a longing in the heart and a prayer on the lips of multitudes of Christians.

We hail every expression of such desire as a prophecy of its fulfillment, according to others the same sincerity we claim for ourselves. The reunion of Christendom is a sublime idea, an inspiring hope. It is not necessary to the indulgence of this hope to forecast the precise form of its fulfillment; and therefore we need not exclude from its embrace any of those throughout the world who profess the true religion. The best things in the world are not made; they grow. The unification of Christendom, as a whole, or in part, can not be accomplished by bargains and contracts between rival sects; neither can it be effected by the absorption of one denomination under the distinctive forms of another.—Rev. Dr. Henry J. Van Dyke (Presbyterian), in The Church Review.

SELECTIONS.

THERE are now eight mission-ships cruising in the North Sea, each a combination of church, chapel, temperance hall, and dispensary.

A HINDOO gentleman has called a congress of Brahmin priests and learned men for the purpose of incorporating the Bible among the sacred books of India, and officially recognizing Jesus Christ as the latest avatar, or incarnation of Brahma, the Supreme Deity.

IN our country three-fourths of the Nation's illiteracy is in the South. Forty per cent. of the whole population of the South can not read the New Testament. Of the 2,000,000 illiterate voters in our country, 1,500,000 are in the South. The negro population, now about 8,000,000, increases at the rate of 500 per day.

THE hymn which begins, "Abide with me, Fast falls the eventide," was written by H. F. Lyte, a poor curate of Broxham, England, who toiled twenty years under clouds of discouragement and suffering. When scarcely able to crawl, he preached and administered the communion for the last time, addressing the tearful people as one who has already one foot in the grave. As the evening of the sad day gathered its darkness, he handed to a near and dear relative this immortal hymn, with music accompanying, which he had prepared.

"PAPA, I can't go to church, the services are so long." "This is to be regretted, my boy. I would regret it more sincerely, my boy, did I not know that in a few weeks after the frost is out of the ground, you will squeeze into a street car with a hundred other men, breathing incense of whiskey, beer, and tobacco, and hang on a strap by your eyelids for two miles, then pay fifty cents for the privilege of sitting on a rough plank in the broiling sun for two hours longer, while in the intervals of a game a band will blow discordant thunder out of a dozen misfit horns right in your ears, and come home to talk the rest of the family into a state of aural paralysis about the 'dandiest game you ever saw played on them grounds.' Ah, my boy, you see what staying away from church does! It develops a habit of lying."

A SURE CURE of poverty, about which we are hearing a good deal, is primarily a cure of character. In free countries, certainly, most of the poverty we find is the near result of a weak intellectual, or weak moral character, or both. Confessedly, the poverty of the colored population of the South will be measurably cured by the education and training of the intellect and morality of the mass of them. The moment people are relieved of their ignorance and bad morals, which is the best prosperity, they begin to prosper in a worldly way also. No matter what social, financial, or governmental changes we make for the removal of poverty—and these are possibly changes for good—let us get them; none of them will have but a transient success, if any, until character is renovated. Cure poverty? Cure character.—The Pacific, San Francisco.

THE BEAUTY OF CHILDHOOD.—A recent discovery of classical sculptures has recalled attention to the fact that the ancients had, so far as appears from their works, no appreciation of the beauty of childhood. In the present instance, in which the figures relate to death scenes and include family pictures, while the mature characters are represented with the best skill which the artist could command, the children—at the age fullest of beauty for a modern eye—are executed with archaic clumsiness. Miss Harrison has pointed out, in her lectures on Greek sculpture, that representations of infancy are characteristic of the decaying art of Alexandria; the best period of art affords no specimen of such a choice of subject. "The artists whose work has afforded models for all time have not left a single specimen of that beauty which modern eyes most admire, the beauty of childhood." And in Grecian and Roman literature there is none of that happy picturing, that dwelling with delight upon the beauties of childhood that seem to have entered into the very essence of modern natures. To the Romans, "infancy was only a journey toward manhood; the sooner it was over the better." In the reference to childhood, which is most truly affecting of all in ancient literature, the fright of the child in Homer's "Parting of Hector and Andromache," the interest, "if we analyze it, belongs rather to an impartial delineation of human life as it is, than to any sympathy with the helplessness and dependence of its earliest stage." While modern art does not show an equal lack of the taste for childhood, it "is comparatively feeble at all time in comparison with the feeling of our own day." This feeling is reflected in its intensity first in the poems of Wordsworth, and the pictures of Sir Joshua Reynolds. "This sympathy with childhood," says the writer in the Spectator, whose essay we have summarized, "which gives its coloring to modern literature and art, is to be traced back to utterances, which have influenced more than the literature and art of modern Europe. 'Except ye become as little children, ye can not enter into the kingdom of heaven,' was a saying new to the world. The fresh aspect under which all weakness, all dependence appeared in the light of that teaching was evidently bewildering to its hearers." It took centuries for the Christian world to take in the full meaning of that utterance, which has not been realized as a fact of ordinary life till nearly our own time. But now, "for a year or two in this pilgrimage of ours, the most commonplace, the most tiresome of us is invested with this wonderful capacity (of persuasion and conciliation); every human being has once upon a time hushed enmities and bridged estrangement."—Popular Science Monthly for February.

OFFERTORIES FOR AUGUST.

General Charities, ...

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week at 11 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 to 12 A. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

ON WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 6TH, being the festival of The Transfiguration of Christ, there will be a celebration of the Holy Communion at 11 o'clock. As this festival has been recently placed within the Calendar of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States, the Collect, Epistle and Gospel are not found within the Book of Common Prayer in general use. For the convenience of those not having the new copies of revision, they will be found printed below.

THE TRANSFIGURATION OF CHRIST.

The Collect.

O GOD, who on the mount didst reveal to chosen witnesses thine only-begotten Son wonderfully transfigured, in raiment white and glistering; Mercifully grant that we, being delivered from the disquietude of this world, may be permitted to behold the King in his beauty, who with thee, O Father, and thee, O Holy Ghost, liveth and reigneth one God, world without end. Amen.

The Epistle. 2 St. Peter i. 13.

I THINK it meet, as long as I am in this tabernacle, to stir you up by putting you in remembrance; knowing that shortly I must put off this my tabernacle, even as our Lord Jesus Christ hath showed me. Moreover I will endeavor that ye may be able after my decease to have these things always in remembrance. For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eye-witnesses of his majesty. For he received from God the Father honor and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount.

The Gospel. St. Luke ix. 28.

AND it came to pass about an eight days after these sayings, he took Peter and John and James, and went up into a mountain to pray. And as he prayed, the fashion of his countenance was altered, and his raiment was white and glistering. And behold, there talked with him two men, which were Moses and Elias: who appeared in glory, and spake of his decease which he should accomplish at Jerusalem. But Peter and they that were with him were heavy with sleep: and when they were awake, they saw his glory, and the two men that stood with him. And it came to pass, as they departed from him, Peter said unto Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias: not knowing what he said. While he thus spake, there came a cloud, and overshadowed them: and they feared as they entered into the cloud. And there came a voice out of the cloud, saying, this is my beloved Son: hear him. And when the voice was past, Jesus was found alone. And they kept it close, and told no man in those days any of those things which they had seen.

THOUGH FAR AWAY from home, many of the people of St. Stephen's Church are not unmindful of the charitable work of the Parish, and by the report of the Children's Friend Society, it is evident that that worthy little organization is kindly thought of, much to the encouragement of its active workers.

Especially do we wish to make our thankful acknowledgment to the children staying at Bar Harbor, who, through the earnest co-operation of Mrs. DeGrasse Fox and Miss Sanders held a Fair this month for sending poor children to the country. They realized a handsome sum of money, and sent through Mrs. DeGrasse Fox and Miss Sanders, for the Children's Friend Society, the sum of fifty dollars.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS of St. Stephen's Church, called the Whatsoever Band, was organized April 5th, 1890, but began their work the latter part of March, by visiting the Home for Crippled Children. They took some gifts for the children at the Home, and fruit for the sick.

Month of April they helped the Ladies of the Children's Friend Society entertain some children in Parish House.

May 20th, they visited Hayes' Mechanics' Home for old men, and took a pincushion for all the inmates, making 44 in all.

June 18th, they went to the House of St. Michael and All Angels for colored crippled children; about a dozen small rattles were given, which were filled with candy, and had a trumpet on the end to blow. It was quite amusing to see the little ones sitting on the floor all blowing. Crackers and other things were taken for the older ones.

July 21st, they had an Excursion to George's Hill, inviting to go with them some young girls, who had not been for a day's outing. These girls are from 12 to 17 years old, and are very happy in doing what they can for others.

THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY were to have taken a trip June 21st, but owing to bad weather did not get off until June 28th, therefore it was too late to print in PARISH NEWS.

Sixty children met at Parish House, and marched up Market Street to the Pennsylvania Depot, there to take a special car, which through the kindness of several gentlemen in the Railroad Office was secured at a moderately low rate. It was a great surprise, as the children knew nothing about it. They enjoyed the ride very much, several remarking it was too short.

On reaching Zoological Garden they proceeded to visit the different houses, feeding the animals as they went. Many were afraid of the elephants, but the seals as well as the snakes were their delight. Strange as it may seem, every lot of children we have had out at different times never tire of looking at the snakes.

At half-past four o'clock they were taken to the Restaurant, there to be entertained by their kind friends, Mr. and Mrs. Hardt.

Sandwiches and milk, ice cream and cakes for sixty children and ten ladies, rather a large party, but these kind friends have remembered our little ones every year since we started. We take this opportunity to thank them, as well as the rest of the members and friends who have so kindly helped us the past month.

July 12th. Another lot of children were taken to George's Hill, a car having been chartered for the occasion, meeting at 10th and Arch Streets, at half-past one o'clock, only delayed a minute or two for some extra children. In several instances some of the little ones were taken sick, or from some other cause did not come. Rather than have the seats wasted, two or three of the members went into some of the smaller streets near the church and hunted up other children. The greetings and thanks from both mothers and children were enough to pay them for their extra work.

It amused the little ones that other passengers were not allowed on the car, and would call out the moment any one got on, this is a special car. They enjoyed the ride out in the open car very much, were ready for a run up the hill, and quite able to eat two large sandwiches a piece.

About 4 o'clock a wagon was seen, having the name Jackson Blank, North-east corner 35th and Spring Garden Streets, and all eyes were turned; but what was the surprise that Mr. Blank had in store for them? This kind gentleman, although a stranger to the ladies, offered to donate the ice cream for the party. Each child had an individual brick made up of orange water ice, vanilla and strawberry cream. The colors, as well as the cute little bricks delighted the children very much: All had as much as they could eat, and went home very happy.

Through the kindness of the members of the church and their friends, The Children's Friend Society were able to take an extra trip in July, and that one to Atlantic City.

The Reading Railroad offered us tickets at a very great reduction, also a special car on the 9 o'clock Express. Tuesday morning, July 15th, was selected for going, and a little after seven o'clock many of the children were at the houses of the different members, so eager were they to go. Thirty-eight children had been selected, and with two or three exceptions had never seen the ocean, some even asked what it was.

The ride down was short and very comfortable, those in charge of our car doing everything they could to add to the comfort of the little ones. Dr. William H. Bennett had very kindly offered us the use of sitting room and dining room at the Sea Shore House.

After stowing away our baggage and eatables we started for the Beach.

Each child was provided with a shovel, and it did not take long for them to follow the example of others; off went shoes and stockings—such a digging time as they had.

The river, as some called the ocean, seemed to satisfy every want, not a murmur or a want was expressed, they seemed to be both satisfied and appreciative. Crabs, shells and grasses were brought to the ladies as curiosities, not one moment was to be lost by them. At a quarter of one o'clock they started for dinner, and were met very kindly by the matron at the Sea Shore House, who gave us possession of the dining room.

Dr. Bennett had very kindly donated ice cream and cakes for the whole party, much to our surprise. The waitresses were very attentive, and the ladies and children met with kindness by every one.

After dinner they were taken a walk on the board-walk to the merry-go-round, the proprietor, Mr. Young, very kindly giving them a free ride. It was quite amusing to hear them ask each other if their faces were burnt? Many looked the better for the day's outing.

This was an expensive trip, but one from which the children derived so much good, that we would like to give more of such excursions, if our funds would warrant it. At present, unfortunately, they will not. Many names are down on our books, waiting for their turn for an outing.

After writing this article we received a check for $50 from Mrs. De Grasse Fox, through Miss Sanders, for our Society. This was sent as part of the proceeds of the Children's Fair at Bar Harbor, held for the purpose of raising money to send poor children into the country. A pleasing incident is given in the letter sent, of a poor girl at Bar Harbor, who goes about selling flowers. She is not strong enough to do washing, as so many do there in the Summer. The day after the Fair she went to Mrs. Fox and said she wished to give to the children what she had made the day before—$2. Her brothers go out very early in the morning to get water lilies and other flowers. We sincerely thank the children and appreciate their gift, knowing it will do many poor little ones good during the Summer months.

SELECTIONS.

"AND IT came to pass when he came to himself," This expression is remarkable. It implies that all this while, when the prodigal rode away from his father's house, when he abode in the "far country," when he devoured his substance in riotous living, when the narrow and impure horizon of the flesh spanned all his hopes, and he threw the reins loose upon the neck of every loose desire, he had not been his true self, but the stupid changeling of himself, the evil counterpart of himself. "He came to himself." The child who had played in the sunlight of his father's love, the cler-browed lad, with no taint of evil in his thoughts, the favorite son, so dear, so happy, so full of generous purpose and unselfish life—that was himself; and when to think of him called up no blush of shame, when the roses of the garden still bloomed around him in the dear old home, when a mother's kiss was not sullied upon his cheek, nor the hand of a father laid in blessing upon an unworthy head—that was himself; but the loveless, thankless, graceless boy, the corrupt, dissolute youth, the companion of rioters and harlots, the fool that had laid waste the inner sanctities of his own being and squandered the most precious heritage of his life—that was not himself; it was a guilty semblance of himself, it was a hideous dream of himself which he now despised. His hour of luxurious and forbidden pleasure was an hour of delusion, of brief insanity.—Archdeacon Farrar.

ANNALS OF CHRISTIAN HEROISM.

From the days of the Apostles to our own days, the annals of Christian missions have been the annals of Christian heroism. St. Paul's account of his own ministry has been again and again repeated. He describes himself as "always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus," and as having fellowship in Christ's sufferings. And this intimate connection with Jesus Christ in His Passion is the note and the temper of all true missionaries, and in not a few cases the correspondence is carried out to the very last extremity. The spirit of self-sacrifice is shown, perhaps, most completely in the willingness, after years of toil, to dispense, if it be God's will, with proofs of success. Our practical English temperament prompts us to insist upon tangible results as a test of the value of spiritual work. But although such results are a blessing and an encouragement for which a man may well thank God, yet their absence is by no means a proof that no real work has been done. The seed which is sown in one generation must take time to mature, and will only bear fruit in the next. Long before the Roman Empire became Christian, the air, so to speak, was filled with Christian ideas. The Christian creed was discussed and rediscussed by those who did not yet hold it; and while stray conversions took place in all ranks of life the mass of the people remained apparently attached to the old paganism. In the middle of the third century, not more than one-twentieth part was Christian. In the next century the conversions came with a rush; the ground had been prepared, the seed had taken root and matured.—Canon Liddon.

THERE IS an old story about a village which in mid-summer had not a green branch on any tree, because wicked boys had killed the birds, and the caterpillars had it all their own way. The same fate seems to be threatening France, but the naughty boys are represented by the fashionable ladies who wear the bodies of dead birds in their hats and bonnets. The swallow, it is said, is massacred in France to such an extent that, if a not very energetic stop is put to its destruction, it will before long be only found in museums. Thousands of dead swallows have during the last two years been brought into the Paris market; and often a whole cargo was in an advanced stage of decay, which made the corpses quite useless for the purposes of the milliner. It seems that the swallow-hunter has three ways of securing his victims. The first is to catch the swallow in a net, the second by means of a fishing line and hook, and the third and most cruel, by putting threads along high cliffs on the coast, on which the tired birds sit down when they return from their home across the sea. The threads are connected with an electric battery, and an electric current dispatched to kill the swallows as soon as a sufficient number have assembled on them.

OFFERTORIES FOR SEPTEMBER.

General Charities,

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week at 11 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 to 12 A. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL will begin its sessions on the first Sunday in October at 9.45 A. M. Teachers who do not intend to resume the work in the School this coming season, will please notify the Rector, or the Assistant, as soon as they can do so, that their vacancies may be filled up. It is important that the classes should all be supplied with teachers. Nothing is so discouraging to the scholars and fatal to the prosperity of the school as to have no one in the form to teach those who come to learn. Any one who takes charge of a class should see to it that he be regular, punctual and faithful in the performance of the duties assumed.

There will be need for more workers this coming year. There are those in the congregation who can interest themselves in the Sunday-school work, and are "apt to teach." They are asked to signify their willingness to take charge of a class. Let their willingness to do this be known at the earliest opportunity. Let the work be begun in an earnest, prayerful endeavor to reach the young of the neighborhood, that they "may be virtuously brought up to lead a godly and a Christian life." It does seem as if this department of Church work, in this our day, were one of the most vitally important that any faithful communicant of the Parish, if duly qualified, could undertake for Christ and His Church.

THE RECTOR, THE REV. DR. MCCONNELL, did not go this Summer upon the gunning expedition to the Rocky Mountains as he had expected, but spent most of his vacation by the bed-side of his friend, the Rt. Rev. Boyd Vincent, Bishop of Southern Ohio, who has been seriously ill with Typhoid Fever, at Watch Hill, R. I.

THE RECTOR EXPECTS to return to Philadelphia and resume his parochial duties about the middle of this month

THE BOYS' GUILD will hold its first regular meeting this season on Friday evening, October 10th, at 7½ o'clock, in Guild Hall. Boys thirteen years of age and over, are invited to become members. The Guild is organized for the purpose of bringing the boys more closely under the influence of the Church. They promise to endeavor to promote reverence, purity and temperance among the members. Last year the membership was quite large, and much good was done. From the interest taken in the meetings there seemed to be much loyalty and devotion to the little organization. Several ladies and gentlemen of the Parish helped to make the recreation hour, after the business part of the meetings, an attractive feature for the boys. It is hoped these with others will come to help this Winter in carrying forward this part of our Parish work.

THE GIRLS' GUILD will meet on Saturday, Oct. 11th, at 4 o'clock. Girls over twelve are asked to belong. Most of those who were members last season were from the Sunday-school. Besides the business meeting and recreation they were occupied part of the time sewing garments for poor children of the "Home for Crippled Children." We need some ladies to assist in taking care of this organization, as the work with proper care can be largely increased.

THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY had their second excursion to George's Hill, Aug. 9th.

Forty little ones were anxiously watching the weather, for it was raining up to ten o'clock in the morning. As many as a half a dozen children had called on the President to know if they were going, which was very hard to tell; but as sandwiches had to be made and biscuits baked, the order was at eleven o'clock to go ahead. A car had again been chartered and paid for by one of the members of the Society.

It seems to delight the children very much to be the possessors of a car for an hour, in and out. It is quite amusing to hear their remarks when any one jumps on the car, and told either by the children or the conductor that they must get off. One child said that "he must have felt cheap." They had a nice afternoon, the sun coming out bright, so that they were able to play with their balls, bean bags and other games.

It certainly shows how very much the trips are enjoyed when such remarks as these were heard: "Oh! but I have had a nice time." "I never had such a nice time." "You are very good to take us all for nothing." Most of the members of the Society were out of town, but a lady from St. Andrew's Church, and the King's Daughters of St. Stephen's Church assisted with taking care of the children and in serving the refreshments.

It was said in August number of PARISH NEWS that the Children's Friend Society would like to have another excursion to Atlantic City, if their funds would warrant it.

Many kind friends sent in their donations for this purpose, so the members of the Society went to work to hunt up the children, which is not always the easiest thing to do. But the gratitude of the mothers and the bright faces of the children are enough to pay all for their trouble. Sunday-school and Parish school children, and some from the Girls' Friendly Society were all represented on this trip, and very many poor children from the lower parts of the city, most of them never having seen the Ocean before.

Tuesday morning, August 19th, nearly sixty children started for the Reading Depot, where there was a special car waiting for them. On reaching Atlantic City they were given a ride in the electric cars to the new Sea View Excursion House, where they were very kindly met by the Proprietress, Mrs. Trenwith, and a room given them for their wraps and packages. Then off to the beach with their little shovels, and in less than ten minutes every child, with one exception, had off their shoes and stockings. This little girl had on a new pair of shoes and was afraid to part with them, and had been told by her mother not to get them wet, so she stood with shovel in hand watching the others in the water, who were wild with excitement. They were like little ducks, and did not seem to have the least fear. Two ladies who have at different times helped us, and one of the Ladies from the Girls' Friendly Society, very kindly assisted with the work of taking care of the children. They were accommodating enough to put on bathing suits, that they might keep the little ones from getting too far in the water. It was a very great delight to the children when one of these ladies consented to being buried in the sand, and after heaping the sand up quite high, they began digging the shovels into it, never imagining there was any life in the person there; even when told it hurt, they kept on. When asked, afterwards, what they like best, one small child said, the bathing and burying.

The next thing was dinner, which had been ordered at the new Excursion House. The children were taken in the beautiful large dining room, and were waited on by the waiters there with great kindness; one would have thought they had always been used to such luxury. As a stranger remarked, it is a beautiful sight to see them. Not a thing was touched until told to put their napkins in their laps and to commence eating their soup. They all had just as much as they could eat, and seemed to enjoy everything, chicken most of all, which was a surprise from Mrs. Trenwith.

After dinner Mrs. Trenwith went to see Mr. Stein, the proprietor of the merry-go-round, who very kindly gave the whole party two long rides free. Many of the children went to him afterwards, thanking him in their cute little ways, which seemed to please him very much.

We must not forget the Superintendent of the bath-house, who so kindly let the children have two rooms for their shoes and stockings, and as many towels as they wanted for nothing.

It seems wherever these little ones are taken they always meet with kind friends. Even on the electric cars a lady from Pittsburgh was interested in them, and very kindly donated a dollar towards their car fare, and gave a small boy a beautiful little ball.

This trip has cost over sixty dollars, but as the money had been donated for this purpose, it was thought best to take as many as the car would hold without crowding.

Our work continues the entire year. We expect to have several excursions yet; after that to have entertainments of some sort each month.

Many of the children have already spoken of these treats, for such they are to these poor children. It brightens their lives, and gives them something else to think about. One small girl asked one of the members when they were going to have that thing again? When asked what? it was found to be the Punch and Judy show.

ST. MATTHEW, OR LEVI, is to be thought of, not only as a rich man, but as one of a class which the Jews esteemed to be hopelessly depraved. In his conversion, there is a signal instance of grace overcoming the deceitfulness of riches, and also the enslaving effect of an unhappy position and reputation. The publican was supposed to be what a heartless usurer is, and he was even more detested, because he was an instrument of foreign tyranny. He paid the Roman government a certain sum, and was permitted to collect it, with excessive increase, from a certain district of his native land. Levi was actually engaged in this business, and seated at the receipt of custom, when CHRIST called him to be an Apostle. Who knows but he was the identical publican who is elsewhere contrasted with a certain Pharisee? He had repented of his sins, and was performing his duties equitably and mercifully. JESUS bade him leave this pursuit, and the accumulation of wealth, and become a follower of Him, in poverty and death. What an example—when, at the word, he arose and left all, and followed Jesus! Our LORD'S accepting a banquet in his house, and sitting down to eat with publicans and sinners, is a proof of the worldly comfort which St. Matthew gave up to become an Apostle; and at the same time, it furnished a rebuke to the Pharisees, who were thus taught that CHRIST came to call sinners to repentance. As a commentary on this Gospel, we have the Epistle, in which Mammon, or the god of this world, is shown to be the agent of spiritual blindness, in the unbelieving. We cannot serve God and Mammon; and they who are blinded by the glare of gold, cannot see the light of the glorious Gospel. The Collect is a prayer for deliverance from this awful condition of blindness, and hardness of heart.—Bishop Coxe.

THE FEAST of St. Michael and All Angels is designed to keep before our minds the relations of Angels to the Church of CHRIST, as being concerned, as well as ourselves, in the SAVIOUR'S Mission; as being, with us, members of His mystical body; as being guardians of our souls, and ministers to our bodies, in life and in the hour of death. All this, and much besides, that is affirmed of Angels, we should devoutly consider and bring to mind on this day. Michael is called a Saint, just as Gabriel is called a Man, (Daniel ix. 21,) to assure us of the great truth that—

"Angels and living Saints, and dead,
But one Communion make."

In the Prophet Daniel, moreover, (ix. 13, 17,) name of Saints, or holy ones, is especially given to the Angels.—Bishop Coxe.

SELECTIONS.

"NONE OF OUR BUSINESS."

[A little girl was heard to finish her evening prayer with these words: "And I saw a poor little girl on the street to-day, cold and barefooted; but it's none of our business, is it, God?"]

"None of our business!" wandering and sinful,
All through the streets of the city they go,
Hungry and homeless in the wild weather—
"None of our business?" Dare we say so?

"None of our business!" Children's wan faces,
Haggard and old with their suffering and sin;
Hold fast your darlings on tender, warm bosoms,
Sorrow without, but the home light within.

What does it matter that some other woman—
Some common mother—in bitter despair,
Wails in a garret, or sits in a cellar,
Too broken-hearted for weeping or prayer?

"None of our business!" Sinful and fallen,
How they may jostle us close on the street!
Hold back your garment! Scorn? They are used to it;
Pass on to the other side lest you should meet.

"None of our business!" On then, the music;
On with the feasting, though hearts break forlorn;
Somebody's hungry, somebody's freezing,
Somebody's soul will be lost ere the morn.

Somebody's dying (on with the dancing!)
One for earth's pottage is selling his soul;
One for a bauble has bartered his birthright,
Selling his all for a pitiful dole.

Ah! but One goeth abroad on the mountains,
Over lone deserts, with burning, deep sand!
Seeking the lost ones (it is His business!)
Bruised though His feet are and torn though His hands.

Thorn crowned His head and His soul sorrow-stricken,
(Saving men's souls at such infinite cost),
Broken His heart for the grief of the nations!
It is His business saving the lost.

—London Christian Commonwealth.

I WOULD bid you stand up to your work, whatever it may be, and not be afraid of it—not in sorrow or contradiction to yield, but pushing on toward the goal. And don't suppose that people are hostile to you in the world. You will rarely find anybody designedly doing you ill. You may feel often as if the whole world is obstructing you, more or less; but you will find that to be because the world is traveling in a different way from you, and rushing on in its own path. Each man has only an extremely good will to himself—which he has a right to have—and is moving on towards his object.

If you find many people who are hard and indifferent to you in a world you consider to be unhospitable and cruel, as often, indeed, happens to a tender hearted, striving young creature, you will also find there are noble hearted, who will look kindly on you, and their help will be precious to you beyond price. You will get good and evil as you go on, have the success that has been appointed you."—Thomas Carlyle.

"I ONCE met a thoughtful scholar," says Bishop Whipple," who told me that for years he had read every book he could, which assailed the religion of JESUS CHRIST, and he said he should have became an infidel but for three things:

"First, I am a man. I am going somewhere. To-night I am nearer the grave than I was last night. I have read all that these books can tell me. They shed not one solitary ray of hope or light upon the darkness. They shall not take away the guide and leave me stoneblind.

"Second, I had a mother. I saw her go down into the dark valley where I am going, and she leaned upon an unseen Arm, as calmly as a child goes to sleep on the breast of its mother. I know that was not a dream.

"Third. I have three motherless daughters (and he said it with tears in his eyes). They have no protector but myself. I would rather kill them than leave them in this sinful world, if you blot out from it all the teachings of the Gospel."
—Church and Parish.

WHEN we are injured, we are bound as Christians to bear it without malice; but we are not to pretend that we do not feel it, for this will but encourage our enemies to kick us again. He who is cheated twice by the same man is half as bad as the rogue, and it is very much so in other injuries. Unless we claim our rights, we are ourselves to blame if we do not get them. Paul was willing to bear stripes for his Master's sake, but he did not forget to tell the Magistrates that he was a Roman; and when these gentlemen wished to put him out of prison privately, he said, "Nay, verily, let them come themselves and fetch us out." A Christian is the gentlest of men, but then he is a man.—Spurgeon.

OFFERTORIES FOR OCTOBER.

Domestic Missions, 3d Sunday in month.
General Charities, other Sundays.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week at 11 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 to 12 A. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

IT MAY BE REMEMBERED that last Winter, on Sunday afternoons, the Rector gave a course of lectures upon the history of the American Church. The substance of them, together with additional matter, has been published under the title of "The History of the American Episcopal Church," and is for sale at the book stores. The Sexton will take orders and see that copies are delivered to any member of the Parish who may desire it. Price, $2, $2.25 and $3, according to binding.

THE PICTURE OF THE LAST SUPPER in glass mosaic over the alter in St. Stephen's has been a source of unspeakable delight to all who have seen it. As a work of art it not only stands out of sight above anything of its sort in America, but is regarded as a master-piece by those who are able to compare it with the treasures of the world. It is a noble memorial of filial love, and a constant preacher to the eyes of all who look upon it.

But it is worthy of a better setting. For this reason it has been constantly in the minds of the Rector and Vestry of the Church to perfect and enrich its surroundings, with the ultimate idea of erecting a churchly and well-designed reredos of stone of which the picture should be the central and predominating feature, to take the place of the present oaken frame which surrounds the picture. With the present setting, all who see it are tormented with a sense of incongruity. It is a noble picture in a cheap frame. Besides that, the light upon it is unsatisfactory to the last degree. The Vestry, believing that they will thus carry out the will of the people, have determined upon, and ordered the stone reredos. They believe, as does the Rector also, that the people will willingly provide for the expense, which will be about $2500.

The designing and supervision of the work thus outlined has been entrusted to Mr. George C. Mason, Jr., the architect of the Parish House. The style adopted is a rich decorated Gothic of a modern type, and the delicate creamy color of the stone work will harmonize with and enhance the beauty of the mosaic. The picture itself will be raised about one foot six inches, and be reset on the wall of the church. The present altar, of white marble, will be raised on an additional step of encaustic tiling, and there will be added a super altar, also of white marble, on which will stand the brass cross. All the rest of the work will be of Caen stone, highly wrought, and rising from a bed of red Champlain marble. The reredos will be 26 feet in length, and the highest points of the crosses surmounting the angle buttresses will be 20 feet from the floor. The picture is 11 feet 5 inches in length, and 5 feet 4 inches high, surrounded by mouldings and paneling, and sustained and flanked by small buttresses. Above the picture will be five gables with crockets and finials, their tympana being filled in with elaborate pierced work. The centre gable will be surmounted by an angel, also in stone, with folded hands, and looking downward at the picture. The gables rise from a deeply moulded cornice supported by the angle buttresses, and over the pictures are three cherub heads with wings. The angle buttresses are two feet three inches wide, perfectly plain courses of stone up to the line of the cornice, at which point angle gargoyles, with angel faces and wings, spring out, the sweep of the lines as they return on the buttresses being wrought into bands of rich carving. Above the line of cornice the buttresses are paneled. Between the angle and lesser buttresses on each side of the picture are hooded niches supported on double columns, with floriated capitals. The backgrounds of the niches are studded with fleur-de-lis, raised on the stone. The northern niche is shallow, the one on the south being sunk deeper to form a Credence Table. Below the picture and over the altar are panels carved in bas-relief with clouds, through which are half seen cherubs' heads and wings, floating and looking up towards the picture. The lower part of the reredos is paneled in unison with the altar.

One of the most difficult problems has been to properly light the picture, and at the same time to do so without annoying the worshipers with the glare of open lights. Glass mosaic is entirely dependent upon artificial lighting to bring out its colors, and great care must be exercised to prevent a glitter on any portion of the surface due to an imperfect distribution of the rays. The experiment to accomplish this result extended over several months, and was conducted by Mr. Mason and Mr. Stepan De Kosenko, and the result finally obtained fully justifies their study. The perfected arrangements consist of three pendents, so called, sanctuary lamps of ornamental gilt metal, globular in form and 15 inches in diameter, hung at a distance of about four feet from the picture and slightly above it. These lamps, closed towards the body of the church, contain each an Edison electric bulb of 100 candle power. By a system of concealed reflectors, the rays of these lamps are thrown upon the picture from right to left and vice versa, while from the centre lamp the rays are thrown downward in the shape of a fan to the lower corners of the mosaic. All glitter is thus avoided, and a soft and even light diffused. The same lamps also effectually light the chancel, so that the tall standards of gas lights can be removed.

The work is now well forward, and it is hoped will be completed by the first of November. If it is found practicable, electric lighting will be put in the Church and Parish House at the same time.

IT IS PROPOSED TO OPEN IN PHILADELPHIA, in a few months, an Institution for training women in Church work, with a view of their becoming Deaconesses. The training will be intellectual, devotional and practical, and will be open to women of any diocese.

The following outline will give an idea of its scope and purpose:

NAME.

The name of the Institution will be, "THE CHURCH TRAINING AND DEACONESS HOUSE OF THE DIOCESE OF PENNSYLVANIA."

OBJECT.

Its purpose will be the training of women in religious and benevolent work, and especially of those desirous of entering upon the office and work of Deaconesses in the Church of God.

ORGANIZATION.

The Bishop of the Diocese will be ex-officio Rector. A Presbyter of the Diocese, appointed by the Bishop, will be the Warden. There will be a Board of Managers, consisting of twelve women, a Board of Council of three laymen, and a Faculty of six clergymen, All of these will be appointed by the Bishop. The daily order and discipline of the House will be under the direction of a House-Mother, who will be nominated by the Bishop. Instructors, in addition to the Faculty, may be appointed by the Bishop.

ADMISSION.

Candidates must be at least eighteen years of age, in good health, communicants of the Church in good standing, and be recommended by their respective Rectors or Bishops.

EXPENSES.

The charges for board, room, gas, laundry, and necessary books, will be two hundred dollars a year. But for those intending to become Deaconesses there will be no charge, except for books, after the first year. Women not living in the house will be expected to pay $25 per annum, or to pledge themselves for one year to such definite work as shall be assigned them.

LENGTH OF COURSE.

The training of Deaconesses will extend over a period of two years, and of others, for any length of time that may be found desirable.

OBJECT OF STUDY.

The subjects of study will be: The Bible, The Prayer Book, Church History, Elementary Theology, Hygiene and Home Sanitation, Nursing, Methods of Teaching, Cooking, Housekeeping, and whatever else may properly come within the range of the work of a Deaconess. Especial attention will be given to encouraging each candidate to work pleasantly and without friction with her fellow-workers, not asserting herself, but willing to take directions from others.

Opportunity will be afforded for training in all branches of Hospital, Institution, Mission and Bible Class work, under the direction of experienced instructors.

TO CONSTITUTE THE BOARD OF MANAGERS.

MISS COLES, Chairman, 2111 Walnut Street.
Miss E. C. MCVICKAR, Secretary, 1820 Spruce Street.
MISS AERTSEN, Treasurer, 140 Coulter Street, Germantown.
MISS ELIZABETH N. BIDDLE, 1812 Locust Street.
MRS. MARY E. MUMFORD, 1401 N. 17th Street.
MRS. GEO. L. HARRISON, School Lane, Germantown.
MISS ANNIE BUCHANAN, 1738 Pine Street.
MISS KATHARINE BUCKLEY, 1508 Spruce Street.
MISS ELIZABETH MORRIS, 1619 Arch Street.

The other appointments will be announced in due time.

O. W. WHITAKER,
Bishop of Pennsylvania.

The Board of Managers having accepted the appointment of the Bishop, invites correspondence from any who desire to enter upon such a course of training. Letters should be addressed to

MISS E. C. MCVICKAR,
1820 Spruce Street, Philadelphia,
Secretary of the Board.

As opening the proposed House will require a considerable expenditure of money, it is hoped that generous contributions will be made for its support. They should be sent to

MISS ESTHER PARRY AERTSEN,
140 Coulter Street, Germantown,
Treasurer of the Board.

THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY invited forty-five children to go to the Centennial Grounds for an outing, on Sept. 13th. It had rained at intervals all day, but at one o'clock twenty-seven little ones were ready to start. It was first thought best to keep them at the Parish House and telegraph for ice cream, but house cleaning was going on, so that could not be done.

Mr. Shuster had his man with the provisions on hand, so off we started, taking the children to Memorial Hall where they enjoyed looking at the curios and the Views of Pompeii. Ice cream had been ordered at Mr. Blanks in West Phila. Four o'clock it was on hand, and as the weather was still threatening the driver very kindly offered to take the children in the wagon to the Pavilion on George's Hill. All crowded in and thought it great fun and were ready for sandwiches, ice cream and cake when they got there.

They were a little disappointed at not being able to play on the grass, but had a good time and went home very happy. Several of these children were from the Day Nursery and had talked of this trip all the week.

Owing to the weather, many of the children have been disappointed, but those that did not get out will be remembered in the Winter. The excursion that was to have been on the 27th, will be, if clear, on the 4th of Oct. to Children's Play Ground.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS OF ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH will meet Wednesdays, in the Guild room of the Parish building, at half past seven o'clock.

First meeting, Oct. 22d.

SELECTIONS.

THE number of missionary stations in Africa now exceeds 500. There are 400,000 converts, and the number is increasing at the rate of about 25,000 a year. Within five years, more than 200 natives have suffered martyrdom for their faith.

NEVER, never, let the people become wholly absorbed in their own affairs or in the affairs of the Parish. Widen their horizon to take in the duty of the Church in relation to humanity. They will be better for it, and the Parish will be stronger if the people embrace in their sympathies, their prayers, their labors and their offerings the work of the Church in missions to our own countrymen and to heathen lands.

MR. GLADSTONE is credited with the following remarks: "Talk about the questions of the day; there is but one question, and that is the Gospel. It can and will correct everything needing correction. All men at the head of great movements are Christian men. During the many years I was in the Cabinet, I was brought into association with sixty master minds, and all but five of them were Christians. My only hope for the world is in bringing the human mind into contact with Divine revelation."

Pensées d'une Femme.

Il faut être plus doux que la justice.

On se reproche toujours d'avoir trop légèrement condamné ceux qui réparent noblement leurs torts.

Le sourire de ceux qui souffrent est plus douloureux à voir que leurs larmes.

Les grands cœurs ne sont jamais heureux; il leur manque le bonheur des autres.

Si tu n'as pas vu souffrir ceux que tu aimes, tu ne connais pas la vraie douleur.

Utilise ta souffrance en en faisant de la pitié pour la souffrance des autres.

Quand vous souffrez trop, essayez de rendre un enfant heureux.

SOME years ago, a gentlemen in New York left his entire property, some $400,000, for the purpose of founding a musical college. At once, of course, the will was disputed; and now it appears that the entire property has been consumed in litigation, and not a dollar remains for the object specified in the will, even supposing the will to be sustained. This fact might well be proclaimed from the housetop. When will men learn to do good during their lifetime, and not to rob themselves of the pleasure of seeing the work which they desire prospering before their eyes?—Selected.

AS WE THINK, we are; as we are, we see. Progress is through sacrifice. Sacrifice to be pure must be inspired by something higher than the desire to be self-sacrificing. If these four things be true, if these are principles which are constant in human nature, then it would seem to follow that any religion, if it is to be an abiding one, must recognize these laws.

The religion which has no message to the thoughts of men, or no appeal to the moral nature of men, or which ignores the high law of self-sacrifice, or seeks to establish self-sacrifice apart from some inspiration of love, will assuredly fail. Men cannot do without ideas, without morals, without sacrifice, without inspiring love.—Rt. Rev. W. Boyd Carpenter.

You talk of self as the motive to exertion; I tell you it is the abnegation of self which has wrought out all that is noble, all that is good, all that is useful, nearly all that is ornamental in the world—Whyte Melville.

Total,	$472.18

OFFERTORIES FOR NOVEMBER.

For Female Benevolent Society, 3d Sunday in the month.
For General Charities, other Sundays.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week at 11 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 to 12 A. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

PLEASE READ THE APPEAL of the "Children's Aid Society" in this issue.

THE MANAGERS OF THE FEMALE BENEVOLENT SOCIETY will hold their annual meeting on Wednesday, November 5th, in the Parish House, immediately after Morning Prayer.

The MISSIONARY BOX COMMITTEE will meet at the same time and place. Officers are to be chosen, and other important business transacted, so as to get ready for the Winter's work. A full attendance is greatly desired.

THE AMOUNT OF THE CONTRIBUTIONS made to the Riverside Consumptive Hospital, California, will be acknowledged next month.

WILL SOME GENTLEMAN OR LADY, who speaks German, give an evening a week to the Girls' Friendly Society? A number of these girls (mostly shop and factory workers) want to acquire a speaking acquaintance with German. Such a knowledge would be practically valuable to them. Who will give an evening a week at the Parish House to teach them? Please speak to the Rector about it.

THE CHURCH CONGRESS, which is to sit in Philadelphia, this month, will hold its opening service in St. Stephen's, Tuesday, November 11th, at 10.30 o'clock. The sessions proper of the Congress will be held in Association Hall. The daily papers will publish from day to day the programme of subjects, and speakers and writers.

THE LADIES OF THE PARISH HOUSE COMMITTEE, of St. Stephen's Church, intend holding, on the 20th, 21st, and 22nd of November, their annual sale of the handiwork of gentlewomen, who are obliged, by their own efforts, to support themselves.

In this sale will be found articles of useful and artistic needle-work, and delicious home-made jellies, preserves, pickles, etc.

The ladies of the Committee hope it is understood that no commission is charged the depositors for selling their goods, and earnestly trust that the congregation will do all in their power to further this good work.

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE wishes to call the attention of its members to the fact that its present year will close the last day of this month, and all donations promised for 1890 must be collected by Monday, the 24th. Many think this is an awkward season to end, and begin again December 1st, but there is a two-fold reason for it. The first is, that we gather in the garments and have them ready to distribute, not only to our own poor, before the cold weather begins, but it gives us the opportunity of finding out what we can spare to outside charitable work; also, to give an annual statement, by the first of the year, to those interested, which would be impossible if we closed in December.

The majority of our members have already contributed for the year, beginning December 1st, 1889, and ending November 30th, 1890. There are only about sixty to hear from, but 120 additional garments will be most acceptable. For those who wish to be advised as to what is most needed, we say, infants' night gowns, all articles of underwear for boys and girls from one year old up to ten, plain and strong, new preferred (but outside garments, if partially worn, will be gladly received), warm skirts and sacques for women, and outside wear for men.

Since closing our statements, in April last, we have received contributions from Miss J. Dickerson, Mrs. R. Norris, Mrs. G. Frescoln, Mrs. E. L. Moody, Mrs. D. Parker, Mrs. H. P. Taylor, Miss J. Lowenberg, Miss R. Lowenberg, Miss C. Subers, and one, no name or address, of men's clothing.

One of the Committee will be at the Parish School building every Monday morning, from 10.30 until 12.30 P. M.

Nov. 3d, Mrs. Arnold.
" 10th, Mrs. Lundy.
" 17th, Miss Cleemann.
" 24th, Mrs. Stratton.

THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY had their last out-door excursion on October 11th. About 350 children have enjoyed these trips during the Summer months.

The Winter work now begins, and many little ones who were not able to go on the last excursion are waiting for the good times this Winter.

We are sorry not to be able to state the date of our Thanksgiving treat, but for the past week our thoughts have been entirely with one of our members, who met with a serious accident last Sunday night on her way to church. She is one of the first members of the Society, and one who was always ready for anything that would make the little ones happy. She will be missed very much, but we hope it will not be long before she will again join us in our work.

DONATION RECEIVED BY THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY:

Oct. 11th, from the Hestonville, Mantua and Fairmount Rail Road Co..... $2.00

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS, called the Whatsoever Circle, met October 22d, in the Parish House. Three new members were added to their Circle. Part of the evening was spent in working on a crib comfortable for the Colored Cripple Children, which is to go in their Christmas box.

Next meetings will be November 5th and 19th, at half past seven o'clock. Donations of books and pictures have been received, will be given to hospitals and other places by this Circle.

THE CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY, after working for eight years, has now under its charge 353 destitute children, and is constantly called on to help hundreds more. Its methods are perfected, its work known, its success proved, and the Society is anxious to continue and extend its work among the children from almshouses and alleys. Its need is money. Without pecuniary aid, it is impossible for the Society to carry on its work.

A little boy was found in the Almshouse. His mother dead, his father living in a barn. The child suffered from white swelling. He was examined by Dr. Keen, and it was found necessary to have the leg amputated. One of the students in the Woman's College became interested in the boy, and he was adopted by her. Living in a good home, cared for by a brave woman, one who went South to help the victims of yellow fever, we leave this child surrounded with influences which should make him an honorable member of society.

This is one case in hundreds. Those of you who have children, rosy, healthy, happy, let them plead the Society's cause. And those from whom the Heavenly Father has taken their little ones into His own loving care, will not they help the Society to care for the little outcasts left in this cold world? help them to raise these children from their terrible surroundings, by placing them in family homes? This work has been done, is being done, can be done, if the Society receives help to do it. To place these children in homes takes money, to visit them takes money, to clothe them takes money. Will you not help us as God has given you means?

This is but one branch of the Children's Aid work. Another is to find work for mother and babe, so keeping them together and striving to foster and use the maternal love, to raise the woman from a life of shame to one of honest independence for herself and child. These women are frequently found in almshouses, and by kind persuasion, prevailed upon to take their babies and go into the country, where places are found for them in the families of farmers.

A woman and child found in the almshouse, a stranger in a strange land, was persuaded by the head of this department to take a place in the country. She was brought to the office where the employers had asked to meet her. Her appearance was so miserable that they hesitated to take her, but in a few days they returned to say how much the girl had improved, and how delighted they were with her.

For all this work the Society asks help. For little children too ignorant to know right from wrong, too young to take care of themselves, the Society asks help to teach and tend. They come to us from the Heavenly Father. Their angels do always behold His face. Can you better show your thanks to Him than by helping these, His little ones? His own dear Son came with but a manger for His cradle. He lived homeless amid homes. Are not these little ones made in God's image, types of the Blessed Master, who came to us a child?

No one has ever read Mrs. Browning's "Cry of the Children" without a thrill. Our cry comes from a deeper depth—for children without homes, without care, without love. Oh, friends! ye who call yourselves followers of the Child Jesus, shall the cry come in vain?

Office Children's Aid Society, 127 South 11th Street, Philadelphia.

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 26, 1890.

DEAR DR. MCCONNELL:

You kindly authorized me to write you, some time in October, giving some account of the work among colored people in this city, for which I was, at that time, soliciting aid in Philadelphia. You said it would be well worth my while to wait, as you could likely secure for my work a larger sum than would be possible then (April).

I came to Nashville in 1881, to take charge of a forlorn hope—the poor, debt-burdened, dispirited and almost expiring parish, the Church of the Advent. I discovered that no work at all was being done in Nashville for the colored people.

I immediately commenced a mission for them, which was kept up for a time, but it became manifest, if the Advent was to be saved, I must put every energy of my being, with God's help, into work for its life, at least for some years.

God blessed that effort. Two years ago, last April, I declared to my brethren in convocation, that by God's grace another year should not pass without seeing a mission in Nashville for colored people. An upper room was rented, and the work was begun in faith, but in a very humble way.

I look back to that time, less than three years ago, and am filled with wonder and thankfulness. What hath God wrought? We have Hoffman Hall, right by the side of Fisk University, with resident warden and teachers, and five black men there now, preparing for Holy Orders.

We have removed from our little rented hall, our upper room, and are occupying St. Augustine's Church, almost under the shadow of our Capitol, land secured and building erected by my exertions. We have two admirable lots. I raised money for the cash payments in this city. I gave my individual notes for the deferred payments, running through five years; have been able to get the money and take up the notes as they have fallen due thus far, and feel no fear for the rest.

My anxiety was for the church. We were cramped and hampered in the upper room, which we shared with several secret societies of colored people. So I raised what money I could here. I went by Pittsburgh and Cincinnati, Ohio, on my way home from the meeting of Committee for Work among the Colored People, in Washington, D. C., in January, and raised some money in those cities. I went, via Philadelphia, on my way home from the April meeting of the Commission, and raised some more money there. Thus I got together $900.

By the valuable aid of Mr. Wm. W. Perry, Civil Engineer and Architect, a brother of Rev. Galbraith, and of Rev. James DeW. Perry, Germantown, I have been enabled to excavate at the lower corner of the sloping lot, a basement 35x45 out of the solid rock, with floor on a level with the intersection of the two streets, to build the four walls of stone, 12 feet in height, with openings for windows and doors, put on a plain but neat open roof, covered with tin, put in good floor, doors and windows. Some furniture has been provided, and frequent services are held. Here the theological students of Hoffman, as well as the teachers, find a field for work. We have no plaster on the walls, nor as yet, what is absolutely necessary, an additional stone wall, not very high, and a tin-covered shed from roof to same, so providing place for coal, kindling, and, perhaps, a room for vestments and vesting.

If I could have $200 or $300 more, I could complete all that is necessary for the present. I am sure, as the work continues to grow, a large and handsome church, above this basement room, will, ere many years have passed, become necessary, and I am confident that God will put it into the hearts of some of His servants to build it. Meantime, as I have done all I can in every direction, will you not, for the love of Christ, and perhaps for some "of the least of these," for whom He died, make an extra effort to send the amount demanded by the present necessity, at least, so much of it as you may find possible?

Faithfully and affectionately your Brother and servant,

WM. C. GRAY.

SELECTIONS.

THF LAW OF FORGIVENESS.

CHRIST SAID, "If thy brother trespass against thee seven times a day, and seven times a day turn again to thee saying, I repent, thou shalt forgive him." Probably no reader of this passage would doubt that it means absolutely to take away all limitations of forgiveness, and to proclaim that there is no injury, however deadly, or however frequently repeated, which the Christian is not to forgive upon submission made. But to make this doubly sure it is recorded that Peter put the question directly to Him, whether the seventh time was literally to be taken as a limit. The inquiry, it is worth while to remark by the way, throws a strong light upon the character of the followers whom Christ had gathered round Him. "Lord, how often shall my brother offend against me and I forgive him? Until seven times?" There breathes, in the first place, through this question a singular earnestness The use of the first person seems to show that Peter was not considering the problem as part of the theory of morals. He does not speak in the tone of Socrates' disciples. But he seems to be intently considering how Christ's principle of forgiveness can practically be worked. He speaks as though he had himself suffered an injury and had succeeded more than once in forgiving it, and now came to his Master to know how long the trial was to last. But, on the other hand, the question shows a singular want of the power or habit of generalizing. It is the question of one who has never been accustomed to think, but who guides himself by precepts or texts learned by rote. He thinks it presumption to try to understand his Master's teaching, and according he inevitably misunderstands it. What was delivered as a principle, he instantly degrades into a rule. He has no power of distinguishing the form of the precept from the substance; and therefore being commanded to forgive an offending brother, even if he should commit seven injuries, he proceeds at once to inquire how he should deal with the eighth. No turn of expression could more nicely indicate the process by which those high moralities which are the life of the world, are converted into the conventionalities which are its bane. It is also worthy of remark that Christ in His reply refuses to abandon the figurative mode of expression. He vindicates, as it were, His right to use these forms of language, and insists that His followers shall learn to understand them, but at the same time, He alters the figure so far as to remove the particular misunderstanding into which Peter had fallen. He replied, "I solemnly declare to you, not until seven times, but until seventy times seven."

OFFERTORIES FOR DECEMBER.

Third Sunday, Dec. 21.—For Sunday-school Christmas Festival.
Christmas Day.—For Aged and Infirm Clergy Fund.
Other Sundays.—For General Charities.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week at 11 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 to 12 A. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

THE CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL of the Sunday-school will be held on Monday Evening, December 29th, in the Parish Building, at 7½ o'clock.

THE LADIES OF THE PARISH HOUSE COMMITTEE held a sale during the month, at which they disposed of articles made by poor women, to the amount of $784 28. This amount was all turned over to the women who made the articles.

THE NEW REREDOS has now been seen. It more than satisfies the taste of the devout worshiper, the artist, and the common lover of things beautiful. Thus far but one opinion has been heard concerning it—"it is beautiful!" Every body has admired it. Now the question confronts each member of the congregation, "How much do you admire it?" It, with the lighting, cost $3000. It is now to be paid for. Things of beauty in churches cost, just as things of beauty in houses do. People decorate their houses according as they are able. But they all do it to a degree. From a simple chromo pinned against the wall in a laborer's sitting room to the costly painting or statue in the rich woman's drawing room, no house is unadorned. Now, fair minded, Christian people will see that they should adorn the house where they say their prayers as well as the house where they live. As honorable people, also, they will prefer to share in the expense of doing so. They will then be able to enjoy the sight of it day by day, and year by year with a good conscience.

The situation just now is this:

A year or more ago a mosaic representing the Last Supper, from cartoons by Holiday, of London, was placed over the Altar as a memorial to the late Mrs. Magee. It was set in a temporary and inadequate wooden frame. The Rector and Vestry were at once given to understand, from the criticisms upon it, that so fine a picture deserved a better setting, that it was not the thing to accept so noble a gift and then treat it in so unworthy a way. They were quite alive to the fact from the first. But the people had just been called upon to pay for building a Parish House, and it did not seem right to ask them at once to pay for what would be a suitable Reredos. They therefore determined to wait a while. When they believed a sufficient time to have elapsed they proceeded with the work. Now it is done, and to be paid for. Each member of the Parish will be asked this week to make a contribution to this purpose. When they receive such a request, and are considering just how much they should send in response, will each one kindly,

(1) Cast his eyes about his own drawing or sitting room and ask himself, "What did I give for that picture, statue, piece of bric-a-brac?

(2) Ask himself, "Would I willingly belong to and receive the benefits of a club toward the furnishing and decoration of which I declined to contribute?"

(3) Ask himself, "What is my reasonable share of the expense of a pleasure which I expect to share so long as I belong to St. Stephen's Parish?"

THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY had their Thanksgiving Entertainment, Wednesday, Nov.

26th, over four hundred tickets were given out to children in all parts of the city, from Thirteenth street to Front street, and from Girard avenue to Washington avenue.

At half past seven o'clock the Sunday-school room was filled and each little face was eager to see and hear what was coming. Mr. H. S. Hopper who had so kindly offered to exhibit his collection of lantern slides for the entertainment of the children, and Mr. L. H. Hall who was kind enough to do the talking were ready to begin. First picture shown was the Pennsylvania Depot, then starting for New York, London and the Paris Exposition followed by others, perhaps more amusing to the children and concluding with a beautiful series of views illustrating the hymn "Abide with me."

Mr. Hall sang the hymn, the organ accompanying him, whilst the pictures were being shown. These gentlemen have very kindly helped the ladies of the Society to entertain the children before and the thanks that were given by the children on last Wednesday evening were enough to show how much they appreciate their kindness.

DONATION RECEIVED BY THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY:

Nov. 19.--Miss Stevenson.....$2.00

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS of St. Stephen's Church will hold their next meetings Dec. 3d and 17th, at half past seven o'clock, in the Guild room of Parish House.

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE.

We regret to say that some few of our members have forgotten us this year, which we feel sure they will be sorry to have done when they hear that we are really crippled in our efforts to assist the deserving poor. Others again have been most generous, many having sent liberally two and three times during the year, and from four to fifty-eight garments each, and to these we are most thankful. Could all our members see the pleasure given to the needy by the judicious distribution of their generosity, we feel sure they would be compensated for any sacrifice they may make in placing the clothing in the hands of this Committee for distribution.

Every case is inquired into and found deserving before it is assisted, and then, the ready made garments (plain, warm and of good material) are five times more acceptable than any amount of unmade material that can be put into the hands of these working people. Most of our cases are impoverished through sickness, or being unexpectedly thrown out of employment, and do not need constant assistance, they only require a helping hand until again able to work. Some, of course, are too old, and others too young, to be self-supporting, and these cannot be left to suffer from cold.

At present we are out of almost everything, and quite unable to assist any of the charitable institutions supported by voluntary contributions. We have not sufficient for our own Parish demands. We are in want of underclothing for women, night gowns, both white and unbleached, and flannel petticoats and sacks. We hope the congregation will take pity upon us, and send us now what will be useful for the next four months. The clothing has to be distributed as fast as it comes in, for the demand is constantly increasing, while our members do not increase in proportion.

Every Monday morning, from 10.30 until 12.30 P. M., one of the Committee will be at the Parish School building to receive all articles sent.

MRS. BUFORD'S ANNUAL REPORT AND APPEAL.

Seven years ago, this October, the hospital for infirm and helpless colored people, the only one ever built for negroes, was opened. At the close of each year I send to the Christian men and women who support it a brief summary of what has been done, that they may understand how their blessed gifts have been used.

The receipts in money during the past year have been $4,152.86, the expenses of the hospital; the school included, have been $3,971.12. The number of patients now in the hospital is fifty-three; the number received during the year is forty-nine; the number dismissed, twenty-five; the number of deaths, twelve; the number assisted outside, prescribed for by the physician, supplied with medicine from our free dispensary—with proper food during their illness, including the helpless men, women and little children we supply with warm winter clothing every year, is one thousand and twelve. In the school there are two teachers and one hundred and thirty children.

In addition to the money sent me, I have also received a large number of most excellent and valuable boxes of clothing and bedding, and also large donations of medicine and school-books.

With such substantial and convincing proofs of the continued interest my friends feel in my sorrowful work, and their loyalty and faithfulness to me, so weak and powerless without their helping hands I cannot but thank God and take courage. As the circling years glide swiftly by, and the work grows, and the number of helpless sufferers relieved, helped, comforted increases, and the circle of my friends and helpers widens, and their sympathy and their love deepen; my heart overflows with gratitude, and more deeply each year I feel that this poor weak effort to help the most friendless of earth's sorrowing children has been moulded and fashioned by a Hand other than mine, a Hand Divine, which has rested on it tenderly and pityingly from its feeble incipiency, and is overshadowing it now, and shaping it into beautiful order and symmetry.

With renewed courage I take up the burden for another year But oh! my friends, continue to help me bear it! It is a fearful thing to witness the suffering, the dumb misery, the keen physical anguish I must see constantly. Among these fifty-three patients ten are perfectly helpless; one is lying dead in the hospital to-night, and two more are slowly dying. A wife and two little children are weeping for the young man cut down in his prime, who died to-day. To me, these sufferers in their agony raise great pleading eyes like dumb animals in pain; to me, when all is over, and father and mother, husband, wife or child gone forever, the mourners come for comfort and consolation. Sometimes I feel like shrieking out with the horror of it all; their poor convulsed drawn agonized faces are ever before me, they haunt me in the lonely night watches, and drive sleep away—always in my ears a wail of misery is ringing Seven years in a negro hospital has been a fearful, awful experience, the crucifixion of all, the joy and brightness of my poor life.

The hospital is crowded, not only is every bed filled, but every available space for a bed. I cannot support these helpless creatures without your help, and I want you also to help me build a small detached building to put children in. The hospital is full to overflowing, reeking with terribly diseased negroes; the children should not breathe the same polluted air; their noise should not disturb the sick and dying. A plain wooden frame house is all I want, we care but little for architectural beauty here; our wants are too pressing and too real—only a poor little cheap house to shelter the children. I pray it may be the beginning of the orphanage I hope I shall see before I die. Could you see the suffering children I see? Could you know—as I do, the sorrowful lives of the little ones left behind—this orphanage would be built right speedily? A baby girl was brought to me not long since, a gentle timid little thing, one year old; all eyes, every other feature seemed shrunken to nothingness; its little limbs shrivelled and useless; "De chile's mammy done lef her long ago;" the severe looking old woman who brought her explained to me, "she aint nuthin but a gal herself; she rund away and left it and I don't want it; I aint got nuthin for myself." The child was literally starving; we had to feed her very carefully at first, she was so hungry; it was too pitiful to see the little bird-like hands, picking up crumbs a bird would scorn.

A cold raw day, the rain pouring in torrents, another little one was brought to me—a baby, only a few months old, whose strong young mother, one of my old scholars, had taken violent cold and died suddenly. Her sister brought the child wrapt in a piece of old bed quilt, only her little head visible and a pair of mournful hungry eyes looking everywhere in vain search of the poor dead mother lying in her grave. The woman told me with bitter sobs how my poor scholar had begged her with her dying breath to bring the child to me, if she could not take care of it, and she had nothing but two hungry children of her own and no bread to give them. The child did not die, but is a splendid specimen of healthy, happy childhood now!

Another case was so horrible I shudder to recall it, but I see them now—a poor girl sitting on the door step of my back porch, in tatters, hungry eyed herself, crouching over the child she held in her arms—a baby child with a face prematurely aged by want and suffering, wailing pitifully, feebly wailing all the time. Even in its agony it held out a little hand to me for bread. "Look here," the girl sobbed, "look here, see what dey done to my child," and she pushed aside the rags it was wrapt in, and I saw the fearful burns which covered the poor little emaciated body. I knew the girl, a poor, half-witted motherless child herself. I remember, when that child was born, one of my old servants coming to me for help for her. It seemed she had lived with her uncle, the butt, the scape-goat, the drudge of his large family. A few days before she had laid the baby to sleep on its little pallet bed (an old guano bag it proved to be) and gone off to attend a burial. While she was gone two sons of this uncle, boys about twelve and fourteen, came in, and, for what fiendish purpose God only knows, seeing the sleeping child, determined to torture it, and deliberately poured a shovel full of burning coals over it. The helpless mother came back; a wailing sound drew her to the pallet bed. Friendless, powerless to resist, she took her baby in her arms, and for two days had been wandering about seeking shelter and assistance. I need not tell you how quickly this asylum for the suffering opened wide its doors and took them in. The burns were quickly dressed, the mother fed and clothed; but care and kindness came too late; in a day or two the wailing little voice was hushed forever.

All through our Southern land there are numbers of these poor little negroes, orphans, or deserted by their mothers. They have no protectors, no guardians; the law takes no cognizance of such as they—as they haven't much property to be looked after. They are generally claimed by some far-off relative, or given to any one who will take them, and made the slave and drudge of their wives and children. The misery of these hapless children who have no one to appeal to, no words can tell. I have known instances where they have been beaten to death by brutal negro women. All the children in my hospital have been rescued from such a fate, and if I only had a house to shelter them, many poor little wretched lives might be saved and made useful and happy. Ah! how I wish you could only see the ragged, hungry-looking, filthy, pitiful children who come to me constantly, with the same cast-off, cowed, sorrowful look in their eyes, the same mournful cry—"We's motherless children, our mammy dead; please give us some clothes; we heard you clothed motherless children." Many of the thousand who have been clothed from the noble boxes you have sent me during the past year are these little waifs.

In the school there is everything to encourage and comfort me. We have one hundred and thirty children, and they are admirably taught and trained by the two earnest, faithful Christian women, who have been my true friends and helpers for many years. These children are taught to read, write and the elementary branches of a plain, practical education; we know the absurdity of attempting to teach them the higher branches. The girls are also taught to mend, darn, cut and make their own clothing and garments for the boys. Whenever I go in and see the rows of clean, neatly-dressed children, studying quietly, or else with deft nimble fingers plying the needle and thread, I can scarcely believe these orderly, well-behaved children are the successors of the wild semi-barbarians I gathered in more than twelve years ago.

During the past year several of my distant friends have visited me in my own house, and seen the hospital and its poor inmates. It was a revelation to them of such misery and suffering as they never dreamed of; and they went home with hearts aching with pity. Earnestly I beg those who come South this Winter to stop for a little while, and see this poor hospital, the solitary one, I have ever known in the South for negroes. I want you to see for a little while what I must see constantly; to listen for a little while to the wail of misery that rings in my ears always.

You can see plainly from this report how great and sore my need is of your continued help; never have I appealed to you, my friends, in vain; always, your responses come quickly, nobly, generously; and now when the golden Autumn days have come again, and another year is past and gone, and its dread record closed forever, I send you, with truest love, with heartfelt gratitude, my annual report and appeal.

Lawrenceville, Brunswick Co., Va., Oct. 1, 1890.

THE FOLLOWING IS FROM a private letter from a missionary's wife:

We are struggling so hard to raise the debt of $1000 on our church. We cannot build a rectory until this is done, and till then we have to live in a rented house, some distance from both town and church. It is trying my health very much, so much walking; nearly every day I have to go in three times. Now the snow is thick on the ground and will remain for about eight months. It makes the distance so much more difficult for me. We are preparing to have a Christmas fete about two weeks before Christmas Day, and we have such a short time to prepare, as we have so lately come here that I fear greatly, it will be a failure for want of things to sell. Do you think you could influence your friends to send a few fancy and useful articles for it. I should be so grateful. Another thing I should be so glad to interest you in is our poor. We have so many here. It is a large mining district and so much sickness through typhoid, consequently great poverty. There are so many foreigners whom it seems nobody's business to look after, Italians, etc.

The Winters are so bitter, constantly 40° below zero, and every article of clothing and food so much dearer than with you. We need so badly second-hand clothing, bed linen, baby linen, etc. It would make your heart ache to see how some of these people are clothed in this severe climate. I have a very sad case just now—a poor woman had a son down with typhoid; then she took it; then her husband met with an accident to his legs in the mine. All three laid up. No one would do anything for her in the way of cleaning the house, etc., because they were afraid of taking the fever. She has been lying now six weeks in bed. She cannot even get any one to wash for her. I had to send her some of my sheets and night dresses to change with, but I cannot well keep this up, as I have not a large supply myself.

I begged my own girl to do something for her, but she refused, being afraid. So if you could send me some clothes and baby linen especially, they would be such a God send to the poor people here. So many of my women are going to have babies, and so many of them will not, I am sure, be able to provide for them all they need.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week at 11 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 to 12 A. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR!

THE GIFTS OF THE CONGREGATION were sufficient to give the children of the Sunday-schools a glorious Christmas Festival!

THE GIRLS' FRIENDLY SOCIETY of the Parish was organized in March, 1890. It then had about twenty members, girls of fourteen years and over, and ten associates. Since March the Society has been steadily at work, with only a few weeks intermission during the hottest of the Summer. It has now fifty-five members. These girls come to the Parish House every Monday evening to get whatever good is offered them. They learn to trim their hats and make their dresses, under the direction of competent teachers; they learn to knit and to do various kinds of ornamental work. There is a class in history, and a very good class in singing.

At half after six o'clock every Monday tea is served, especially for the girls who live at a distance from their places of employment, and who find it convenient to come directly to the Parish House without going home; but it is desired that all the members should come to tea, and nearly all do come, so that their evenings may be as long as possible. The simple provisions are furnished, from time to time, by any ladies of the congregation who wish to help the work.

As occasion offers, suitable entertainments are given, which help to make these Monday evenings the brightest spot in the week to many of the members. On the Monday before Christmas Mr. David Wood delighted them with an hour's exquisite organ-recital.

The Society possesses a small library, which is gradually increasing, thanks to the generous gifts of its friends.

A leading doctor of the city, Dr. H. R. Wharton, very kindly acts as physician to the members who may need medical advice.

The steady growth of the Society seems to argue its vitality. Scarcely a week passes without the addition of one or more members. The demands for help of every description are pressing and sometimes hard to meet. There is room for teachers of almost everything—from English, book-keeping, German and drawing; to cooking, mending and hygiene. It is most desirable that these teachers should be women of the church, for by far the most important part of the work is, that it brings church women into relations with girls whom they can befriend in all the larger and deeper ways which such women know.

THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY will have their New Year's Entertainment in Guild room of Parish House, January 7th, 1891.

Christmas, 1889, one hundred and seventy-five children were entertained, and a gift given to each child, but this year we have over 500 names on our book, and the funds of the Society will not now permit any such expenditure. It is designed, instead, to give a series of entertainments as frequently as possible during the Winter, should the treasury be sufficiently replenished for the purpose. These Winter entertainments are looked forward to by the children as eagerly as the Summer excursions. Many inquiries have already been made, when the next entertainment is to be? Some of the children who have moved away have sent postals with their new address on, for fear they would be forgotten. The young ladies of the Preparatory School for Wellesley have very kindly dressed and donated thirteen dolls (through Miss Gleim. These dolls will be given out during Christmas week to some of the very poor children. Games and Christmas cards have also been received from one of the ladies in the church.

The Society take this opportunity to thank those who have so kindly remembered the little ones.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS of St. Stephen's Church will hold their next meetings January 14th and 28th, at half past seven o'clock, in the Guild room of Parish House.

The work done in December has been—making up Christmas packages for the Home for the Merciful Saviour, House of St. Michael and All Angels, Old Ladies' Free Shelter Home, and small package for Mrs. Buford and Hayes' Mechanics' Home.

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE reports to the Benevolent Society for the year ending November 30, 1890, that the members and contributors now number 151, a gain of only eleven members since its organization in January 1888. More than that number have of course joined it during that time, but there have been the usual changes that will necessarily occur. Out of this number 105 have contributed during the year; fewer than either of the previous years, not from any lack of interest however, for the committee is under the impression that it is growing in favor year by year, but a year in which to send two garments seems so long a time that if not attended to at once it is apt to be forgotten and after the first few months have passed, no one can recall whether their contributions have been given or not. Those who have remembered us have been most generous although the number of garments received has been less than either of the previous seasons also. If all had sent we would make a better setting forth and have been able to give more freely.

A DEACONESS HOUSE AND TRAINING SCHOOL is about to be started in this Diocese.

During several years past there has been a growing conviction in the minds of earnest Church workers that many devout women would be glad to avail themselves of an opportunity to become qualified, by a systematic course of study and discipline, for more effective work for the Master.

Some of these, it has been thought, would choose to give their lives wholly to this one thing, and become members of an order consecrated to religious service.

Others, it has been thought, would like to become better prepared for such Sunday-school, or mission, or benevolent work as they could perform in the parishes to which they belong, or in the community in which they live, but without any intention of devoting themselves to it altogether.

Others, still, there may be who, while feeling strongly drawn towards the life of a missionary, would yet, before undertaking it, be glad to test themselves and their fitness for such a calling, by spending some time in preparation for its peculiar duties.

Out of this prevalent feeling grew the action of the General Convention of 1889, authorizing the appointment of unmarried women of devout character and appoved fitness, to the office of Deaconess, by any Bishop of this Church.

The second section of the canon defines the duty of a Deaconess to be to assist the minister in the care of the poor and sick, the religious training of the young and others, and the work of moral reformation.

The canon further provides that before appointment the applicant shall have had an adequate preparation for her work, both technical and religious, which preparation shall have covered the period of two years.

For the purpose of providing such preparation as will meet the needs of the three classes of workers referred to, the Church Training and Deaconess House of the Diocese of Pennsylvania is to be opened on the Feast of the Epiphany, Tuesday, January 6th, 1891. Its headquarters will be at No. 708 Spruce Street, Philadelphia, which has been purchased, and is now being furnished for this purpose.

Its general management will be under the direction of the Bishop of the Diocese.

A Board of Managers has been appointed by the Bishop, of which Miss Coles is President, and to whom letters of inquiry should be addressed, at 2111 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.

Instruction will be given by a faculty of six clergymen and other teachers, to be appointed by the Bishop.

The training given will be intellectual, devotional and practical. It will be open to women from any Diocese, and any who may desire to come to the House simply for instruction in any department of study can do so without becoming residents.

It will be the aim to furnish most favorable facilities for learning in all branches of Church work.

Instruction will be given in the Bible, Prayer Book, Church history, theology, social science, hygiene and home sanitation, nursing, methods of teaching, missions, cooking, housekeeping, needlework, and whatever else may be needed to qualify those whom the school may send out to be true helpers of the parochial clergy in their missionary and benevolent work. Opportunity will be given to the students to study the regular work of hospitals and other charities of the city, and to put into practice what they are learning day by day.

Candidates for admission must be at least eighteen years of age, in good health, and must furnish satisfactory evidences of character and ability.

The charges for board, room, laundry and necessary text books will be $200 a year. But for candidates for the office of Deaconess there will be no charge, except for books, after the first year. The charge for students who do not live in the House, but who come for special instruction, will be $25 a year, and they will provide their own books.

The Board of Managers are Miss Coles, Miss McVickar, Miss Elizabeth N. Biddle, Miss Annie Buchanan, Miss Bennett, Miss Agnes Irwin, Mrs. Horace Fassett, Miss Sanders, Miss Esther P. Aertson, Treasurer, 140 Coulter Street, Germantown, Miss Helen L. Parrish, Secretary, 1135 Spruce Street.

It will be noticed that the project is not that of any one parish, but of the whole Church. It is one which should commend itself specially to women who have the independent control and ownership of money. The offertory in this parish will be for this purpose, Sunday morning, January 25th. It is to be hoped that in that offertory will be found not only the smaller gifts of many, but some very large gifts from a few.

SELECTIONS.

THE GRANDEUR OF THE RESULT.

Thirty years ago, when the missionary work was begun in Japan, there was not a single avowed Japanese Christian; and it was death for a native to join what was denounced on government tablets placed in conspicuous places all over the empire as "an evil sect." About ten years afterward some of the first Christians were seized and thrown into prison, but though they were subjected to much persecution they were not slain. To-day there are about 25,000 communicants, and there are double that number of adherents—candidates for Baptism, inquirers and attendants upon Christian services, etc. There are hundreds of native pastors, evangelists, missionary physicians, teachers, male and female, Bible women, etc., and a large number of them are supported by the native converts. There are eighteen religious magazines and newspapers, owned and edited, many of them, by native Christians.

The largest Christian college in Japan, the Doshisha, at Kioto, which has 900 students, and has lately been made into a university, was founded by a native Christian, the Rev. Joseph Neesima, a man of far greater influence among the Japanese than any foreign missionary. He was the president of the college until his death, and another scholarly native clergyman has been chosen to succeed him. In this university there are a number of American professors, though the greater part of the instructors are native Christian gentlemen.

A CONFIRMATION of lepers has been held by the Bishop of Cape Town, at the asylum on Robben Island, South Africa. He first confirmed nine, using the English language, and, using the Dutch language, he laid hands on five chronic sick persons, forty-four male and seventeen female lepers. His addresses were very earnest and touching.

THE BISHOP OF CAPETOWN, writing concerning a recent visit to the interior stations, dwells upon the readiness with which the natives of South Africa receive the Gospel. One of his missionaries states that where fourteen years ago there were not 400 baptized members of the colored race there are now 1,300 and the number is increasing.

THREE HUNDRED AND EIGHTEEN persons have been baptized at Banza Manteke, on the Congo river, since November, 1886. Of these no less than sixty-six have died, the "sleeping disease," which prevails in that region, being the chief cause of this large number of deaths. Two converts have gone to London to see if they can be cured of this disease.

THE NEW ORLEANS Christian Advocate says that the Chinese Sunday-school of that city, established ten years ago, has resulted in the conversion of over thirty Chinese, some of whom have gone back to China as missionaries at their own expense, and others established Chinese Sunday-schools in cities of this country, maintaining the same at their own cost.

MR. SPURGEON tells of a man who used to say to his wife: "Mary, go to church and pray for us both." But the man dreamed one night, when he and his wife got to the gate of Heaven, St. Peter said, "Mary, go in for both." He awoke, and made up his mind that it was time for him to become a Christian on his own account.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week at 11 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 to 12 A. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

DIOCESAN MISSIONS.

The annual offering in February for Diocesan Missions has become a feature in the parish. The Rector believes it to be more important than any other collection taken during the year. It is meant to carry the Gospel to those who live at our own doors. We believe the "Gospel" to be worth carrying. We know that the machinery to do this duty costs money. We are ready according to our ability to give the money. There has been a sort of tacit understanding that the amount to be given by each one ought to be about five dollars. This has come to be known as the five dollar collection. The Rector will, as usual, in a sermon tell the people what seem to him to be the reasons why this duty is laid upon us. This being done each family will be waited upon as usual during the week following by a committee to receive their offerings. The committee will place the amount gathered in the alms basins on Sunday, Feb. 15th.

The collectors do not ask any one for an offering. They simply carry about the books for the Rector. Each one has a half dozen families, of people who live near together, whom he visits. He does not go on his own responsibility at all, but representing the Church. With the exception of two or three ill-natured persons who do not intend to do anything for Church purposes, (who will not be asked again, and whose room in the Church is worth more than their company,) they have met with a kind reception, even when the people visited did not see their way to give the amount asked.

Any one who does not think he is able to contribute for this purpose or is not willing to do so, should say so frankly and that is the end of it. We suppose he is honest when he so says, and he ought not to be pressed.

CONFIRMATION.

The Bishop has appointed Tuesday in Holy Week, March 24th, at 11 o'clock, as the time for the annual confirmation in this church. This is the date to which we have been accustomed for many years.

Who should be confirmed? (1.) Such children of Christian parents as have come to discretion, and are old enough and wise enough to take upon themselves the promises which their parents took for them at their Baptism. This does not mean children who have not come to discretion. The Rector of this parish will not present children for confirmation. Of course no definite age can be fixed. One child at fifteen may be as old as another at twenty. It means young people who are old enough to form moral judgments, and to know what they are doing. The candidate is called upon to declare that he "believes the Apostles' Creed." It is not required that he should be old enough or learned enough to say clearly why he believes it, but he must be old enough to know whether he does or does not believe it. He is called upon to promise to "lead a sober, righteous and godly life." This promise he cannot fairly be asked to make until he is old enough to have some intelligent notion about what it is to live, and what sobriety and righteousness mean. Not that it requires any great age or wisdom to understand these things. The judgment of the young man or maiden is often much more clear here than is that of their more sophisticated father or mother. He who is old enough to prefer right to wrong as the rule of his life, and who humbly begs Divine aid and sustentation therein, is the one who ought to be confirmed.

(2.) The man or woman whose life is already fairly honest, pure and upright, but who is not openly identified with the Church of the living God, or doing that which in him may lie to bring his fellow-men to the righteousness of Christ. It is worth while for such a man to consider whether his present attitude is honorable? He believes in Jesus Christ, rules his life as well as he may by his counsels, expects to be buried as a Christian man and to face the Son of Man when he wakes up again, but declines to acknowledge in the only practicable way what is the source and ground of the very real goodness which he now possesses. The things which prevent him ordinarily are not sufficient. They are a foolish shyness, which is childish; the notion that he "is not good enough," whereas be knows perfectly well that the very purpose of the Church is to nourish and produce goodness; the fear that he "may not be able to keep his promises," whereas he ought to know that the same obligations precisely rest upon him whether he promises or not.

(3.) Those who at present possess membership in other churches, but are attracted by what they and we believe to be our "better way." As a rule, this class of persons constitute a large proportion of those confirmed in our Church. A curious mistake sometimes obtains that by being confirmed they tacitly treat with disrespect their present membership, or rather that our Church does not recognize them as having been members of the church. As a matter of fact, we do precisely what all other churches do. We have our own way of public avowal of membership as they have their way. The certificate of membership, which such a one brings with him takes the place of all examination as to religious character and moral fitness. It does not compel the reception of the member by us any more than a certificate from us would compel reception by Lutherans or Presbyterians. In either case it is an act of courtesy.

But we ask those who come that they shall stand up before our people and publicly identify themselves with us, as we become responsible for them.

But what is the meaning and use of the Rite? Ideally it is simply this; the young man or woman who has been up to this time sheltered under parental care, now begins his own religious life. At the outset, the Church, (to which he already belongs), bids him call to mind what his profession is, bids him kneel and receive her benediction at the hands of the only man who can act for the Church. This benediction is not only a prayer, but something more. It gently constrains the Spirit of God, which moveth as the wind, to touch and fill the humble soul, striving for goodness with "wisdom and ghostly strength."

THE COMMITTEE OF THE ALTAR SOCIETY, having in charge the Lenten sewing, will be grateful to the members of the congregation for any material that may be used for that work. Owing to the great assistance they had last year both in the gifts of money, flannels, muslins, etc., and the sewing done by the ladies, they were able to give over six hundred garments to hospitals, nurseries, and poor families.

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE.

Since the Annual Report, which appeared in the PARISH NEWS of January 1st, there has been a most encouraging and increased interest shown towards our committee; which has so inspired us with courage that we feel we can now go on with our work briskly and vigorously, really doing good.

Beside receiving very generously from many of the annual members (who are always prompt in giving) we have had from gentlemen of the parish most liberal and valuable contributions in outside clothing, and our first gift in money; the latter will prove a double pleasure; first the necessary thought required of spending to the greatest advantage and then distributing where most needed. It is to be invested in warm, suitable under-garments for men, and every case is strictly investigated and known to be worthy before the garments are given. We have also received an entire piece of flannel from one of our annual members, with another gift in money from another member, almost sufficient to pay for the making of it into under-wear for women. The sewing to be done by our own working poor. Now have we not good reason to be grateful to the congregation which puts such confidence in us as to give into our hands and our consciences the unrestricted control of so much that is valuable?

We have: and we are.

One of the Committee will be at the Parish School Building every Monday morning from 10.30 until 12.30 P. M., to receive all articles sent or they may be left at any time at 9 South 10th street, if marked for the Garment Committee.

THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY gave their Christmas and New Year's entertainment to about 150 children, Jan. 7th, in the Guild Room of the Parish House.

Mr. Yost was engaged for the evening, first exhibiting some of his sleight of hand tricks and ending with Punch and Judy, much to the children's delight.

They were afterward treated to ice cream and cake, but not the kind the little girl spoke of when asked after the entertainment, by a gentleman, what she had? her reply was a great big brick of Hokey Pokey.

The evening was enjoyed very much by all and the ladies of the Society thank those who so kindly helped, with their music, to make the evening pleasant.

Scarcely an entertainment is given without some kind friend lending a helping hand. February 4th, at half past seven o'clock will be the next entertainment, the members of the Society are glad to have any one come and see the children, but it is impossible to send invitations to all.

We have now fifty Contributing Members on our list, one dollar a year is scarcely missed and yet it does so much good in many ways to those poor children. Will not more come and help us?

On Friday last six little ones called on the President asking when their turn would come?

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS of St. Stephen's Church gave a reception to those belonging to Miss Stoddard's Bible Class, Jan. 14th, the evening was very much enjoyed by all. Their next meetings will be Feb. 11th and 25th, in the Guild Room of Parish House.

THE FOLLOWING LETTER is from a missionary's wife, to whom a Box was lately sent:

Nebraska, Dec. 16th, 1890.

DEAR MISS LEWIS:

I write in great haste, to say that the box arrived this morning. I am already arrayed in my lovely warm shoes, Luke in the lovely cap, George in his shoes and arctics, (Luke cannot wear his shoes, but George will grow to them), Louise in her shoes (her old ones were utterly disreputable), and baby's elation at a suit with pants (I have thus far kept him in kilts for economy), is very great. Many thanks for the nice farina kettle; the porcelain will be so much easier to wash than the tin—the only kind kept here. I've always taken washing dishes philosophically until this Winter, because I'd do it mechanically, and have time to think of other things. But with my lame fingers, I find it hard.

I have not, of course, had time yet to try on all the flannels and stockings, but presume they are all right. Luke is greatly pleased with his new shirts and collars, George with his stocking suspenders, and I'm delighted with my pins and thread, and pretty white wrap, etc.

Many thanks for everything. What I cannot use I will send down to Kennedy, where I have promised them a box for Christmas.

Mr. Bates is away, but will be here over night the last of the week, and will be very glad of the trousers. The coat is much lighter than he has to wear in Winter, but will be all right for Spring, and the warm flannels will make his next trip much more comfortable. He had to wear two pairs of old ones the last time.

We trust you will all have a Merry Christmas and a Glad New Year at St. Stephen's. How lovely the church must be, with the new reredos. I have heard Mr. McConnell when he was in Middletown.

I had to pay $4.10 on the box. This road is a grasping monopoly, and is making profit out of the Indian trouble, if no one else is. The freight is so high from Omaha that I pay 5 cents more on every 15 cents worth of groceries. The fruit is very acceptable.

Sincerely yours,

SELECTIONS.

Do not keep the alabaster boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead. Fill their lives with sweetness. Speak approving, cheering words while their ears can hear them, and while their hearts can be thrilled and made happier by them; the kind things you mean to say when they are gone, say before they go. The flowers you mean to send for their coffins, send to brighten and sweeten their homes before they leave them. If my friends have alabaster boxes laid away, full of fragrant perfumes of sympathy and affection, which they intend to break over my dead body, I would rather they would bring them out in my weary and troubled hours, and open them, that I may be refreshed and cheered by them while I need them. I would rather have a plain coffin without a flower, a funeral without a eulogy, than a life without the sweetness of love and sympathy. Let us learn to anoint our friends beforehand for their burial. Post-mortem kindness does not cheer the burdened spirit. Flowers on the coffin cast no fragrance backward over the weary way.

The Hon. Henry Noel Shore, writing from China, says: "The ultimate success of Christianity in China is merely a question of time, and is perhaps nearer than many of us suppose. There are not wanting signs of a change being at hand, and in the opinion of many thoughtful and experienced men the next twenty years will be an eventful period showing great results."

The Rev. C. S. Cook, native Indian Presbyter, writing to Bishop Hare of the troubles among the Indians, says: "A curious and suggestive feature of this universal plundering and destruction is the evidently intentional sparing of the chapels and the adjacent mission houses; not one of them has been touched," thus showing that the wild Indian, even when bent on plunder, respects the work of the Church. Bishop Hare himself writes: "I have visited several Indian agencies, and have late news from all the Sioux Indian country, but I have yet to learn of a single case of insult, much less of violence, offered to any teacher or missionary in any of the fifty-odd stations scattered all over the disturbed districts in South Dakota. While white settlers have fled through fear of the wild Indians, it is a most noteworthy fact that white women in Indian camps have been pursuing their Christian work without molestation and without alarm."

Over thirty newspapers are now published in Oklahoma, which is only about fifteen months old.

Helena, Montana, has a population of 20,000, and her Protestant churches will not seat more than 1,200.

The Rev. Mr. Porter, a missionary in Brazil, says there is no college in that country in the American sense, and that thirteen teachers of the public schools in Pernambuco were recently dismissed "because they neither read nor write."

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week at 11 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 to 12 A. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

BACK NUMBERS OF THE PARISH NEWS are wanted for July and November, 1887, and for September and October, 1888. The Rector wants them to complete files for preservation.

THE CONTRIBUTIONS toward paying off the new Reredos, amount to about $2200. About $800 more is needed.

BY AN UNFORTUNATE ACCIDENT during the rain-storm a few weeks ago the drawer in which the Colored Stoles are kept was filled with water, and its contents so badly damaged as to necessitate new ones. Through Mr. Olmsted, of the Vestry, a number of individuals at once contributed upward of $100 to replace them.

THE OFFERTORY ON EASTER DAY, morning and afternoon, will be for the Endowment Fund.

THE EASTER SERVICES will be as follows:

Celebration of Holy Communion at 8 o'clock.

Morning prayer, Sermon and Holy Communion, 11 o'clock.

Evening prayer and Sermon, 4 o'clock.

The pew holders and regular congregation will be admitted through the north transept door. The front doors will be opened promptly at the time of service; after which all unoccupied seats will be filled at once.

AT ONE OR OTHER of the celebrations on Easter-day it is confidently expected that every communicant will be present. To absent himself on this day cannot be regarded otherwise than that he has fallen out of harmony with the movement of the Christian world. This, all sober-minded men will regard as a great misfortune. If he be wise he will at once ask himself whether the loss of relish which makes him indifferent to the feast be not due to his own spiritual ill-health? He may need food all the more because he has little or no appetite. It is an ancient and reasonable custom that on two days at least in the year, Christmas and Easter, the anniversaries of His birth and resurrection, all the members of the family should gather about His table. Let there be no vacant places.

THE BISHOP WILL CONFIRM at the morning service, Tuesday in Holy week, March 24.

All those who expect to be Confirmed will meet the Rector on Friday, March 20th, immediately after the 5 o'clock service, to sign the Parish Register, and make final arrangements. The Rector begs to repeat that it will give him sincere pleasure to meet half-way, or the whole way, for that matter, any one who is thinking of Confirmation.

He wishes also to point out that the question for every man and woman to ask is not "Why should I be confirmed?" but "What reasonable apology have I for not doing so?"

Seats will be provided for those candidates who have no regular places of sitting.

The ladies to be Confirmed, will come to the chancel bare-headed. The class will assemble at the chancel rail, and remain standing until the Rector gives them the signal to kneel. (The proper attitude for the congregation in the Confirmation office is to stand until the Bishop bids them to prayer.) There will be a celebration of the Holy Communion immediately after, at which all the newly Confirmed are expected to receive. (It is one of the "lesser morals" of the Church, that the consecrated Bread shall always be in an open, uugloved hand.)

Those to be Confirmed will, by some means, find a little time in the morning before coming to Church, to be alone with God, and ask His blessings upon what they are about to do.

ONE OF THE GARMENT COMMITTEE will be at the Parish School Building every Monday morning from 10.30 until 12.30 P. M., to receive all articles sent, or they may be left at any time at 9 South 10th Street, if marked for the Garment Committee.

THE COMMITTEE OF THE ALTAR SOCIETY having in charge the Lenten Sewing, wish to thank the congregation for their generosity, not only in making up the garments, but also for their gifts of money and materials. As there are many applications from hospitals, missions, etc., for donations, the Committee will be able to make use of any further gifts of money and materials. A detailed account of the work will be given in the Annual Report of the Altar Society's work.

THE FUTURE OF ST. STEPHEN'S.

IT IS NOW SEVENTY YEARS since St. Stephen's Parish was organized. It was then well on the outskirts of the city. Indeed, one powerful motive in starting the enterprise was that the people, who lived in the suburban region of Tenth and Eleventh streets, thought it was too far to go away into town to church at St. Peter's or Christ Church.

A generation later the church, without changing its location, found itself at the door of the most desirable residence part of the city. It occupied then the same relative position that Holy Trinity or St. James' now does. It was easy, convenient, and natural for people to go to it.

Another generation finds the church, again without changing its spot, "down town." In a word, during seventy years, the stream of population has moved up to, rested for a generation at, and then flowed away to the westward of St. Stephen's. The close of the present generation will find it as far removed from the residences of its present congregation as Christ Church now is. But it will also find it in the midst of a numerous population, a population of that kind which most needs the services of the Church. But they will be people who will not be able to support the services in a dignified and attractive manner.

The present congregation find at St. Stephen's a service which satisfies and gratifies them, and in which they delight. They also pay for it—in part. But they would not have it, except for the fact that their fathers and grandfathers, in their day, not only paid the expenses of their own generation, but also laid up in store for their children. Through their hands the church comes to us with its building free from debt, and with an available endowment of about $80,000, and with charitable trusts committed to the care of the corporation to the value of about $650,000. No part of these charitable funds is available for Parish expenses. The church is full, united, and may fairly be called prosperous. It is paying its way, offering a hospitable welcome to hundreds who worship with them, but do not identify themselves with its work. It is doing its share toward the charities of the city, the Diocese, and the Church at large.

But the time will come, certainly within the next generation, when the situation will be all changed. The present congregation will be gone. Another one, and one of another kind, will take their place. The success of St. Stephen's Church then, will depend upon the action of St. Stephen's people now. It may fairly be assumed that the present congregation will be as thoughtful, of those who come after, as were their fathers.

The Rector and Vestry have, after the most careful consideration, come to the conclusion that the time has now come to begin a Special Endowment Fund which will be adequate to guarantee for all time the effective work of the Parish. They therefore propose to begin with the Offertory on Easter Sunday for this purpose. Their plan, and the reasons therefore, will appear from the following scheme, which they have adopted:

WHEREAS, It is probable that in the course of years, by reason of changes of population, the congregation of St. Stephen's Church may become so far removed from the present location of said church, namely, in Tenth street above Chestnut street, in the City of Philadelphia, as to jeopardize its continued prosperity and proper maintenance, and

WHEREAS, It is the desire of the church corporation that the church shall always be maintained in its present location for the purpose of the worship of Almighty God according to the faith and discipline of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America, and

WHEREAS, The Rector, Church Wardens and Vestrymen, of St. Stephen's Church, in the City of Philadelphia, having in mind this purpose, and wishing and hereby intending to create a trust for the supply of an Endowment Fund to insure a permanent and sufficient revenue for the support of St. Stephen's Church, and its grounds and buildings in their present location, Do Declare that they will accept donations and bequests to form a permanent fund for the parish, to be called "The Endowment Fund," and sums for the Endowment of Pews in said church, and that the sums so received for said Endowment Fund, and for the Endowment of Pews, shall be held for the following uses and trusts, and upon the following conditions, and for no other purpose, and upon no other conditions, that is to say:

ARTICLE I.

1. All moneys received for the said Endowment Fund shall be invested by the Vestry in good investments, as soon as practicable, in the name of the corporation as "Trustees of the Endowment Fund of St. Stephen's Church," and the income therefrom shall be reinvested and not expended until the whole amount of the Endowment Fund shall reach the sum of fifty thousand dollars; after which, one-half of the net income may be expended, and the remainder, with all increment of the fund shall be reinvested until the Endowment Fund reaches the sum of one hundred thousand dollars, when the whole income may be expended, Provided, That not more than fifty per cent. of the fund shall be invested in other than securities allowed by law for the investment of trust funds, and that no part of the principal shall ever be expended, except for the purposes of investment.

2. The net income allowed to be expended as above, shall only be appropriated by the joint action of the Rector for the time being, and the majority of the Vestrymen present at any meeting of the Vestry. In case of a difference between the Rector and the Vestrymen as to such expenditure, the question shall be referred to the Ordinary, whose decision shall be final.

3. If, from any cause, it should be determined to remove the church from its present location, the Endowment Fund shall be held and used for, or in connection with, the new church, in the same manner as is hereinbefore prescribed.

ARTICLE II.

1. Any person who shall donate or bequeath to the corporation the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars, or upwards, for a "Fund for the Endowment of Pews in St. Stephen's Church," shall have the privilege, with the approval of the Vestry, of selecting any pew in the church not already chosen or owned by another, which pew shall thenceforward bear the name, and be a memorial of the donor or testator, or of such person as he or she shall, with the approval of the Vestry, designate.

2. Such pew may be occupied, rent free, during the lifetime of the donor, by the donor, or by such person as he or she may designate, subject to the approval of the Vestry; and after the death of the donor, such pew shall be occupied by such peron as may be designated by the Rector, with the approval of the Vestry.

3. The Fund for the Endowment of Pews shall be invested by the Vestry in the name of the corporation, as "Trustees of the Fund for the Endowment of Pews in St. Stephen's Church," and held by them as a perpetual fund, the income arising therefrom to be expended in the same manner, and for the same purpose, as pew rents are now applied.

4. If at any time, from any cause, the present church building shall be altered, destroyed, or removed, and another erected, the Vestry shall select a pew in the new church, to take the place and bear the name of the pew destroyed.

5. The Vestry may at any time change the amount required for the endowment of a pew, provided, that such change shall not effect any endowment theretofore made.

Now This Indenture Witnesseth, That the Rector, Church Wardens, and Vestrymen, of St. Stephen's Church, in the City of Philadelphia, do hereby for themselves and their successors covenant and agree to and with all persons who shall become subscribers or contributors to the Endowment Fund of St. Stephen's Church, and to the Fund for the Endowment of Pews in St. Stephen's Church, and their heirs, that the said corporation, and their successors, shall and will from henceforth perpetually maintain the said funds for the uses, intents and purposes, and upon the conditions hereinbeore set forth, and to and for no other use, intent or purpose whatsoever.

FORM OF BEQUEST.

FOR THE ENDOWMENT FUND.

I give and bequeath to the Rector, Church Wardens and Vestrymen of St. Stephen's Church, in the City of Philadelphia, Trustees of the Endowment Fund of St. Stephen's Church, the sum of dollars, for the purposes of said Endowment Fund.

FOR THE ENDOWMENT OF A PEW.

I give and bequeath to the Rector, Church Wardens and Vestrymen of St. Stephen's Church, in the City of Philadelphia, Trustees of the Fund for the Endowment of Pews in St. Stephen's Church the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars for the endowment of a pew to be called the pew.

SELECTIONS.

JUST NOW AN ATTACK OF CLERICALISM has befallen story-writers. In all their dreams a phantom parson, a goblin clergyman, haunts them. It is almost superfluous to add, since Mrs. Ward has muttered first the incantation, "with woven paces and with waving hands," that the parson is in most cases skeptical. We should be most happy to introduce to Messieurs and Mesdames, the novelists, in search of models, some real parsons whom we know. They are godly without priggishness, and orthodox without cant. Nothing disarms prejudice like intimate acquaintance. We admit that clergymen are not what they ought to be. This is privately known and lamented everywhere, but, after all, they are not, as a class, black as the novelists of to-day paint them. Use halftints in your painting; it is more artistic, at any rate.

HOW MANY OF OUR READERS will put into practice the following quaint but very practical advice of "Daniel Quorum?"

"We might do a great deal of good in the world if we didn't try to do so much. I've heard folks a singin' and a moanin' it, too.

"Were the whole realm of nature mine,
That were an offering far too small."

"An' because realm o' nature wasn't theirs, they didn't give anything at all."

Grave Questions!

Que sera, au point de vue religieux et partant au point de vue moral, la génération qui se prépare! Il faut bien se le demander, et les esprits sérieux ne se le demandent pas sans anxiété.

Une expérience toute nouvelle se fait à l'heure présente dans le monde chrétien; celle de l'éducation publique en dehors de l'influence religieuse.

Cela ne s'est jamais vu. Jusqu'à notre âge, les écoles avaient toujours un caractère chrétien. Les instituteurs étaient le plus souvent des ministres de l'église. On pouvait plus tard perdre la foi, en tout cas on avait été élevé dans son sein, au milieu de ses pratiques.

Aujourd'hui plus rien de tel. L'âme est systématiquement ignorée dans les écoles publiques. Non-seulement les élèves sont tenus dans l'ignorance des choses de l'ordre spirituel, mais voyant que ceux qui ont charge des programmes n'en tiennent nul compte, ils en concluent naturellement que les choses de cette sorte ont peu ou point d'importance.

Autrefois la religion se mêlait à tout, maintenant elle est exclue de tout, comme chose qui ne mérite pas qu'on s'en occupe ou qu'on s'en préoccupe. Quelles seront les conséquences d'une pareille façon de penser et de faire! Un avenir prochain pourrait bien nous l'apprendre, pour le malheur du pays et pour la confusion de ses éducateurs!

Other Sundays.—General Charities.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week at 11 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 to 12 A. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

FORMS OF BEQUEST.

FOR THE ENDOWMENT FUND.

I give and bequeath to the Rector, Church Wardens and Vestrymen of St. Stephen's Church, in the City of Philadelphia, Trustees of the Endowment Fund of St. Stephen's Church, the sum of dollars, for the purposes of said Endowment Fund.

FOR THE ENDOWMENT OF A PEW.

I give and bequeath to the Rector, Church Wardens and Vestrymen of St. Stephen's Church, in the City of Philadelphia, Trustees of the Fund for the Endowment of Pews in St. Stephen's Church the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars for the endowment of a pew to be called the pew.

THE EASTER FESTIVAL of the Sunday-schools will be held as usual on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, the first Sunday after Easter. The offerings of the school and of the congregation will be divided between the Home of the Merciful Saviour for Crippled Children, and St. Michael's Home for Colored Crippled Children.

THE COMMITTEE OF THE ALTAR SOCIETY having in charge the Lenten sewing will be very glad if the congregation will come to the Guild Hall, on Wednesday, April 8th, at half past eleven, to see the garments that have been made before they are sent to the hospitals, nurseries, etc.

ON EASTER MONDAY, Mr. Patten kindly remembered the teachers and children of the Parish Day School, giving them some presents making all very thankful and happy.

THE FAIR TO BE HELD by the Ladies' Aid Society of All Souls' Church, to raise funds for building a Parish House for the Deaf Mute Mission, will be open on the 6th of April, at All Souls' Church on Franklin street, between Green and Wallace streets. It is hoped that as many of the congregation as are able will go to the Fair, and aid by their purchases toward the accomplishment of this great need of the Deaf Mutes.

THE ENDOWMENT FUND of the Parish has now been begun. The Easter Offertory will make a substantial commencement. The project has received the unqualified approval of the people both within and without the parish.

The Rector now ventures to hope that people will, without unnecessary delay, provide in their wills for some sum to be left to this purpose. It may be just possible that one of the very first questions which will be asked one when he wakes up beyond, will be, "What disposition did you make of your property before you left?" If so, it would be satisfactory to be able to say that some of it at least is being used for religious and charitable purposes. No one is called upon to rob his own children. If your children need your estate, leave it to them by all means. May be you had better leave the bulk of it to them any way. But every will which begins, "In the name of God: Amen," should first of all provide that some hundreds or some thousands, as the case may be, should be set aside for use in the direct service of God and man. Your heirs will not begrudge it; and, in any case when your will comes to be opened you will be so situated that you will be far more closely concerned about the judgment of God than about the judgment of your heirs. To what more fitting purpose could you make such a bequest than to perpetuate the worship of God and the service of the poor in the Church, where yourself have said your prayers for so long?

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE will close for this season on the 20th of this month, resuming its duties early in the Autumn. In the meantime, all applications for assistance must be made to the Rev. Dr. McConnell or the Rev. Mr. Miller, when if possible, they will be attended to.

One of the Committee will be at the Parish School Building every Monday morning from 10 A. M. until 12 M., to receive all articles sent, or they may be left at any time at 9 South 10th Street, if marked for the Garment Committee.

THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY works all the year and is doing good in many ways. Children have been brought into the Sunday school, Parish School, mothers to the different meetings and some into the church.

All know how very much good can be done by fresh air, many of these children live five and six in one room, some can only be spared for a day at a time and it is these as far as possible the Society wish to aid. It is hoped that some of our kind friends that helped us last year will remember our little ones, so, if possible, we may have several trips to the Sea Shore again this summer.

New contributing members—Miss Lulu K. Holman, Miss Johns.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS called the "Whatsoever Circle" was organized April 5, 1890, with ten members, increasing almost every meeting and now numbering twenty-one working members and three honorary members.

The work for the year has been their motto, "whatever their hands have found to do they have done it." Visiting and working for the Home of the Merciful Saviour, the Colored Cripple Home, Hayes Mechanics' Home, Old Women's Free Shelter, Willing Day Nursery and Orphans' Home in Reading.

A little package was also sent in answer to an appeal from Mrs. Buford.

Miss Stoddard's Bible class was also entertained New Year's week.

It is proposed by the King's Daughters to have a Bazaar the 22d of April, in the Guild room of Parish House, from 4 o'clock in the afternoon and throughout the evening. The object is to make a little money so that they may be able to take fruit and flowers to the sick in the Homes and Hospitals during the summer months.

As most of the Circle are young girls from Sunday-school it is hoped that the congregation will encourage them by their presence. Most of the work of preparation is being done be the members of the Circle. There will also be a table of Japanese goods.

THE FOLLOWING LETTER, from a missionary on the frontier, is commended to somebody's careful reading. Is there not some man or woman who would derive more pleasure from expending three or four hundred dollars a year for three or four years than in any other way in which it is likely to be spent?

MARCH 24, 1891.

My Dear Dr. McConnell:

I have been a frontier missionary for twenty-one years of my life, prior to my appointment to the general work of this diocese, during which period I have been instrumental under the blessings of God in building thirteen churches and four mission houses, etc., but my stipend has always been small.

One of my sons who has been educated at Shattuck School, Faribault, is said to show an aptitude for surgery and medicine. I have no means to enable him to take the prescribed course in a good medical school, and thought it just possible you might know some one who had a presentation to such a school, including board and lodging, or of some one who might be interested enough to make an Easter offering of this nature.

I have been tempted to write you as I have, because I have always admired your frankness and kindness of manner whenever I have met you.

Trusting you will pardon me for thrusting my own private affairs before you, I remain,

Very sincerely and gratefully.

SELECTIONS.

Religion et Théatre.

Il est fâcheux, qu'à raison de l'état de santé du Rev. John E. Johnson, à qui est dû l'essai de services religieux dans les théâtres, ces services qui étaient devenus si populaires, demeurent maintenant suspendus. Leurs succès passés à Philadelphie, leurs succès présents partout où ils sont tentés et particulièrement à Boston, prouvent qu'il y a là pour l'église un moyen puissant et trop négligé d'accomplir sa mission d'évangéliser les masses. La montagne ne veut pas venir à elle, qu'elle aille à la montagne! Que n'avons-nous dans toutes les grandes villes des sociétiés religieuses organisées avec cet objet spécial en vue!

Le théâtre existe; il exerce une influence des plus considérables. Qu'au lieu de lancer contre lui d'impuissants anathèmes on s'emploie à le christianiser autant que possible, qu'on en fasse un instrument de propagande et de civilisation chrétienne; qu'on y tienne chaque dimanche des services adaptés à ces lieux et aux personnes qui ont coutume de les fréquenter, et l'on ne tardera pas à reconnaître qu'il y a là un moyen d'évangélisation éminemment populaire et particulièrement effectif.

Et si, comme tout l'annonce, le temps vient où les théâtres seront ouverts le dimanche même pour des représentations scéniques, pourquoi ne pas faire de nécessité vertu, aviser à ce que, ce jour-là du moins, les pièces représentées aient toutes un religieux caractère: comme "Polyeucte" de Corneille, "Athalie et Esther" de Racine, "Zaïre et Alzire" de Voltaire, etc.! Qui a jamais assisté à la représentation de quelqu'un de ces chefs-d'œuvre sans y éprouver des émotions douces et pures, sans en rapporter un plus grand amour pour la vertu et les choses de la religion!

N'est-ce pas par des représentations de cette sorte, qu'aux siècles de foi, se donnait l'enseignement chrétien et se developpait le sentiment religieux! N'est-ce pas l'Eglise elle-même qui alors favorisait, exécutait pour le plus grand bien des peuples, ce que depuis elle a réprouvé et anathématisé de façon trop absolute peut-être. Condamnér ce qui est mal, il le faut! mais que le bien réel ou possible ne soit point enveloppé dans cette condamnation!—L'Avenir.

SOME REASONS WHY I AM A CHURCHMAN

1. Because I am a Congregationalist. From the days of the Apostolic Council the congregations, or the "brethren," were represented in all Church works and Conferences. The laity should have a due place in Church affairs.

2. Because I am a Presbyterian. I find the order of Presbyters very clearly appointed and referred to, both in sacred record and in early subsequent Church history.

3. Because I am a Methodist. I believe in method in all things: "Let all things be done decently and in order."

4. Because I am a Catholic. Unless the Church be Catholic, what is it?

5. Because I am an Episcopalian. A church without an "Episcopos," or Bishop, was unknown in early days.

6. Because I have High views. I could not belong to a church which I did not think highly of.

7. Because I have Low notions. I am taught to think lowly of myself and the best I can of others.

8. Because I am a Protestant. Truth protests against error, whether from Rome or Geneva. The Church must be a continual "protest" against sin and evil, from whatever quarter it come and whatever guise it wear.

9. Because I am an Adventist. We believe in the first and second coming of the Saviour—though we avoid all pert theorizing about His future advent.

10. Because I am a Unitarian. I believe in "one God, maker of Heaven and Earth."

11. Because I am a Baptist. If a person prefers "immersion," the Church says he may have it.

12. Because I am an Evangelist. I love the "Gospel;" and more gospel is used in our own services than in any other.

13. Because arcs of truth make up the circle of truth.—Selected.

A CHURCH is not made "free" by a simple abandonment of the system of pew-renting or pew-ownership, and a resort to various criss-cross methods of raising a revenue. A church is made free by the spirit of its members and attendants. We can easily imagine a church advertising "free seats" that is really not so "free" to the public at large as one in which every seat is owned or rented. The spirit of hospitality, the welcome shown to strangers and occasional church-goers, does far more to determine the status of a church as "free" or as a private corporation than any specific tenure of seats. We all of us have friends in whose houses and gardens we are more "free" than in the public park, with its sign-boards and cautions not to pick the flowers or walk on the grass.

THE ANNUAL DIOCESAN CONVENTION meets this year at St. Luke's Church on Tuesday, May 12th. There does not seem likely to be any action of special importance brought before it. Last year the question of PROPORTIONATE REPRESENTATION was discussed at length. That is to say, it was proposed that the parishes should hereafter be entitled to send lay delegates to the Convention in proportion to the number of their communicants, instead of, as now, all sending the same number, regardless of whether the parish is large or small. It would seem, to the unsophisticated, that the change proposed was the most natural and equitable thing in the world. It would seem monstrous that a parish the size of St. Chrysostom's, for example, should have as much voice and power in making the laws and fixing the policy of the Diocese as Holy Trinity or St. Mark's! One would think so. Nevertheless, the proposal to correct this evil was defeated in Convention. Two forces operating against it were, when joined together, too strong to be overcome. First, was the unreasoning conservatism which detests change, even from worse to better things. "We have got along this way for a century; our fathers thought this way the best; are we wiser than they?" Second, was the accidental coalition with this force of one of the pestilent "parties" in the church. It was feared by some that if a proportionate system of representation should be adopted in this and other Dioceses, it would have the effect to introduce the same system of representation into the General Convention, and if that should be done their party advantage then would be imperilled. So they were ready to postpone the good of the Church in Pennsylvania to the good of their party in the United States. It is not likely that the proposition will be made soon again. It would not be worth while to do so until the second of these classes comes to a better mind, and holds the Church to be more than any party in the Church. This, we believe they will ultimately do, for we believe they are, at heart, honest men and good churchmen.

Expenses for the year,	297	72
Leaving a balance,	$92	70

One hundred and twenty-five articles of warm clothing have also been given out by the different members of the Society during the year, and about 600 children have been entertained or taken on excursions. Most all other societies close during the Summer months, but the Children's Friend Society do the most of their work at this season, and the children are already looking forward to the outdoor excursions, and it is hoped that the kind friends who helped us last year, will not forget the little ones.

With the money now on hand, the Society will only be able to take short and not very frequent trips near the city, and the little ones did enjoy so much their trips to Atlantic City, last year.

Thirty articles of clothing from Altar Society.

THE PARISH HOUSE COMMITTEE thankfully acknowledge the receipt of various articles given by the congregation in response to the appeal of the Rector, in aid of the Fair held by the Deaf Mutes for their Parish Building.

THE Bazaar held in Guild Room of Parish House, April 23d, by the King's Daughters, of St. Stephen's Church, realized $32.57.

The members of the Circle thank those who so kindly helped them, and hope to brighten the lives of many sick with flowers and fruit during the Summer months.

SELECTIONS.

"WHAT is an agnostic?" asked Rollo.

"An agnostic," replied his Uncle George, "is a man who loudly declares that he knows nothing, and gets mad and abuses you if you believe him. He says he doesn't know anything, but he really believes he knows everything."

WHEN the Rev. James Calvert was giving in the briefest terms a proof of the success of missions he said: "When I arrived in Fiji my first duty was to bury the hands, arms, feet and heads of eighteen victims whose bodies had been roasted and eaten in a cannibal feast. I lived to see those very cannibals who had taken part in that inhuman feast, gathered about the Lord's table."

COMMON SENSE IN THE SICK ROOM.

1. Do not ask the name of the doctor, and then tell the sick person all the bad things you may have heard about him. It is not particularly encouraging to be told over and over again that your favorite physician is not a good one. It is not fair to run down any doctor but your own.

2. Do not stay in the sick room more than a few minutes. You tire the sick person and you are not wanted.

3. In a case of extreme illness, unless you are very intimate with the family, do not insist upon seeing a member of the family when you go to inquire about the sick person. Nine times out of ten the servant can tell you all that is necessary, and having left your name, the family will be gratified twice—once that you came, and again that you did not come in.

4. Do not tell the sick person of about twenty-five people you know of who died with exactly the same trouble that he has. It is not comforting.

5. Talk about something but doctors, diseases and the effects of medicine.

6. Let the clergymen know of any case of sickness, and do not think that he has any wonderful way of finding it out unless he is told.

7. Doctors and clergymen are very much alike in one respect—when they are wanted they should be sent for.

8. We never knew of a sick person who was hurt by seeing his clergyman. If the sick person can see one or two doctors, and five or six nurses and unnumbered friends, you may take it for granted that a few minutes conversation with his pastor will not hurt him.

BEFORE A JOURNEY.

O Almighty God, remember me in thy mercy, and keep me in this journey from all dangers, and from all accidents, and bring me home again in peace and safety: Through JESUS CHRIST OUR LORD. AMEN.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week at 11 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 to 12 A. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

FORMS OF BEQUEST.

FOR THE ENDOWMENT FUND.

I give and bequeath to the Rector, Church Wardens and Vestrymen of St. Stephen's Church, in the City of Philadelphia, Trustees of the Endowment Fund of St. Stephen's Church, the sum of dollars, for the purposes of said Endowment Fund.

FOR THE ENDOWMENT OF A PEW.

I give and bequeath to the Rector, Church Wardens and Vestrymen of St. Stephen's Church, in the City of Philadelphia, Trustees of the Fund for the Endowment of Pews in St. Stephen's Church the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars for the endowment of a pew to be called the pew.

THE RECTOR IS TO PREACH the Baccalaureate sermon at the graduating exercises of the Seabury Divinity School, Fairbault, Minn., on Wednesday evening, June 3d, and expects to spend Sunday, June 7th, at Duluth, returning Saturday, the 13th.

THE ATTENTION OF THE PARISH is called to the reports, in this number, of two of our efficient Societies, the Altar Society and the Children's Friend Society. The people in the Church reap the fruits of the former, and those without those of the latter. Every one loves a smooth, decorous, and unembarrassed service in the Church. But few realize how much previous care and watchfulness such a service demands. Like a well ordered household, things move so smoothly that no one notices anything. In this case the credit is due to the Altar Society who so devoutly adorn the sanctuary and provide the things needful so that the service moves of itself. Nor is their work confined to our own dear Church, but the "beauty of holiness" is made manifest in poor churches and mission chapels all over the land by their skilled and willing hands.

The Children's Friend Society takes poor children away from the city for a day's outing as often as it can during the Summer. Details of the Society go with the children, and bring them home again with their hands filled with flowers and their hearts with delight. People seldom realize that for thousands of poor children Fairmount is as inaccessible as the Yosemite. The reason is simple; it is too far for them to walk, and they have no money to pay their car fare. For an ordinary mechanic to take his wife and family to the "Zoo" requires of him to lose that day's wages, and to spend in car fare and admission the whole of what he earned the day before. And even then they must take their luncheon with them, for if he buys it, that will take still a third day's wages. For all the good the Park is to tens of thousands it might as well be in Alaska. When you come from a drive some day please send to Mrs. Vanderslice at least as much as you toss to the hostler for spunging your horses mouths, and that will take to the Park five children who have not seen it since last year.

THE ELECTION OF DR. BROOKS to the Bishopric of Massachusetts has caused much stir both within and without the Church, and the Rector has often been asked what he thought about it. He thinks something like this:

There is a wise provision which has been in force since the organization of our Church in the United States, that when a bishop is chosen by any diocese he shall not be confirmed until he shall have received the endorsement of a majority of the other dioceses and the other bishops. This is as it should be, for when he is consecrated he becomes not only the bishop of the diocese which elected him, but also a member of the House of Bishops which is a part of the legislature for all the dioceses.

It would be but right then, in case a diocese choose a conspicuously unfit man, for the others to refuse their consent and thus protect themselves from an injury, and at the same time save the foolish diocese from itself. But to justify such a refusal it is clear that there must needs be such a plain, palpable, gross unfitness in the bishop-elect that the judgment of the whole Church refusing would be clear as against the diocese electing.

Now in this case the far too infrequent event happens of a really great man being chosen—probably the greatest preacher in the world, and one of the most splendid men in America. Why should there be any fear of his failing of confirmation? Well, in the first place, there is no such danger. It is as probable as anything can be that five-sixths of the dioceses will ratify his election. But why should any reject him? It is difficult to get at the true reason. The opposition has been fomented secretly, and in large part by means which gentlemen do not usually employ. The objections which have been intimated rather than openly alleged have been two: first, that he is not a "loyal Churchman," and second, that he is "tainted with Unitarianism." The first of these is based upon two facts, first that he has openly declared his disbelief in "the divine origin of the Episcopacy;" and second that he has publicly joined in acts of worship with non-Episcopal ministers in non-Episcopal Churches. As objections these would seem ludicrously insufficient. It is probable two-thirds of the Bishops of the Anglican communion believed about the Episcopate as he does,—until they became bishops themselves, and that one-half of them, at any rate, continue to believe so. Indeed the opposite theory is one which had but a slender following until very recent times. But it is now held strenuously by some—frequently by those bishops in whom one would be least likely to suspect a divine office—and is often spoken of as the theory officially announced by the Church. It is not so; and there can be no warrant for the attempt to make it a condition of ratification.

In officiating in a non-Episcopal Church, Dr. Brooks was also clearly within his rights. Whether he did wisely or not is an altogether different question. That is very doubtful. It does not appear that anything is gained in the interest of Church unity by such "Exchange of Courtesies." The evils of division would be more quickly seen, and more quickly cured if every Church did as ours, that is maintain an entire separation until a plan of permanent union can be agreed upon. By the other method the evil is slurred over by a make-believe unity which really accomplishes nothing. But, be that as it may, it is idle to say that Dr. Brooks "encourages schism" by preaching in a Congegational meeting-house.

Bishop Wilberforce was once taken to task by some over-zealous Churchmen for encouraging Presbyterianism by preaching in a Presbyterian Church. His retort was, "I preached once in a cow house; would you regard that as encouraging vaccination?"

As to the second and graver charge of unsoundness in the faith it is hard to speak patiently. So long as an honest and intelligent man repeats constantly and publicly the Catholic Creeds, and says he believes them, it is to be supposed that he accepts them according to the plain meaning of the words. If any other set of men chose to put a peculiar interpretation upon the Creeds, and to insist that Dr. Brooks or any other man must say that he believes them in their sense, is for them themselves to become schismatics of the worst sort. Unfortunately there are a few in this Church, as in every other, of just that spirit, and there are a good many men who permit themselves to be guided by the dogmatic positiveness of these few, but in the main that is not the Church's temper.

We owe an apology to Dr. Brooks for speaking at all of his formal beliefs and actions; and would not have done so but for the fact that they have become in a sense public property.

REPORT OF ALTAR SOCIETY.

In presenting to the congregation the annual report, the Altar Society wish to thank the congregation for the prompt and generous response for funds to replace the Stoles ruined by an unforseen accident. Two white ones are made and the others will be commenced as soon as the work is started in the Fall. As the designs submitted for the new white Altar Cloth have not been what was considered appropriate the work on it has been delayed.

The Chancel Committee has performed the duties of caring for the Chancel and Vestments, and received donations of wheat and oats for Thanksgiving Day and flowers for Easter.

Work donated—A set of Altar linen to Ironwood, Michigan; Fair linen cloth to Valentine, Nebraska; two Credence to St. Simeon's, Philadelphia; a Surplice to Rev. M. Zara, Italian Mission; a Surplice to Raccoon Ford, Va.; a set of red embroidered Altar hangings for Chapel at Fort Riley; Eleven Purificators

Work ordered—set of red Altar hangings for Cape May Point; Altar Cloth for Virginia; materials and stamping for two green Stoles; a Surplice for Church of Crucifixion; a Surplice for Church at Ridley Park; a Surplice for St. Philip's, Philadelphia; a set of white embroidered book markers for Church at Ashland, Pa.; an embroidered white Stole for Church in Maryland.

Work for our own Parish—Donations on an embroidered Chalice Veil; embroidery and making of two Credence cloths.

Fifteen dollars were contributed by the members of the Altar Society for alleviating the sufferings of a child dying of consumption under the care of the House Mother of the Church Training and Deaconess House.

The few papers and periodicals sent for distribution were from the Missionary Box Committee to put in the boxes sent by them.

The Lenten Sewing Committee report that the work was done by over a hundred ladies of the Parish, and also by the members of the King's Daughters, and Girl's Friendly Society. Most grateful letters have been received for the garments from the hospitals, missions, etc.

Six articles of clothing from Garment Society.
New contributing member, Miss E. Airey.

The first excursion was to have been May 23d, but owing to bad weather the children were disappointed.

Thirty-five had been invited for the trip and told not to come if it rained.

But, to the surprise of the ladies, sixteen children were found waiting in the Guild room of Parish House promptly at one o'clock Saturday.

Several little girls had been met by one of the ladies in the morning, and asked if it rained only a tiny little bit wouldn't we go?

It certainly shows how eager they look forward to these outings. Will not more kind friends send their names as Contributing Members? One dollar a year is very little and yet helps a great deal in the work.

Those whose names we have already on our list will please send their dues before going out of town if they wish to continue.

If postals ares ent to all and again acknowledged it will amount to quite a little sum, and this money could be used to give more children a ride.

Any one wishing to send their names can either send to Parish House or to Mrs. E. S. Vanderslice, 127 S. Fifth street.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS will have their next meeting in the Guild room, June 10th, at half past seven o'clock. Their work for the month of May has been visiting and taking flowers, groceries and a little money to St. Christopher's Hospital, which had to close during the Summer months for want of funds.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week at 11 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 to 12 A. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

FORMS OF BEQUEST.

FOR THE ENDOWMENT FUND.

I give and bequeath to the Rector, Church Wardens and Vestrymen of St. Stephen's Church, in the City of Philadelphia, Trustees of the Endowment Fund of St. Stephen's Church, the sum of dollars, for the purposes of said Endowment Fund.

FOR THE ENDOWMENT OF A PEW.

I give and bequeath to the Rector, Church Wardens and Vestrymen of St. Stephen's Church, in the City of Philadelphia, Trustees of the Fund for the Endowment of Pews in St. Stephen's Church the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars for the endowment of a pew to be called the pew.

A WORD ABOUT GAMBLING.

Within the past two years, the late Archbishop of York—then Bishop of Peterborough—somewhat astonished the world, and greatly offended not a few members of the Church, by publishing what was considered to be a defence of betting and gambling. He regarded betting as, in itself, a matter of indifference. Like other amusements, it must cost something; and provided that its cost were not disproportioned to the means of the better, the bishop could see no harm in it. It was no duty, of course, to make a bet; but, on the other hand, the bishop insisted that, within reasonable limits, betting is no sin.

English feeling on this subject differs somewhat from the feeling which prevails among Americans. In England hardly anyone thinks of playing a rubber of whist without staking at least a few pence on the point or the rubber. In America hardly anyone thinks of betting on a social game of whist. The Englishman thinks his game would be devoid of interest without at least a small stake · the American thinks small stakes rather troublesome than interesting. To the Englishman no small part of the interest of his game lies in winning; to the American, unless he is a gambler, it lies chiefly in beating his opponent. It does not do to lay down stringent rules for other people on such subjects, and yet it is always right to see that one's own conduct is clearly right.

We doubt the wisdom of the bishop's dictum. If a game requires the artificial stimulus of a bet which appeals simply to the vulgar instinct of acquisition in its lowest form of covetousness, we think that such a game ought to be renounced. We do not say that a game at the Club for sixpenny or shilling points is a sin; but we think that gentlemen who can find no interest in whist without sixpenny or shilling stakes, would do well to consider whether the instinct enlisted by the shillings is not an instinct to be suppressed, rather than cultivated, even in amusements.

We do not hesitate to say that, in view of the fearful harm wrought by betting and gambling, and in view of the fact that these amusements have never wrought any compensating good, they are things to which no Christian minister ought to give any countenance. If Archbishop Magee were alive now, and if he could see the name of the heir-apparent to the throne of England dragged in the mire of a disgraceful gambling scandal, we think he would hesitate to republish his defence of an amusement which the common conscience of England now condemns more strongly than it ever did before.

It is no part of our duty to comment on that unfortunate affair, the result of which, thus far, is that it has irretrievably ruined one gallant soldier, that it has driven several other persons from society, that it has led two military officers of high rank to transgress the well-established ethics of their profession, and that it has badly besmirched the good name of the first gentleman of England.

The moral of this whole wretched business is that for one gentleman to win another gentleman's money, whether it be a sin or not, is not a gentlemanlike amusement, and that it may expose a person whom thousands believe to be innocent, to the base charge of a petty larceny from confidential friends. We have said that the common conscience of the English people is set against betting and gambling in all forms. We heartily wish that a public opinion could be roused against them strong enough to banish and drive them out of all decent society.

Miss Gleim who has charge of the Primary and Intermediate Department of the Wellesley School, 2005 Chestnut street, is well known to our people as a competent and pains-taking teacher.

Miss Boyer a transfèrè son ècole de Green Street au No. 1924 Chestnut Street. C'est la location qu'il fallait á une institution que chaque annèe voit croître en faveur et en importance, et dont le succés est aussi lègitime que flatteur.

Nous devons recommander aussi l'école de Miss Anable, au coin de "Broad and Pine Streets." On n'y cultive pas seulement d'une façon remarquable l'intelligence des jeunes élèves, on les y exerce aussi, nous le savons, á la pratique du bien.

The ladies of this Society wish to thank those of the congregation and the kind friends in other churches for helping them in their work. Fifty little ones were taken to the Centennial Grounds June 6th; all had a good time, and many more are waiting and inquiring when their turn will come. One very poor little girl called on one of the ladies the other day, and asked, could she have a ticket for excursion? When asked where she wanted to go, replied, any where's, only so she could get out of the heat.

The King's Daughters visited the Union Home for Old Ladies, Cor. Lancaster and Girard Avenues, June 27th, donated fruit and crackers, and a small mite in the money box.

Their next meeting will be July 15th, in Guild room of Parish House, at half past seven o'clock.

SELECTIONS.

The Rev. John P. Williamson states that out of 1,100 Presbyterian communicants among the Sioux Indians, he knows of none who were among the hostiles.

The Rev. Dr. R. S. Storrs has given in the Sunday-school Times the following summary of the work of missions in foreign lands:

It is something that American missions alone now occupy more than 4,000 in unevangelized lands, with 2,350 missionaries sent from this country, and more than 10,000 native helpers; that there are at these stations more than 2,700 churches, with nearly 237,000 communicants, of whom 26,000 were added last year; and that $4,000,000 are contributed annually in our country to carry on the work. It is something, certainly, that all Protestant missionary societies have now 46,000 missionaries and helpers in the field, ministering to nearly 700,000 communicants, and to more than 3,000,000 adherents to Christianity, and expending every year at least $12,000,000 in the distant and costly work.

When Newman Hall proposed to publish a very angry pamphlet against some one who had injured him, he read it to Thomas Binney, we believe it was, who said it was admirable, and advised him to publish it under the title of "Go to Hell," by the author of "Come to Jesus." He saw the point, and suppressed it.—Southern Churchman.

"I believe I'll sit down," said Stanton, "and give that man a piece of my mind."

"Do so," said Abraham Lincoln, "write him now, while you have it on your mind. Make it sharp, cut him all up."

Stanton did not need a second invitation, and it was a stiff letter which he read to the president.

"That's right," said Lincoln, "that's a good one."

"Who can I get to send it by?" mused the secretary.

"Send it!" replied Lincoln, "send it?" Why, don't send it at all. You have relieved your mind now, and that is all you want. Tear it up. You never want to send such letters, I never do."

If there is a disease in our modern theology and our modern philosophy of life more conspicuous than another, it is indifference to sin. We lull it with anodyne. We call it anything but sin. We form our schemes of social improvement and material progress without any conviction of the deep plague-spot of our nature. We hide it from ourselves until it breaks out in some scandalous form and startles us with its intensity. We will drill men into morality; we will repress crime by education; we will open our jails by philanthropic legislation; but the sin that dwelleth in us is too strong for human remedies, too rampant for the social reformer's pruning-hook. Far truer is the novelist's sentiment, when he puts into the mouth of one of his characters the awful, but grand words, "How gladly would I endure the torments of hell if thereby I might escape from my sin."—Dean of Peterborough.

THE Bishop of Gibraltar has explained the reasons which impel him to refuse a chaplaincy for Monte Carlo. "If I give my sanction," he says, "I shall be pronouncing Monte Carlo a safe and fit place of residence for our countrymen. The only persons for whose spiritual necessities I am in any way responsible are a handful of my countrymen—who need not be there."

Sans Peur.

Un officier, en face d'un mort imminente et terrible, avait montré un calme parfait. Sa femme émerveillèe lui dit: "Mais n'avez-vous donc ressenti intérieurement aucune crainte!" A cette question, le brave guerrier tire son épée et en appuie la pointe sur le cœur de sa femme. Celle-ci sourit! "Comment vousmême pouves-vous être sans peur alors qu'un simple mouvement de ma main pourrait être la mort pour vous." "Parce que, réponditelle, je sais que celui qui tient l'épée tient à ma vie autant et plus qu'à la sienne propre." "Il en est de même pour moi, reprit l'époux chrétien, je sais que celui qui tient les vents dans sa main et déchaine la tempête m'aime d'un armour sans mesure.

THE following from the Woonsocket, R. I., Evening Reporter, will be read with interest:

"Rev. Joseph L. Miller, of Philadelphia, a former rector of St. James' Church of this city, who will preach at that church to-morrow morning and evening, will be given a public reception Tuesday evening next at the parish house. All friends of the gentlemen, whether in the parish or out, are invited.

Following is a brief sketch of this gentleman's rectorship in Woonsocket, from the St. James' Record:

"Rev. Joseph Lyons Miller began his service as rector Jan. 5, 1874, preaching his first sermon from Ps. lxxi, 1. During the nine years of his rectorship ninety-seven persons were confirmed, the largest number in any one year being twenty-eight in 1876, in two classes. A new pulpit was put in the church shortly after his arrival. A set of by-laws for the corporation was drawn up under the lead of Dr. Ariel Ballou, in 1876, and adopted. In 1875 extensive repairs were carried on by the Woman's Aid Society, costing over $900. It was during his rectorship that what had for many years been known as the Ladies' sewing circle changed its name to the Woman's Aid Society. Mrs. Samuel Greene had been for many years its president. Mrs. B. P. Talbot held the same position for many years during her stay in Woonsocket. In 1865 and 1867, Mrs. Charles E. Aldrich was the president. In 1866 it was Miss Lucy W. Smith. In 1872–78, Mrs. Henry G. Ballou. In 1879 and 1880, Miss Mary Brownell. Since 1881, Mrs. A. N. Arnold has held the position most efficiently. During Mr. Miller's rectorship there was a large increase in the membership of the Sunday-school, and there was talk in the vestry of enlarging the chapel. In the good work Waldo V. Wales as superintendent was his valuable assistant. He served faithfully thirteen years and on his resignation in 1886 received a handsome present as a token of the regard and affection which the school felt for him. In 1877, the cross now standing on the tower was given to the church. In 1878, a number of persons gave over their ownership in pews to the corporation. It was in this year that the rector was called to the rectorship of Grace Church, New Bedford, but at the request of the vestry decided to remain. Finally he decided to resign the rectorship. He officiated for the last time Dec. 31, 1882. In the evening his text was "To every man, his work." In closing he said: "My labor is done, but yours will go on. God changes his workmen, but the work still continues. I bless the good men and women of this church and this town who have stood by me in the work of Christ. May the peace and blessing of God descend upon you and remain with you." Rev. Miller carried with him the love and devotion of his people which lasts vividly to this day."

OFFERTORIES IN AUGUST.

For General Charities.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week at 11 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 to 12 A. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

FORMS OF BEQUEST.

FOR THE ENDOWMENT FUND.

I give and bequeath to the Rector, Church Wardens and Vestrymen of St. Stephen's Church, in the City of Philadelphia, Trustees of the Endowment Fund of St. Stephen's Church, the sum of dollars, for the purposes of said Endowment Fund.

FOR THE ENDOWMENT OF A PEW.

I give and bequeath to the Rector, Church Wardens and Vestrymen of St. Stephen's Church, in the City of Philadelphia, Trustees of the Fund for the Endowment of Pews in St. Stephen's Church the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars for the endowment of a pew to be called the pew.

THE REV. DR. MCCONNELL left the city the middle of July for his summer vacation. During the season of rest he is called upon to preach in various places.

He officiates and preaches in the Chapel at Watch Hill, R. I., on the last Sunday in July, and the first Sunday in August; he will also preach the annual sermon before the American Institute of Philosophy, at Avon-by-the-Sea, the second Sunday in August.

FROM the church papers we learn that the Rev. Dr. Phillips Brooks, Bishop-elect of Massachusetts, will be consecrated in Trinity Church, Boston, Wednesday, October 14th. Consecrator, Bishop Williams of Connecticut. Presenters, Bishops Whipple and Clark. The preacher, Bishop Potter of New York. The attending presbyters will be the brothers of the Bishop-elect, the Rev. John Cotton Brooks and the Rev. Arthur Brooks.

IN RETURNING FROM ATLANTIC CITY, July 15th, the Rev. Mr. Miller met on the train a large number of children in charge of the ladies of the Children's Friend Society. They had been down to the seashore for a day's excursion, and in the car, which was reserved for them, they sat three on a seat talking over the events of the day. Most of the children were from the neighborhood of the Church, and the greater number from the Sunday and Day Schools of the Parish. It did one good to see the happy faces and to hear the child-like expressions of satisfaction and delight over the day's experiences. The children evidently had had a "a very good time." They had been in charge of faithful people and had received splendid treatment.

The excursion was regarded by all as a grand affair. This Society of our Parish is doing a noble work. The people of liberal means have not forgotten it, and from time to time show their interest in a practical way. There is, however, more need of money to carry on the work for the rest of the summer. Now and then a sick child is to be cared for, and the heat of the small street is fearful. What will you do? How much can you spare to help the little Society?

THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY has received a check for forty-two dollars from Mrs. DeGrasse Fox, through Miss Sanders, for its work this summer among the children. We wish to make our thankful acknowledgment of this to the children staying at Bar Harbor, as this contribution is part of the proceeds of the fair held by them at that place. Many thanks for the kindly thought and the generous gift. It will do good and also give encouragement to the active workers of the Society.

DONATIONS RECEIVED in July by the Children's Friend Society:

NEW CONTRIBUTING MEMBERS:

Mr. J. H. Evans.	Mrs. C. Becket.
Mrs. Fenton.	Mr. William Cochran.
Miss L. L. Williamson.	Miss Mable Langton.

Through the kindness of the members of the church and other friends, the Children's Friend Society was able, July 15th, to take 60 children and two mothers to Atlantic City.

The children were all ready long before it was time to start for the Reading Depot, where there was a special car waiting for them. The ride down was enjoyed by all, with the exception of a few, who being rather sleepy took a nap in the corner of the seats. On reaching Atlantic City they walked along the board walk to the new Sea View Excursion House, Mrs. Trenwith, the Proprietress, who has been a kind friend to the children, greeting all at the door.

Coats and wraps were put away and off to the beach all went. In less than five minutes off went shoes and stockings, and it was not very long before many of the little girls looked like washerwomen. Articles of clothing that could be dispensed with were being washed, and it was a very funny sight to see them. Curiosities of all sorts were gathered, such as crabs, jelly fish, and one poor hoptoad, which was found in a bucket of water, to be brought home to the city.

Mr. Mason, the owner of the bath houses, donated the use of towels and bath houses for the children's use. One o'clock dinner, and into the large dining room of the Excursion House all went, soup, meat and vegetables were enjoyed by all, and pudding for dessert.

Before leaving for home the children were treated to ice cream and cake. Another surprise was in store, Mrs. Trenwith had told Messrs. Cammerer & I. Groff, the owners of the Merry-Go-Round, of the children's coming, and these kind friends gave as their donation three very long rides, the children saying they never had such good ones. More kind gentlemen were about, and the children had hardly gotten off of the Merry-Go-Round, when Messrs. Mason & Becker, the owners of the Toboggan Slide, offered to give the children a ride, it was thought over for a few minutes, and the children being so anxious to go, all accepted the kindness of these gentlemen, all coming back delighted with their ride. Many of the children have expressed themselves as never having had such a good time, particularly the larger girls.

The ladies of the Society thank all who have so kindly helped them to brighten the lives of these poor children, who have need of a day's outing.

The King's Daughters of St. Stephen's Church had their Annual Excursiun July 25th. Their next meeting will be September 9th, in the Parish House, at 7½ o'clock.

SELECTIONS.

A Choir's Noble Resolve.

A correspondent gives his experience in a certain church as follows:

It was in the evening, and the choir rose to entertain the congregation before the sermon. The soprano started off with the very laudable, though rather startling announcement, "I will wash." Straightway the alto, not to be outdone, declared that she would wash. And the tenor, finding it to be the thing, warbled forth that he would wash. Then the deep-chested basso, as though calling up all his faculties for the plunge, bellowed forth the stern resolve that he also would wash. Next a short interlude on the organ, strongly suggestive of the escaping of steam or splash of waves, after which the choir individually and collectively asserted the firm, unshaken resolve that they would wash. At last they solved the problem by stating that they proceed to "wash their hands in innocency, so will the altar of the Lord be compassed."

The Church and Practical Work.

(From the New York Tribune, July 19th.)

One of the most interesting developments of present-day Christianity in the great cities is the successful establishment of such institutions as the Parish House of St. Bartholomew's Church, now in course of erection, a full description of which recently appeared in the Tribune. These great centres of philanthropic and religious activity emphasize in a striking way the importance which the modern Church is coming to attach to what may be called present salvation. And they are well worth considering in trying to form an estimate of the religious tendencies of the day. It is at first a little puzzling to notice that they have come into being and are attaining a vigorous growth at a time when the churches appear to be given over to speculative controversies. What is the explanation of this phenomenon? As we read church history we notice that its epochs of controversy have not been marked by any conspicuous activity in the lines of practical philanthrophy. Broadly speaking, the history of Christianity naturally divides itself into three great periods. First came the period when it created its theology, marked, as we know, by strenuous, and, for the most part, barren controversy, so far as man's present condition was concerned. All the efforts of the theologians were directed to the construction of a theological system that would help man to get to heaven.

Then came the period of the middle age, when, the theological superstructure being essentially complete, the Church, conscious of its power, sought to adjust itself to its environments and in many ways strove to ameliorate the temporal condition of man. Mediævalism has not always received the credit it deserves for its earnest, though often crude and unintelligent, efforts to promote the present salvation of men. When we remember the savagery with which it had to contend, and the unwieldly character of much of its machinery, the candid student of that little-understood period is impelled to praise it for having done so much, rather than to blame it for not having done more.

The third period was marked by the Reformation, which threw all the great questions that the Church thought were settled forever into the arena of passionate discussion, where they have remained ever since. The problem of present salvation was again thrust into the background, and speculative questions about church polity and heaven and hell almost exclusively occupied the attention of men. But there are not wanting signs that this period is coming to a close, not because Christian men have settled any of these questions, for they have not, but because their comparatively unimportant character is coming to be recognized. The discussion has burned itself out, and men in all the churches are beginning to ask themselves the only important question, "What shall we do to save humanity, in this world as well as the world to come?"

It is indeed true, as we have said, that the present time is one of noisy controvery; but, after all, only a comparatively few take part in that controversy. The great multitudes of Christians in all the churches are deeply and vitally interested in such beneficent movements as the Society of Christian Endeavor, the King's Daughters, and the Young Men's Christian Association; or, in connection with their pastors, they are reaching out to help and save the lost through such great organizations as St. George's Memorial House, or St. Bartholomew's Parish House in this city. The ideal which these philanthropic agencies hold before themselves is eminently practical. It is not primarly to glorify the Church, though incidently the Church will be glorified through their work, but to help and instruct boys and girls, and men and women, who in the bitter struggle of life have been worsted and are likely to fall by the way. They teach no system of theology, either complex or simple, and any sort of ecclesiasticism is conspicuous by its absence: But they do make much of goodness, purity, honesty, temperance, sobriety and chastity, and at the proper stage in their educational work they do point to the Church as the teacher of these virtues. In their training of the ignorant, in their encouragement of healthful and innocent recreations, in their inculcation of an honest and self-respecting manhood and womanhood, among the poor and neglected classes of the community, they are doing a work in which not only all good churchmen, but all good citizens should earnestly co-operate. The old age of useless controversy is passing away, and a new era of intelligent, unselfish effort to promote social and moral regeneration is dawning in all the churches.

Music in the Sanctuary.

BY HAYDEN MOZART BELLINI.

Music is an integral part of worship. The trumpets, the shawms, the cymbals and the harps of David's day have given place to the pipe organ, that grandest of all instuments; the antiphonal chanting of David's sacred poetry is reproduced as nearly as possible in the great English cathedrals. As a part of worship the music of the sanctuary should be regarded with a feeling of reverence as we regard the reading of the Bible or the prayers for help and guidance. The members of a choir should therefore feel that their singing is an act of worship. Self must be forgotten, lost in the general harmony. This shuts off all attempts at individual show. The soloist who is looking about to mark the effect produced by his or her performance is irreverent, and will inevitably produce a feeling of irreverence in the congregation. If the soloist can forget self and the congregation, and think only of giving a simple, pure, earnest rendering of the composition before him, the congregation will forget him and think only of the devotion expressed by the melody and the sacredness of the text—the highest compliment a congregation can pay. Many of the solo performances heard in churches are an abomination, as inartistic and incongruous, as grating upon refined feelings, as would be a scarlet bonnet at a funeral or the "Melancholy Dane" dressed in parti-colored garments, with cap and bells. During the offertory there is an opportunity for solo effect, but the words should be taken from Scripture and the music should be noble and uplifting. There are great occasions, such as Christmas and Easter, when the single voice may be used with real devotional effect in the music of Handel, of Bach or of other great composers. On Easter Sunday we almost expect to hear "I know that my Redeemer liveth;" certainly on Good Friday the contralto may sing "He was despised," or the soprano may render "There is a green hill far away," in order to deepen the religious associations of the day, provided the rendering be simple, earnest and unaffected. The hymns should be simple and the congregation should always take part in them. The modern "settings" of some of the old, familiar hymns should be banished forever from the sanctuary. That they could for a moment be tolerated is a blot on our Christian civilization. * * * * *

ON THE FIRST SUNDAY IN OCTOBER, at 9.45 A. M., the Sunday-school of the parish will begin its work for the coming year. There are about twenty-five classes, a Bible class and an infant class. Most of the teachers of the past year, it is believed, will be in their place at the opening of the school. Should there be any who cannot engage in teaching this season, they should let the Superintendent know of the fact in time to secure others for such classes as may be made vacant. We shall need more teachers this year. We make the appeal for earnest, faithful communicants of the parish to send their names to Rev. Mr. Miller, No. 9 S. 10th street, if they are able and willing to help to teach the children who come to the school. Most of our scholars are from the neighborhood of the church, and what religious instruction they obtain is from the Sunday-school of our parish.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS OF ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH, will have their next meeting Sept. 9th, in Parish House, at half-past seven o'clock.

During the month of August, the heat being so great the society has not had its regular meetings, but the members are very anxious to begin work again.

THE Parish Day School will begin its work for this coming year on Tuesday, Sept. 8th, in the Parish Building, back of the church.

From Mr. T. H., a pass for seventy-five children, and the ladies of the Society, to the Zoological Gardens, which will be used for their next trip.

August 8th was the next Excursion for the children. Long before one o'clock, the little ones were at the Parish House anxiously waiting to start for Rockland, where they were to go for an afternoon's outing.

Two car loads started, from 9th and Arch streets, promptly at half-past one o'clock.

On reaching the grounds, off went hats. Balls and bean bags were hunted up, games started, and there was a good time generally.

Sandwiches, cake, and ice cream were next in order, and all went home happy and said they had a good time.

The Society has fortunately been able to give to another party of children a trip to Atlantic City, on August 21st. Such excursions, giving them a whole day at the seashore, are of as much benefit as several days in the country would be to them, and we would have been delighted if our funds would have warranted some such expedition as this every week during the months of July and August.

There were eighty in the party, and the Pennsylvania Railroad furnished transportation at a much reduced rate, giving a special car attached to the 8.20 A. M. express train, and running our car direct to the Excursion House.

In selecting the children, care had been taken to get mostly those to whom the sight of the sea was a novelty, and those whose health would be most benefited by the bracing sea air, and they enjoyed every moment of their stay.

They were given a pleasant welcome at the Sea View Excursion House, where a regular dinner had been ordered for them and other refreshments were provided.

The proprietors of the toboggan slide and flying horses, volunteered to give them free rides by way of diversion.

But their great delight was in the ocean, and its unlimited facilities for getting themselves wet, the proprietor of the bath house kindly gave them use of bath houses free. The Society provided them with buckets and shovels, and the children brought back to the city with them a miscellaneous cargo wonderful to behold. Arriving home about half-past seven in the evening, tired but happy.

The season for excursions is not yet ended, but will continue until October, although the present state of our finances will not warrant another trip to the seashore. It has not been thought desirable to allow the children the usual dip in the old ocean, as in their ignorance of all danger, they would be entirely beyond control; as it is their recklessness when wading, requires the constant watchfulness of the ladies in charge, and their frantic efforts to get wet all over, so as to require putting them into bathing suits while their clothing is drying, show a perseverance worthy of a better cause.

THE BOYS' GUILD of St. Stephen's Church, will meet in Guild Room in Parish Building, on the first Friday of October, at 7.45 P. M.

SELECTIONS.

Music in the Sanctuary.

BY HAYDEN MOZART BELLINI.

The anthems, chants and Te Deums which are assigned to the choir should be thoroughly devotional, the music expressing the sentiment of the words. I have heard of a "Te Deum" ("horresco referens") which begins pianissimo with an accompaniment of soft arpeggios!—a Te Deum, the grandest, most glorious outburst of joy!

Much of the music of our American composers is namby-pamby, shilly-shally stuff, pilferings from some unsuccessful operas or thinly disguised excerpts from "Lohengrin" and "Tannhauser," "Martha" or "Faust." The singing of such pieces in our churches always make me think of Mephistopheles masquerading in a monk's garb, showing occasionally a horn or a cloven foot.

Would that we could go oftener to the English composers for our church music, for the English school stands pre-eminent in its glees, its madrigals, its part-songs and its sacred music. English glees are redolent of oak forests, hawthorn hedges, violets and columbines. They call to our imagination Chaucer's daisies and Wordsworth's daffodils; they bring to us the matin song of Shelley's skylark and the plaintive vesper melody of Keat's nightingale; they sing to us of placid streams and sloping lawns, of fields of scarlet poppies and of the simple thatched cottages; they make real to us the fairyland of Spencer and the forest of Arden, the England of "Twelfth Night" and "Midsummer Nights' Dream." Would that our high school would present "Comus" with Dr. Arne's music, or that our choral association would give us a concert of good old glees and madrigals and make us as merry and hilarious as Porpora's trilled fugue made the Viennese monarch.

English church music is fully as valuable as its glees. In the quaintness of Purcell, Jackson and Boyce, in the noble simplicity of Stainer, Garrett, Tours and Barnby, there is the unmistakable quality of religious fervor. The purity and devotion that make Bunyan, Baxter and Jeremy Taylor dear to all students of English religious literature, is to be found in the music of Purcell, Atwood and Gaul. I love to think of Shakespeare in that dear old church in Stratford-on-Avon, listening to the reverent performance of the quaint music of his day, the hymns, the canticles, and anthems. Within those hallowed walls were sung his baptismal hymn, his marriage anthem and his funeral chant. Possibly on his return from London he added his high tenor to the voices of his former friends and comrades. It is deemed now-a-days a proof of superior knowledge to smile a little when looking over the music of Boyce or Jackson, but I defy any one to smile at a reverent performance of their works. As well smile at the runs in Haendel's "But Who May Abide," or feel amused at Bach's "My Heart Ever Joyful." Their music is impressive from its sincerity, its earnestness, its fervor, its noble style, its whole-souled devotion. The modern English composers have sung this music in the cathedral choirs and have become imbued with its devotional spirit; they are familiar with the sublimity of Haendel, the calm trustfulness of Bach, and the spiritual tenderness of Mendelssohn; they unite breadth of idea with nobleness of expression and richness of harmony. To sing their music is to be uplifted, made more pure, more reverent.

LIVE not without a friend! The Alpine rock must own
Its mossy grace, or else be nothing but a stone.
Live not without a God! however low or high.
In every house should be a window to the sky.

Children's Summer Outing.

(From the PUBLIC LEDGER.)

MR. EDITOR:—"I hated to leave." These were the first words spoken to me by a bright, intelligent, obliging little fellow of about nine years of age in response to my inquiry, "Well, how did it go?" He had just returned from a 12 days' bright, jolly holiday at Point Pleasant and as he uttered "I hated to leave," a very regretful little boy he looked. He has a comfortable home, but the little fellow could never have had such a 12 days "jolly" enjoyment—that he so "hated to leave" but for the kindheartedness of others richer than his guardians.

What greater words of appreciation could be uttered than that—"I hated to leave? And if he so appreciated, how much would those less comfortably placed enjoy such a generously given holiday? The donors to the fund must surely and deservedly be enjoying their own change of scene.

And now there comes back to my memory, as by a flash, the poor children I have seen chiefly in Whitechapel, London. There are not only these, however. They are in all parts of London. Some are here in Philadelphia, though none approach those of London in misery, and I hear that they abound in New York. But the London children! See them as I have seen them—in frosty weather nearly naked—quite shoeless (from necessity, not choice), hungry and starved—looking eagerly, wistfully through the baker's windows, warming their frost-bitten feet on the pavement over his oven.

See them in the stifling alleys and courts in the hot Summer weather—no air—filth in abundance—their fathers and mothers often the vilest of the vile, their shelters the foulest of the foul.

Yet even in the midst of this awful misery brave Christian workers to whom I bow my head—brave Christian workers are fighting for them, living with them, dying for them. But the mass of misery is so great and the workers' funds so comparatively small that they can do so little apparently to alleviate even actual bodily wants. And in the matter which first led me to put my pen to paper—the Summer holiday—the most they can effect is one day's outing (probably to Epping Forest) for an infinitely small proportion of those who positively have never seen a green field.

Thanks from all of all shades of opinion to those who help little folks to a jolly Summer holiday. Do not let one of them miss it next year. * * * *

Yours respectfully,

A WORKING MAN.

"SOME say that the primitive tongue expressed but the simplest affections,
And insist that the words said or sung were nothing but mere interjections:
O! O! was the signal of pain, Ha! ha! was the symptom of laughter,
Pooh! pooh! was the sign of disdain, and Hello! came following after.
Who knows if what Adam might speak was mono or polysyllabic—
Was Gothic, or Gaelic, or Greek, Tartaric, Chinese or Arabic?
It may have been Sanscrit or Zend—it must have been something or other;
But thus far I'll stoutly contend it wasn't the tongue of his mother."—Copied from Learner and Teacher.

"WE do not, in reality, know more of a great man because we happen to know the petty circumstances which made up his daily existence, or because a mistaken admiration has handed down to posterity the promiscuous commonplace or his ordinary correspondence. We know a man truly when we know him at his greatest and his best; we realize his significance for ourselves and for the world when we see him in the noblest activity of his career; or, the loftiest summit and in the fullest glory of his life."—The Life and Work of St. Paul, by Farrar.

The Smile of Mephistopheles.

"ALL evil souls to live in hell"; thus ran
The stern decree. But when Mephisto fell,
For the arch-fiend, arch-punishment: his ban
Must be that he shall like to live in hell.

WHILE some Christians complain that they can find no opportunity to do good, others are embarrassed because of the multitude of inviting openings, only a few of which they can find time to enter. The difference between these two classes of Christians is not in their circumstances, but in their spiritual discernment. Some men are blind to their opportunities. They stand idle all the day, while the fields are white already to the harvest. They can see how others may be useful, but no work seems suited to their abilities. If the eyes of idle Christians could once be opened, they would be as much surprised as Elisha's servant was when he saw the mountains covered with the horses and chariots of God.—The Christian Advocate.

IT has been urged that we ought to love our neighbor upon earth as we shall love him in heaven; but duty and ability do not go hand in hand. When we meet in the better land, we will have more power to love, and both our neighbor and ourselves will have grown more lovely. We must do our best here, however, to reach the heavenly standard.—The Interior.

OFFERTORIES IN OCTOBER.

Domestic Missions.—Third Sunday of the month.
General Charities.—Other Sundays.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week at 11 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 to 12 A. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

FORMS OF BEQUEST.

FOR THE ENDOWMENT FUND.

I give and bequeath to the Rector, Church Wardens and Vestrymen of St. Stephen's Church, in the City of Philadelphia, Trustees of the Endowment Fund of St. Stephen's Church, the sum of dollars, for the purposes of said Endowment Fund.

FOR THE ENDOWMENT OF A PEW.

I give and bequeath to the Rector, Church Wardens and Vestrymen of St. Stephen's Church, in the City of Philadelphia, Trustees of the Fund for the Endowment of Pews in St. Stephen's Church the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars for the endowment of a pew to be called the pew.

THE RECTOR WOULD like to meet every woman of the congregation who can see her way to do at least one hour a week of church or charitable work during the coming Winter, at the Guild Hall on Thursday, October 22d, at half past eleven o'clock.

THE Sunday-school will be reopened, after the Summer vacation, on the first Sunday of this month. The session is held in the morning, beginning at 9.45 o'clock. The teachers of the past year, it is hoped, will be in their places in the school promptly, unless for good reasons prevented. A few vacancies have occurred. Some of the communicants have already signified their readiness to aid in the school as teachers. There is more room for other workers. Let the Rector know if you can take charge of a class for the Winter. We want, of course, faithful, regular and punctual teachers.

A NEW VOLUME OF SERMONS by the Rector has been published under the title of "Sons of God," and may be had at the book stores, or through the sexton.

THE REV. DR. NICHOLSON will be consecrated Bishop of Milwaukee at St. Mark's on Wednesday, October 28th.

THE REV. DR. BROOKS will be consecrated Bishop of Massachusetts at Trinity church, Boston, on the 14th of October.

The tempest in a teapot which arose about the confirmation of Dr. Brook's election has subsided. It is a great pity that it ever arose. There never was a moment when there was the smallest doubt of his confirmation. A very small but very noisy opposition gave many people outside the Church, and some within it, the impression that this Church does not know the right kind of a man for a bishop when it sees him. This may be true; sometimes one is tempted to think that it is true, but not this time. The two priests now waiting to be consecrated can scarcely comprehend one another. This is their misfortune. But the Church can comprehend them both. If they could be fused together and then equally divided they would make two men each of whom would be greater than either of them is now. But as this cannot be done, the next best thing is to set each of them in his own lot, and let the boundaries of the whole field include them both.

THE DAILY SERVICES will begin again at eleven o'clock on Monday, October 5th. We have been frequently asked why we keep up these services, seeing that "so few people attend." We reply that, in the first place, it is not true that few people attend. The attendance is very considerable. Of course it varies greatly. There have been two or three times in the last five years when nobody at all came. There have been times when a hundred people came at once simply to say their prayers. Even those who do not attend cannot be sorry to know that every day prayers are said for their health and prosperity, for God's blessing upon their lives and fortunes, whether they are present in person or not. The Daily Service is a rallying point for the whole parish. It is a time when it is known all around that the clergy will be at the church, and at least some of the parish will be there. It is, at its lowest, like the daily guard-mount of an encampment: something of a formality, maybe, but necessary to the esprit du corps.

But, in the second place, it is seriously hoped that the attendance will steadily increase. Of course it is not expected that any one will be present at every service. But any man who will select one or more days in the week, at such time as best suits his business, when he will go and kneel in God's House, will quickly find that he will become a better and happier man thereby. The truth is that the daily service in church is meant in some sense to make up a loss to men who do not have Family Prayers in their own houses. We do not hesitate to say that we should greatly prefer to know that they did this last. We will freely discharge, so far as we have the power, any man from the week-day services at Church if he will daily kneel with his own family at home and pray to God. This will be better for him and for his household. But no Christian man or woman can afford to live prayerless from Sunday to Sunday. His private devotions are not enough. They lack that element of common fellowship which is the essence of Christianity. Do one or the other. Either gather your family daily and say your prayers with them, or else join the larger family at Church.

"THE GARMENT COMMITTEE" has already resumed its duties and is now ready to receive and distribute. It is in good condition at present for the usual demands upon it, (better than it has ever been), and must be kept so if ever to be a useful charity; from 800 to 1000 garments should always be in the closets, as all sizes and all ages must be cared for. Our present year will close November 30, 1891. Our next year will begin December 1, 1891.

DONATIONS RECEIVED by the Children's Friend Seciety:

Sept. 8th, Miss Elizabeth W. Stevenson, ... $2 00

Donations have come for the little ones in many ways this year. From Mrs. Thomas Hockley, a pass for the Zoological Gardens, which was used September 4th by eighty children and the ladies of the Society.

The children enjoyed seeing the animals very much, but the seals and snakes seemed to be their admiration.

Four o'clock the children were taken to the restaurant, where their kind friends, Mr. and Mrs. Hardt, the proprietors of the restaurant, had, as their donation, sandwiches, ice cream and cake for all. On leaving the restaurant, a gentleman very kindly weighed each child, which pleased them very much.

All went home happy, with many thanks to the kind friends.

Four hundred children have enjoyed the outing given by the Children's Friend Society since the 1st of June. One of the most enjoyable trips of the season was taken September 19th. Mr. Slifer, who owns the coaches that run to Belmont Mansion and Dairy, very kindly offered, as his donation, the coaches at a very great reduction. At one o'clock fifty-eight children and the ladies were at the Parish House ready for their drive—which was out Spring Garden Street along the river drive to the Dairy. Then for a good time, bean bags, balls, and a good run were next in order, but it was not very long before it was found that many were very hungry, so lunch was ordered half an hour earlier. These poor children get so excited about going that they eat very little before leaving home. Six o'clock the coaches were ready, and the drive home was enjoyed very much by all.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS will have their next meeting October 21st, in Guild room of Parish House, at half past seven o'clock. The work for September has been miscellaneous groceries to a poor family, donation of bean bags to Children's Friend Society, wrapper to old gentleman at Hayes' Mechanics Home, and will entertain the old ladies at the Union Home, Lancaster and Girard Avenues, September 30th.

SELECTIONS.

INSTITUTIONAL Christianity was established by Christ and His apostles, and no one can safely ignore it. It is the need of our time in that advance toward Church Unity that we are about to make, and to make with so much energy and decision. It is necessary that we should know what Institutional Christianity really is, that we should be members of the visible Church and share in the sacrifices and triumphs of the kingdom of God. The Bible, from the very nature of the case, leads us through its forms into the presence-chamber of God, but our minds are filled at the same time with the historic forms of the ancient world. It is the office of the Church, in the use of its institutions, to bring us into communion with the Triune God in the forms of the modern world, and give us the assurance of His presence with the Church through its history, and with us in the hour and moment of our use of its institutions. The Church unites with the Bible in giving us the assurance of God's presence and authority throughout history, Christian as well as Hebrew, and of His great gracious help in the present. It gives us the blessed experience of the communion of saints. It opens the eyes to see that we are in the outer ranks of innumerable lines of the host of the living God, ever on the march through the life in this world into the gates of Paradise and onward on the highway of holiness to the throne of God and the Lamb which ever bounds the horizon of the beatific vision. The neglect of the Church as a means of grace retards the use of the Bible itself as a means of grace and dulls our sensitiveness to the presence of God.—Rev. C. A. Briggs, D. D.

IT IS TRUE, my son, that "heaven tempers the wind to the shorn lamb," when it is necessary. But there is about the shorn lamb, I have observed, a singular perversity that leads it to seek out the coldest and draftiest corner it can find on the north side of a shady street, and stand there and shiver. And when the lamb acts thus, it is my belief heaven appoints Boreas custodian of that particular corner, and lets him blow until the lamb is either blown away or frozen to death, or gets sense enough to amble around to the south side of the block.

Quite likely one of these days you will be shorn, less or more; I never yet knew a sheep that had entirely escaped the clippers—and when that evil day comes, don't you stand around on the cold corner waiting for a warm wave to come along; you hunt some locality where the wind is already tempered. Even heaven gets tired of tempering the wind for lambs that go off on Artic expeditions. There are localities where the wind is tempered to the Polar bear; and that land is no place for lambs, shorn or unshorn.

"But the best way is not to get shorn?" Well, ye-es, yes, yes; perhaps that would be the best way. Still, I don't see how you are going to leave your fleece at home every time you go out of the house.—Selected.

Bishop Hare writes with regard to new workers: "The expense which attends the sending of workers from the United States, especially married men, and the feeling of the Japanese that the people of Japan should be used to carry on the work, as well as other considerations, lead me to advise that no additions be made to our force from abroad except to meet special need of experts in particular lines."—Spirit of Mission.

THE ALASKA ESQUIMAUX.

The Rev. Dr. Sheldon Jackson, writing concerning the Esquimaux of Alaska, says: "The Alaska Esquimaux are a good-natured, docile, and accommodating race. Wherever I met them, and under whatever circumstances, they had a smile of welcome, and in many ways showed a friendly spirit. They have also manifested an unexpected interest in the establishment of schools among them, which promises well for the future.

"Like all other ignorant people, they are firm believers in witchcraft and spirits generally. They also believe in transmigration of souls—that spirits enter into animals and inanimate nature, into rocks, winds, and tides; that they are good or bad according as the business, the community, or the individual is successful or unsuccessful, and that these conditions can be changed by sorcery. By suitable incantations they firmly believe that they can control the wind and elements, that they can reward friends and punish enemies.

"The foundation of their whole religious system is this belief in spirits and the appeasing of evil spirits. This demon or evil-spirit worship colors their whole life and all its pursuits. Every particular animal hunted, every phenomenon of nature, every event of life, requires a religious observance of its own. It is a heavy and burdensome work that darkens their life—it leads to many deeds of unnatural cruelty.

"The prevailing disease among the Esquimaux are scrofula, diphtheria, pneumonia, and consumption, and the death rate is large. They have a superstitious fear with reference to a death in the house, so that when the sick are thought to be nearing death they are carried out of the house and placed in an outhouse. If they don't die as soon as they expect, they ask to be killed, which is usually done by the shaman stabbing them in the temple or breast. The aged and helpless are also sometimes killed at their own request. A prominent man in a tribe not long since tried to hire men to kill his aunt, who was insane and dependent on him. Failing to have her killed, he deliberately froze her to death. The cruelties of heathenism are almost beyond belief."

The Rev. Professor Linsay, the convener of the foreign missions committee of the Free Church of Scotland, who has recently visited India, says that there are 100 different Indias, and about 150 different languages (not dialects), some of them being more different from each other than Hebrew and English.

Thanksgiving Day—For Episcopal Hospital,

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week at 11 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 to 12 A. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

FORMS OF BEQUEST.

FOR THE ENDOWMENT FUND.

I give and bequeath to the Rector, Church Wardens and Vestrymen of St. Stephen's Church, in the City of Philadelphia, Trustees of the Endowment Fund of St. Stephen's Church, the sum of dollars, for the purposes of said Endowment Fund.

FOR THE ENDOWMENT OF A PEW.

I give and bequeath to the Rector, Church Wardens and Vestrymen of St. Stephen's Church, in the City of Philadelphia, Trustees of the Fund for the Endowment of Pews in St. Stephen's Church the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars for the endowment of a pew to be called the pew.

THE OFFERTORY THANKSGIVING DAY will be, as usual, for the Episcopal Hospital. The proclamation fixing the day has not yet been issued, but the usual day is the 3d Thursday in November.

THE ANNUAL SALE of articles which have been made during the year by "indigent gentlewomen," will be held at the Parish House, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, November 19, 20 and 21. The list of articles includes anything from an embroidered napkin to cans of preserved peaches. They are the work of poor ladies who are compelled to eke out a livelihood, and who are not strong enough to compete in the struggle for employment with younger and more vigorous women. They are the most helpless people on the face of the earth. They can make dainty and useful things, but they cannot find a market for them. The ladies of the House Committee gather their work, and annually expose it for sale, giving the makers every penny of the proceeds. They ask the people of the congregation to come and buy these things. They are worth buying, being in taste and quality far above that of corresponding articles to be bought in the shops.

THE WINTER WORK OF THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY will now commence. It was thought too cool for excursions during the month of October, and rather early for entertainments, but it is now time to be at work, and the ladies are planning a Thanksgiving treat for the little ones.

It is surprising how very much they enjoy these evenings, and talk about them during the Summer. It is all the pleasure many of them have.

So many kind friends have helped us during the Summer, that we hope others may send their names as contributing members to help with the Winter work.

One dollar a year is very little, and yet it does so much good for these poor children.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS will have their next meetings, Nov. 4th, and Nov. 18th, in Parish House, at half-past seven o'clock.

Their work for October has been for the Garment Committee, made jelly for the sick, and have work started for St. Christopher's Hospital.

THE CHURCH TRAINING AND DEACONESS HOUSE of the Diocese of Pennsylvania, 708 Spruce street, opened on Wednesday, October 7th, at 11 A. M., with an address by the Bishop. The scheme of studies for the term is as follows:

Monday, 10–11 A. M., Church History, Rev. R. S. Eastman; 11–12 A. M., Pastoral Theology, Rev. Dr. Rumney; P. M., Practical Training.

Tuesday, 11–12 A. M., The New Testament, Rev. Dr. Stone; 3–4 P. M., The Prayer Book, Rev. L. M. Robinson.

Wednesday, 10–11 A. M., Bible Study, Miss Mary Coles; 11–12 A. M., Theology, Rev. Wm. Ely; P. M., Practical Training.

Thursday, 10–11 A. M., Bible Study, Miss E. N. Biddle; 11–12 A. M., Hygiene and Home Sanitation, Dr. Egbert; 3–4.30 P. M., The Old Testament, Rev. L. W. Batten.

Friday, A. M., and P. M., Practical Training.

Saturday, 10–11 A. M., Missions.

The charge for students not living in the house and wishing to take the whole course is $25.00; for a single course, $5.00.

The practical training, in district visiting, Sunday-school and Bible class teaching, nursing, the care of children, the management of institutions, and preparation for work in mission fields—domestic and foreign, will be under the direction of women familiar with and engaged in such work. Those desiring further information are referred to the Corresponding Secretary, Miss Helen L. Parrish, 1135 Spruce street.

TEN YEARS.

It is ten years this month since the present Rector first looked the congregation of St. Stephen's in the face. Ten years is not much in the life of a parish; it is a good slice out of the life of a man. Its passage sets him to thinking about what he has made of it. Something, in this case, has been accomplished. In the first place, the new Rector was met and welcomed by a gracious kindness, which has been uniformly maintained. There have been absolutely none of those bickerings and misunderstandings which sometimes spoil the relation of pastor and people. In one solitary instance where there was an irreconcilable difference of policy between the Rector and an official member of the parish, the member withdrew with dignity and self-respect, and without personal ill-will on either side. To all outward appearance, and judged by the only tests which are applicable, the parish has been uniformly prosperous. In the ten years there have been

Baptized	500
Confirmed	385
Marriages	226
Burials	256
Receipts (for Parish purposes) in round numbers	$190 000
Receipts (for Charities and Missions) "	275 000
Total	$465 000

During the time the church has been tiled and newly upholstered. A Parish House has been built. A new Rectory has been built. The new Reredos has been erected about the new memorial gift of the Mosaic of the Last Supper. An Endowment Fund has been started, and in its favor several wills have been made, one of which will bring it, when the testators' lives end —(may they long be spared!)—a large sum.

A number of new pieces of church machinery have been added to those which the Rector found well organized and working when he came. Among the first of them was one from which he hoped much, in which he was generously backed by the gentlemen whose help he asked, and which failed to accomplish the purpose he had in view. That was the St. Stephen's Club. He is still convinced that there is a place for such an organization, projected on the same lines, and that it ought to be successful and useful, but he has learned that he does not possess the abilities which would make it so.

Other new instrumentalities have been successful, and are working, up to the full measure of their opportunity; the Altar Society, the Boys' Guild, the Children's Friend Society, the Girls' Friendly Society. All these things show that something has been done. But to say that the Rector is satisfied with the situation, or that his conscience is easy, would not be true. He is painfully alive to the fact, that the true test of the preacher is not whether people will come to hear him, but whether they will believe and do the things he preaches. Here he believes he has not succeeded. It is probably true that the number of Communicants is smaller, in proportion to the size of the congregation, here than in any other parish in the city. It is true that this in some measure is due to the fact that the Rector has felt the burden laid upon to speak much to that large class who are disturbed in faith, and who care little for the Church. Still, if he had spoken as he should, a large proportion even of them would have found their way into the steadiness and peace of the Church.

Nor do the gifts of the people to charities, while they are large, seem to him to be what they ought. It may be remembered by some that the Rector told the people, at the beginning, that he would refuse to serve them in place of a conscience in this matter; that he would lay before them, from time to time, such charitable and pious objects as had a right to their gifts, but that he would not urge, or scold, or entreat. He will not deal with adult Christian men and women as children. The attempt is both foolish and impossible. But in this particular he records a feeling of disappointment. While it is true that the aggregate contribution for charities is very large, and while it is true that the Rector's personal appeals to individuals for money, for church work, are invariably responded to, still, the amount of beneficent work sustained by the parish is too small for the size of the congregation. There are things which ought to be done for the community where the church is. We are at a standstill for lack of a place to work. The present place is crowded full. We do not want a larger church. The present congregation is larger than the clergy can care for. The Rector now has more than seven hundred door-bells on his list. It is very seldom that he can ring any one of them. But what is needed is a place in which the people can work. We should have at once an additional Parish House which, with the ground, would cost $100,000. The Rector has in mind twenty people who, together, might build it; he has in mind half a dozen, any one of whom might well build it as his or her monument. It would be a memorial for all generations; not barren like a tombstone, but active in good works for the poor while the builder is in Paradise. Until it is built St. Stephen's must bear the reproach of leaving undone the things which she ought to do for that portion of the city in which she has her home.

What do the next ten years contain for us? The indications are that the work to be done will increase, rather than decrease. There is a marked movement of population eastward, in the portion of the city south of Walnut street. People are now moving down Locust, Spruce and Pine, and into the cross streets. The new depot, at 12th and Market streets, will bring the church into easy access of a great population. When other elevated roads are built—as they must be—they will all make it easier for the same people to come to St. Stephen's who now do come from every quarter of the city. At the same time, the population immediately about the church will grow poorer. It will come to be confined to the inhabitants of the courts in the centre of the business blocks, and the tenements of upper stories. But they are the people who have a claim upon the church's good offices.

Will not every member of this parish join with the Rector in the prayer that we may have a right judgment in all things, that we may know what things we ought to do, and may have grace and strength to perform the same?

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE.

The ladies forming this Committee in overlooking the closets find that while they are unusually well off in certain articles of clothing, there are many garments actually needed for the relief of the poor that they are entirely out of. Such as unbleached night-gowns for women and children; infants' slips, either colored or white; plainly made dark calico dresses of all sizes, and dark flannel sacques for working women and the sick. All these articles can be procured at a trifling lost from the Bevevolent Society, by those who do not care to make them, and it would be only kind and judicious to have them in readiness before the cold season sets in. All contributions are received every Monday morning, at the Parish School Building, between 10.30 and 12.30 P. M., or they can be sent to No. 9 South 10th street, at any time if marked for the Garment Committee.

SELECTIONS.

AMONG the numerous things which Bishop Hare did during his late visit to Japan, are the following:

ORDINATIONS.

I ordained to the Diaconate on the First Sunday after Trinity, May 31st, 1891, in Trinity Church, Tokyo, the following members of the graduating class of the Divinity School, viz.: Yosimichi Suguira; Yasutavo Naide; Toshizumi Chikashige; Minagawa Sakichi; Hisakichi Yamabe. Of the excellent character and qualifications of these men I write elsewhere under the head of "The Divinity School."

CONFIRMATIONS.

Kyoto, five; Osaka, St. Timothy's, five; Osaka, Holy Comforter, three; Otzu, five; Imadzu, three; Nagahama, six; Hikkone, one; Nara, thirty-four; Wakayama, fourteen; Sakai, four; Fuchu, six; Satte, three; Kumagai, six; Mayebashi, two; Tokyo, Trinity Church, thirty-one; Tokyo, the Rev. Mr. Tai's church, three; Sakai, one; Nara, six; Miwa, nine; Tawaramoto, eight; Kutara, ten; Takada, twelve; Gojo, ten; Hashimoto, eleven; Osaka, St. John's, nine; Obama, nine; Tsuruga, eight; Kawagoye, six; Tokyo, Trinity Church, four; total, 234. I also confirmed for Bishop Bickersteth, July 5th, 1891, at St. Paul's Church, Tokyo, eight, and July 12th, on board her Majesty's ship "Severn," nine.

THE wife of a prominent Boston lawyer writes to the manager of one of the charitable societies of that city as follows: "My husband keeps the 'form of legacy' you print pasted in front of one of his will books, and, I think, never fails to call it to the attention of clients who desire to make any charitable bequests."

[Will the lawyers of this parish do as much for the Parish Endowment Fund of this Church?]

THE Church Advocate for September contains a list of our Colored clergy, canonically resident in the United States, showing twenty-eight Priests and thirty-three Deacons, and enumerates as the institutions devoted to the work among colored people St. Augustine's Collegiate Institute, Raleigh, N. C., the Bishop Payne Divinity-school, Petersburg, Va., St. Paul's Normal School, Lawrenceville, Va., Hoffman Hall, Nashville, Tenn., and King Hall, Washington, D. C.

Christmas Day, Aged and Infirm Clergy.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week at 11 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 to 12 A. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

THE SERVICES CHRISTMAS DAY will be at 8 o'clock, and 11 o'clock, with a celebration of the Holy Communion at each service.

THE CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL of the Sunday-schools will be held on Monday evening, December 28th, (Holy Innocents' Day), at 7.30 o'clock in the Sunday-school Room.

THE Rector would call particular attention to the fact that he would like to be notified in cases of sickness. It is no more reasonable to suppose him to hear of them than the doctor. Yet we always notify the doctor.

DONATIONS RECEIVED BY THE Children's Friend Society.

November 10th.—T. L. P., (Germantown) . . $ 1 00
" 22d.—From a Friend, ... 50
" 24th.—Mr. B. Frank Clapp, . . . 10 00
New contributing member, Mrs. J. G. Tomson.

A STEREOPTICON ENTERTAINMENT, was given to the children Tuesday evening, November 24th, in the Sunday-school room. Mr. Frank B. Clapp, who has been a kind friend to the children, contributed largely towards the expense of the entertainment.

The room was well filled by half-past seven o'clock, all waiting patiently to see what was coming. It was quite amusing to see how very patriotic they were, when such pictures as Independence Hall and George Washington were shown. It was said by a little girl the next day, that it was a very good picture of Washington. One might infer she was acquainted with him.

Mr. Wilbour has always been very pleasing in lecturing to the children, and the views and stories amused them much, particularly, "Mother Hubbard," Jack and Jill," the "Old Woman in the Shoe," and many others. The entertainment was talked over by the children for a week before hand, some of them had never seen anything like it before. One can scarcely realize how some of these poor children live, and how much these entertainments do for them. Do not forget them Christmas.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS hold their next meetings, December 2d, and December 16th, in Parish House half-past seven o'clock. For Thanksgiving, three large market baskets were well filled with groceries, chicken, meat, fruit and jelly, and were sent to three poor families who were very grateful and happy.

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE.

We expect in the next issue of the PARISH NEWS, January 1st, to make our 4th Annual Report. We are satisfied that our work is quietly and steadily increasing from year to year, and as we become better known the demands are more frequent. We now have two more ladies on the Committee, and for the future expect to have two on duty every Monday. The gentlemen both in and out of our Parish are becoming interested, and the clothing and money sent us by them is most valuable. Every case presented to us is thoroughly investigated, so that we feel sure we are giving conscientiously, and the people who receive the clothing are most grateful. Our Parish has the reputation of being kind and good to the class we are brought in contact with, and I think it deserves all the pleasant things that are said about it.

All contributions are received every Monday morning, at the Parish School Building, by the Committee in charge, between the hours of 10.30 and 12.30 P. M., or at any time they can be sent or left at No. 9 S. 10th street, if marked for the Garment Committee, and with name of sender.

SELECTIONS.

STRAINED RELATIONS AVOIDED.—Russian Officer (politely)—Pardon me, I know you are a stranger, but it will save me much trouble and questioning if you will kindly raise your hat as the others do. Here comes the Czar. American (defiantly)—I raise my hat to no potentate on earth. I am an American freeman, sir, born within the shadow of —— Russian Officer (struck with a bright idea)—The Czar is very rich. American (humbly raising his hat)—Why didn't you say so before?

THE Rev. Mr. Ousley, who was born a slave in the ownership of a brother of Jefferson Davis, was educated at Oberlin College and went out as a missionary to south-eastern Africa. He has lately translated the four Gospels and the Acts of the Apostles into the Sheetswa language, which is cognate to the Zulu, and is spoken by 250,000 people.

EVEN THIS WILL PASS AWAY.

Of all the proverbs quaint and sweet,
That burdened souls so often greet,
As some wise voice from ancient clay,
There sure is none in whose belief
The worn heart finds such sweet relief,
As "Even this will pass away."

When weary hands from early dawn
Till lengthening eve must labor on,
And know no surcease day by day,
How gladly comes that sweet refrain,
That echoes o'er and o'er again,
'Tis "Even this will pass away."

When burdens that are hard to bear
Would sink the soul 'neath black despair,
And whitening lips refuse to pray;
Faith's lovely face e'en then will glow,
And sweet her voice that whispers low,
But "Even this will pass away."

When earth to earth and dust to dust,
Is read above our heart's best trust,
And we in anguish turn away;
The bitter cup less bitter seems,
When through its dregs the bright truth gleams,
That "Even this will pass away."

Yes, even this. With hearts bowed down
We stand beside the new made mound,
And long to meet the coming day,
When weary feet have found a rest,
When hands are folded o'er the breast,
And all life's woes have passed away.

WHAT I needed, as I now look back to the state of my mind, was to be made to believe in truth telling, honesty, honor, unselfishness, care for the happiness of others, as well as love to God and trust in Christ as Christian things. These were of the earth, earthly. I longed for, and prayed for some sublime revolutionary change of heart; and what that was, as a fact in a child's experience, I had not the remotest idea. If I had been trained in the Episcopal Church, I should at that time have been confirmed, have entered upon a consciously religious life and grown up into Christian living of the Episcopal type. It was to me a sad misfortune that my Presbyterian culture had not, in addition to its high spiritual ideal of regenerate character, something equivalent to the Episcopal ideal of Christian growth. For the want of that I floundered about for a while in the ebb and flow of the revival, without one jot of good that I know from it. * * * The Episcopal Church realizes in the life more of the elements of such natural Christian than any other. Indeed my whole experience in life—and I may as well record it here—has impressed me, not with a sense of Episcopal polity as a whole, but of our urgent heed of those parts of it which contribute to Christian nurture.—Autobiographical Notes of the late Prof. Austin Phelps; Scribners' Sons, New York.

As yet the only church of which I know anything, in the way in which I know anything else, is a visible church, with a visible order, and visible sacraments, and a visible fellowship, and which thus witnesses to me the continued life and power of its invisible Lord and head. One day I shall doubtless know something else and more, of which this visible church is a part; but as yet the sphere of my activities must be found within the fellowship of that historic body of which thus far this morning I have been speaking * * * * But, it may be said, all this is very pretty, very clever, very adroit, indeed, but how unutterably small and pretty; how pitiful is this resting in the form, as if it mattered with what form or with what commission you or I wrought so long as we cling to the essence and the spirit of the Master's teachings; pray let us dismiss these dreary and unprofitable discussions about the visible in Christianity, and get down to the life and soul of it! Men and brethren, there never was a more solemn impertinence under the sun! Believe me, I am as much concerned as anybody to get down to the life and soul of Christianity, but as I never knew, nor you, of life and soul in all the history of this world of ours without a body, neither may we look for any other in the life of God's Church. But whether we do or not, what I resent most of all is that intolerable presumption and perverseness which in discussing the question of the body of Christ in the world persists in putting asunder what, not I nor anybody of conceited ecclesiastics, but Jesus Christ Himself hath joined together. It is not more certain that He has revealed a grace, than that He has ordained means of grace. The two are not enemies. They are rather parts of the whole, and the whole is of His ordering.

A NEWSBOY took the Sixth avenue elevated railroad cars, at Park Place, New York, at noon on Thanksgiving Day, and sliding into one of the cross seats fell asleep. At Grand street two young women got on and took seats opposite to the lad. His feet were bare, and his hat had fallen off. Presently the young girl leaned over and placed her muff under the little fellow's dirty cheek. An old gentleman in the next seat smiled at the act, and, without saying anything, held out a quarter with a nod towards the boy. The girl hesitated a moment, and then reached for it. The next man just as silently offered a dime, a woman across the aisle held out some pennies, and before she knew it, the girl with flaming cheeks had taken money from every passenger in that end of the car. She quietly slid the amount into the sleeping lad's pocket, removed her muff gently from under his head without rousing him, and got off at Twenty-third street, including all the passengers in a pretty little inclination of the head that seemed full of thanks and a common secret. This rebukes Ingersoll's sneer that if he had been God he would have made good things catching. They are catching, and God made them so.

"UNACCOUNTABLE, this!" said the Wax, as from the flame it dropped, melting upon the Paper beneath.

"Do not grieve," said the Paper; "I am sure it is all right."

"I was never in such agony!" exclaimed the Wax, still dropping.

"It is not without a good design, and will end well," replied the Paper.

The Wax was unable to reply at that moment, owing to a strong pressure; and when it again looked up it bore a beautiful impression, the counterpart of the seal which had been applied to it.

"Ah, I comprehend now!" said the Wax, no longer in suffering. "I was softened in order to receive this lovely durable impress. Yes; I see now it is all right, because it has given to me the beautiful likeness which I could not otherwise have obtained."

ONE Sunday morning the Superintendent happened to notice a little girl who was a stranger in the Sunday-school. Going up to her he wished her a good morning, and asked her name, when her companion who had brought her replied, "Her name is Mary McCarthy."

"I am glad to see you here, Mary," replied the Superintendent.

"She's a Catholic," said the little girl who had brought her, evidently wishing to set the Superintendent right.

"So am I," replied the Superintendent. Don't we believe in the Holy Catholic Church?"

"Oh, but she's not a Holy Catholic," said the child, "she's a Roman Catholic."

A THICK-HEADED squire, being worsted by Sydney Smith in an argument, took his revenge by exclaiming, "If I had a son who was an idiot, by jove, I'd make him a parson." "Very probably," replied Sydney, "but I see your father was of a different mind."

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week at 11 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 to 12 A. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR TO EVERYBODY. And in order that it may be a happy New Year, all will agree, it should be a good New Year. And in order to secure this there will be, at this time, as always at the opening of a year, many a vow registered. This is the season for "swearing off." Why is it that the phrase excites a smile? Surely there is nothing ludicrous in the fact of a man determining that he will be, in some small particular, a better man this year than he was last. One resolves at New Year that he will stop smoking, stop drinking too much, stop eating too much, stop swearing, stop lying, will keep his temper, will not run in debt, will stay home nights, will be "honest in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." There is nothing absurd in all or any of these, or of such like, yet people do smile at New Year resolutions. Why?

It is because there is likely to be in them such a thinly disguised attempt at self-deception. One has been fighting with one's self, off and on, for months, and has been worsted. Now he says, "I'll outflank myself; I'll cut round a corner and head myself off; I'll tie myself up with a vow, so that when the next temptation comes it will find me bound so that I will not be able to follow its beckoning finger. I am not strong enough to meet Satan and withstand him, and bid him get behind me; but I can drive a stake in the ground and tie myself to it so that when he comes (and I know he will come) he will not be able to drag me after him."

You poor, silly creature! You will drive the stake in the solid ground, will you? Oh, no; that is just what you do not do. You set the stake up and you bind yourself to it, but you cannot fasten it so that it will not fetch away. For a little while you are so proud of your new invention that you stand fast and hold up your vow, fancying all the while that it is holding you, but presently you get tired, or you forget, and the temptation carries you off, stake and all. And you knew perfectly well all the while that that would be the result. And everybody else knew it, and that's why they smiled at you; and the Devil knew it, and that's why he grinned.

How silly it all is! You feel yourself in your little boat, drifting slowly down in a current of evil which is too strong for you, and you throw out an anchor with a cable too short to reach bottom, or you find a friend who in his boat is drifting the same way, and you tie your boat to his! You "swear off" together!

Don't you see that if you want to stop the drift you must make fast to something solid?

Can any such thing be found?

There is only one abiding thing in the universe, and that is God. Nothing is stable except in Him. Here is the connection between Religion and right living. It is the attempt on the part of one who seeks righteousness to get outside of himself.

Do you want, therefore, to "swear off" from an evil habit? Then make your vow, and "take your Sacrament on't." Do you want to escape from the thrall of lust? Then fix and keep an hour of daily prayer. Do you want to break away from these petty infirmities of disposition and temper? Then begin family prayers. Do you want to break off drink? Then fold your hands when you set down at table and ask God's blessing on your meat and drink. Do you want your life to be clean and wholesome week-days? Then go to church and say your prayers on Sunday. Do you really wish for a clean body and a clean soul? Then feed on the body and blood of God.

Thus your New Year will be happy, for it will be good.

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE.

Reports to the Benevolent Society for the year ending November 30th, 1891, that it now numbers one hundred and sixty-one members, and out of that number one hundred and twenty have sent in contributions for the year. They have sent in so generously that we have never been so well supplied, and will be enabled to give more liberally than ever before (and sometimes we have been ashamed of our scanty gifts).

The balance of garments from 1890 was	437
And we have received during the year	840
Making a total of	1,277
Out of these we have given:
To individuals	345
To visiting nurses societies	20
To missionary box societies	72
To Polyclinic Hospital	24
To Parish School	18
To Children's Friend Society	7
To Sheltering Arms	32
To Colored School at New Berne.	34
Total	492

This leaves us with a balance of 785 garments, and yet there are many necessary articles for both men and women that we are entirely without. Our large balance is due in great measure to the mild weather; just so soon as the pinching cold comes on, there will be no end to the demands, and we do not deal with beggars, but a better class who will not make their necessities known until in actual suffering and distress.

We call this our fourth annual statement, but we have not been organized quite four years, and in that time we have received:

Garments received	2,690
" given away	1,905

We are most grateful to our members for their confidence and generosity, and sincerely hope during the present year that no one of our members will forget us.

All contributions are received every Monday morning at the Parish School Building by the Committee in charge, between the hours of 10.30 and 12.30 P. M., or at any time they can be sent or left at 9 S. 10th St., if marked for the Garment Committee, and with name of sender.

THANKS TO THE KIND FRIENDS who have remembered the little ones. We hope to give them their Christmas treat after New Year. There is always so much going on Christmas week, that it was thought best to wait until later. Saturday, December 13th, Mr. Kellar very kindly entertained eighty-six of our poor children at Egyptian Hall. Special seats were reserved for them, and at two o'clock the children all went in orderly, and anxious to see what was coming. Great was their delight when they saw the pretty flowers grow; the Ghost in the Cabinet pleased them much, and many curious questions were asked. Just before leaving Mrs. Kellar presented each child with an orange, which materialized out of an empty basket. All went home happy, thinking Mr. Kellar a wonderful man and a very kind one.

The children don't forget the pleasant times they have had other years, and many have been inquiring if we are not going to have something. One lovely little girl, of whom we have just heard, cried all Christmas Day because there was no Christmas at her house. The father was out of work, and there was not a cent in the house to buy anything for the children. This was a respectable American family. Many such cases come to the knowledge of the Society, but its present funds will not warrant much in the way of their relief, except to brighten the lives of the children, and add such little comforts as we are able.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS will hold their next meetings January 6th and January 20th, in Parish House, at half-past seven o'clock.

December 22d, Christmas packages were taken to St. Christopher's Children's Hospital, Lawrence and Huntingdon streets, by members of the Circle.

Christmas Eve four large baskets, with all sorts of good things and small gifts, were sent to very poor families, which would not have had any Christmas at all.

One small boy, on returning empty basket, said mamma was almost crazy when she saw the basket.

December 17th, through the kindness of Mr. Hall, the King's Daughters were invited in a body to an entertainment of Mrs. Jarley's Wax Works, which all enjoyed very much.

THE FOLLOWING pathetic letter from a Colored Missionary will speak for itself:

ST. JOSEPH, MO., Dec. 24, 1891.

DEAR MRS. ARRISON:—I am enclosing, through you, for the Committee, a letter, the presenting of which I must ask you to use your discretion.

I am writing this letter to you about another matter. I am sorry to bother you with my troubles, but after reading this you will learn my reason for writing it. Though we do not know each other, yet I am appealing to your sympathy as a mother in Christ.

I am a widower with five children. Having heard that men were wanted in the Mission Field in this country to labor for the Master among my race, in our dear Church, I made great sacrifice and came to this country four and one-half years ago, bringing with me strong recommendations and leaving my dear children, three boys and two girls, in Demerara, with their aunt, my deceased wife's sister, till I am able to send for them.

Unfortunately for us, she died, after a few days' illness, on the 5th of last July. I have no person to take care of the children where they are, so I shall have to send for them during next Spring.

Messrs. Armstrong & Co., ship agents in New York, with whom I have corresponded, and told my troubles, promised to have them brought over to New York for one hundred dollars ($100), which amount I must remit in advance. The train fares from New York to this part of the country, the General Agent told me, will cost $130 more. This mission, of which I have charge, is a new and struggling one. The people are very poor and are making sacrifices to defray the small current expenses. The white Episcopalians are not many, but their Guilds promised to give me about $30. I have no money, and no friend in this country to whom I can appeal. I only trust fully in the dear Master, believing that He would open the heart of some kind and benevolent Christian to help in bringing to me those dear children who are so far off.

Rev. T. G. Harper, who is now in England, wrote me a week ago, advising me to appeal to you. Hence I take the liberty to do so. He promised to write you on my behalf during Christmas tide. You may hear from him early next month.

I earnestly beg that you would take my case and appeal into consideration and that you and your friends who love the Master so well will give me all the aid you can to bring to me those dear children who are so far away from me, without proper care and oversight and causing me so much grief.

I believe that God is righteous and that He will not forget to repay tenfold those who may help me. May His Holy Spirit move your heart with tender compassion to do for me what lieth in your power.

Any suggestion you can make, or advice you can give me will be gratefully and thankfully received.

Wishing you and yours many blessings during this season,

I am, Yours truly and distressed,

B. I. JACK.

SELECTIONS.

I DESIRE TO SAY SOMETHING of the same sort about the different methods by which people propose to bring about a visible and real unity among Christians. The time, it seems to me, has gone by when anybody attaches much importance to a state of things which, within even our memory, loomed once into very great significance on the ecclesiastical horizon; whether we should or should not take part in meetings and actions of the American Bible Society: whether the rope of sand, feebler than the old confederation of the thirteen States, miscalled the Evangelical Alliance, should have our countenance and support. Questions like these, I think, have passed out of sight in the clear conviction that this momentary union, which covered a deep-seated and permanent separation, broke to the heart the promise which it made to some ears. And that, in itself, seems to me a matter of very real thankfulness. For the first step toward the attainment of a real thing is dissatisfaction with unreality. A man's pursuit of the great things of life does not begin until the days are over when a child felt itself busy, playing with a bubble or pursuing a butterfly. In reaching for the more substantial satisfaction of actual unity, some people are disposed to give a quasi recognition to non-Episcopal clergymen, not only by inviting them to preach in their churches, but by taking part with them in union meetings for various purposes of one kind and another; and I am bound, however I may differ from the methods pursued, to respect the underlying purpose which, however mistaken in the means, has undoubtedly a holy motive, which may not be despised. That is to say, I thoroughly respect and sympathize with the end that is proposed, while I differ entirely from the means that are applied; but again I say, it seems to me unjust, unwise, ungenerous, unsafe to attack bitterly the loyalty of these men to the Church.

I believe there are instances and occasions when it may be very wise for us to join with the ministers and the members of the religious denominations in condemnation of some great public evil, or in some pursuit of some great public good. I felt myself, if I may say so without egotism, honored to co-operate with the Ministerial Association of Albany, of which I am not a member and with which I never met before, in the onslaught which we made together and successfully against the evasion under the pretense of religion or philanthropy of the laws of the State of New York against gambling, which goes on continually in fairs and bazaars, held sometimes by religious bodies and sometimes by benevolent associations, "doing evil that good may come." And I have not hesitated to ask in one instance a clergyman to speak, not in his clerical character, but as the Secretary of the Prison Reform Association, in the Cathedral, about the work of that association. It seems to me that intelligent men can see and draw the line. And I cannot see how any advance is made towards even a kindlier and closer relation among Christians of various names by giving them access to the pulpit when it is perfectly understood that by the very fundamental charter of the Church in her prayer-book and constitution none of us can or would dare to ask those men to minister at the altar.

The subject is a very large one and reaches out into very many directions and has varied and interesting applications.

I am free to say to you, as your bishop, that when the opportunity offers for joint action with those who are not actually of us in public matters and moral issues I believe we ought to take advantage of it. And in dealing with an institution which is growing more and more into prominence in this country—The Young Men's Christian Association—I believe that instead of denouncing it, or falling in with its new plans of separate service of worship and preaching, if we can keep such hold upon the men who are controlling it as to influence them to confine it to its own legitimate lines of Christian beneficence and to prevent it from its evident tendency to intrude into the teaching functions of the Church, we shall do wisely and well. Meanwhile the value of this Church as a factor in the great problem of the restored unity of Christendom, with most respectful recognition of the work of other bodies, and with the entire abstainence from the bitterness of controversy against them or among ourselves, is, I believe, to stand fast in our old ways; to sit still and see the salvation of GOD; to illustrate by our lives, our earnestness, our intelligent reason, the principles we hold; and to attract the restless and uncertain movements of religious life towards that which, because it is ancient and of divine authority, can afford to possess itself in patience.

It is quite true that this Church, which we call the Episcopal Church, is relatively small, compared with what we call Roman Episcopalianism, or with non-Episcopal Protestantism. But it is also true, as against the numerical claim of Protestantism even in our century, that the enormous proportion of Christians in the world to-day are under episcopal government; and, as against all claims, it is true that a larger number of persons come to us from the various religious bodies, than to any other body of Christians in America.

And I believe it is a matter worth our while to realize, that the question of the importance of the institution called the Church does not turn upon a single text in the Bible, but on the drift of our Lord's teachings; that it does not depend upon theoretical interpretations of the Bible, but upon the practical working of Christianity in the world, as begun by those whom the Master made its founders after Him; and that for Churchmen the witness of the Prayer Book is binding upon us, in the Preface to the Ordinal, in the ordination office, in the Litany, in the Ember prayers, in the collect for St. Peter's Day, in the institution office; above all, in the Nicene definition of the Church as one in its unchangingness, Catholic in its lineal connection with the Church of the upper room and the mountain of the Ascension; with the Church to which men were added by Holy Baptism, in which St. Peter and St. John and St. Paul laid on hands for the giving of the Holy Ghost, in which men continued steadfastly in the doctrine as well as the "fellowship of the apostles, and in the breaking of the bread and in the prayers." Over against all theories of baptism as a sort of continued Jewish rite stands the fact of the commission to the disciples, which is the charter of Christ's continued presence and work in the world. Christian baptism with water, "In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," is the divinely appointed method of making disciples. And over against all imaginings that the Church is not made prominent in the New Testament Scriptuies, is the fact that our Lord preached, as did St. Philip after Him and all the rest, the kingdom of God as inseparable from the name of Jesus Christ, that His whole life was spent, not in winning multitudes, but in founding a ministry; and that the theory of a head without a body or of a body without a head, that is of Jesus Christ without the Church, or of the Church without Christ, is alike monstrous and impossible.—Bishop Doane, Convention Address.

OFFERTORIES IN FEBRUARY.

February 21st, For Diocesan Missions.
" 28th, For Sunday-school.
Other Sundays, For General Charities.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week at 11 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 to 12 A. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

LENT BEGINS THIS YEAR with Ash Wednesday, March 2d. The arrangement of the services will be the same as on previous years. Morning Prayer daily, at 11, and Evening Prayer, at 5. There will be a confirmation lecture or instruction at the Wednesday and Friday afternoon services. The offertory on Wednesday mornings and Friday evenings will be for the Missionary Box Committee. During Lent there will be a celebration of the Holy Communion every Sunday.

THE BISHOP HAS APPOINTED Tuesday morning in Holy Week, April 12, for Confirmation in this Parish. Confirmation means two things: First, that therein a man or woman reports him or herself to the society, called the Church, as one who seeks the same thing that it does, that is to say, righteousness, and wishes to identify himself with the society which God has established to this end.

Second, that therein the Bishop, as the representative of the whole Church, lays his hand upon the head of the candidate and implores the gift of God's Holy Spirit to confirm and keep him steadfast in his resolution toward goodness.

Those therefore who should be confirmed are simply those who wish for goodness. Not those who have attained to it, but those who wish for it.

The qualifications are: First, that one should believe the Apostles' Creed, i.e., that he should be a believer in Christianity; and, second, that he should be ready to make a deliberate promise that he "will, by the help of God, lead a sober, righteous and godly life."

All such persons should be confirmed. It is not a matter of choice, it is a matter of duty. It is a place where one has no more right to choose than he has a right to choose whether or not he will pay his taxes or do his duty. The obligation of it is settled in advance, and the only question such an one has the right to ask is, "Am I ready to do my duty in this way, or do I intend, without sufficient excuse, to refuse"?

The clergy of the parish will be ready to meet any one half way, or the whole way, or to go to them concerning this matter upon the slighest intimation. There will be instructions upon the nature and obligation of church membership, and upon those things which a Christian ought to know and do, on Wednesday and Friday afternoons at 5 o'clock. There will be also a Confirmation Class for younger people in the Guild Hall on Wednesday evenings during Lent at 7.45 o'clock.

THE ANNUAL OFFERING FOR DIOCESAN MISSIONS will be placed on the Altar on Sunday morning, February 21st. This annual offering has come to be a well known and well approved institution in St. Stephen's. For sake of those who have come to the parish within the year we will explain the way it is done.

On Sunday morning, February 14th, the Rector will preach about Diocesan Missions. During the week which follows every family will be waited upon by a committee of gentlemen among whom the parish has been districted for this purpose. The committee simply calls to receive offerings of those who give. They will make no argument or appeal of any kind. The Rector will do all that publicly. Of course the committee will be courteously received by all well-bred people, whether they can see their way to contribute or not. The amount expected, according to a tacit agreement which has been in force for a number of years, is equal to $5 from each person. This is what we have done heretofore, and nobody is any poorer, while many a poor missionary and struggling handful of people are much the better off.

Of course there are many in the parish who cannot afford to give so much as the sum mentioned above, but there are many others who can, and heretofore have, given far more than the amount so as to make up for their poorer neighbors. There is no fear but that they will do so again. The whole amount gathered by the collectors will be by them placed in the alms-basins, Sunday, February 21st.

MR. JOSEPH CLAYTON, sexton of this church, and Undertaker, has removed to No. 225 S. Eleventh street. We wish most heartily to commend him as one who thoroughly understands both his professions. It would scarcely be true to say that an undertaker who knows his business can draw the sting from death, but it is certainly true that one who does not understand it is sure to add an additional pang. We sincerely hope that no member of this Parish will have need of an undertaker for many a day, but against the coming of that day we venture to recommend this man, who knows how to do his office with decency and propriety.

THE BENEVOLENT SOCIETY has now on hand a large number of gingham aprons, flannel skirts, towels and dusters,—Such things as the poor women who cannot do fine sewing can make. They would like very much to sell them, because the closet is too full, and because the treasurer needs money to carry on the work.

For sale in the Guild room on Tuesday mornings from half-past ten until one o'clock, and on Wednesday mornings from half-past eleven until one o'clock.

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE.

For the benefit of those members who are making inquiry as to what we most stand in need of, we will suggest unbleached canton flannel drawers for children (varied in size) either with or without waists, children's night-gowns either white or unbleached, all sizes, and dark calico dresses with lining about the shoulders and sleeves. For women flannel petticoats and flannel sacques, dark calico skirts with sacques to match, and for men heavy winter trousers. We have many articles on hand, the accumulation of four years, that are very seldom called for and yet good enough in themselves, but of really substantial clothing that would be useful to the poor some garments we are entirely without, and in others no choice in size.

All contributions received every Monday morning at the Parish School Building by the committee in charge, between the hours of 10.30 and 12.30 P. M, or at any time they can be sent or left at 9 S. Tenth St., if marked for the Garment Committee and with name of sender.

Monday, February 1st.—Miss Cleeman, Mrs. Stratton.
" " 8th.—Miss Stoddard, Miss Bell.
" " 15th.—Mrs. Lammott, Mrs. Reinboth.
" " 22nd.—Mrs. Muirheid, Mrs. Arnold.
" " 29th.—Mrs. Lundy, Miss Cleeman.

THE MISSIONARY BOX COMMITTEE desires the congregation to know something of their work, and therefore reports that four boxes have been packed and sent, one to Colorado, one to Michigan, one to South Carolina, and one to Wyoming. The following extracts, from letters received, will give some idea of what has been done, and how the boxes have been welcomed.

GOLDEN, COL., Dec. 8, 1891.

MY DEAR MADAME:—Received your kind letter and check for eight dollars, and I am very grateful to your ladies for this help which will greatly encourge me in my work. I shall spend part on myself and part for my Sunday-school, and so your kindness will help to make a good many happy at Christmas. The presents we give to our children will be suitable books, and with what money we have, and your help, each child will receive some useful book.

My work is hard having two churches, and one forty miles from here, and both congregations small and poor, but we know our work can never be in vain and that it is true nothing is lost. It may be my work to sow, another's to reap, yet we are told both will rejoice together when we meet in Paradise.

You can never realize my feelings of thankfulness unless you could be situated exactly in my position. Our work in Colorado is slow, but we are making progress and I feel confident that by patience and hard work many of our poor parishes will in a few years be able to support their own Rector. Some of our parishes will ever be small and poor, and the Rector will always have to do missionary work.

Yours very gratefully,

W. G. COOTE.

THE RECTORY,
GOLDEN, COL., December 16, 1891.

MY DEAR MADAME:—The missionary box has arrived, and all its numerous contents are here in good order. Words can never convey my feelings when I saw things in the box, all useful and valuable. Only One above can understand how deep is my gratitude and how indebted I feel to you all. Never did I ever dream I should receive such a handsome present. My mind is at rest for a considerable time to come in reference to my external wants, and by the books can add to my knowledge. Well this great kindness bids me go forward in my work and encourages me in all I undertake to do for our Church. Those who never require help can never realize the joy of those who get the help such require.

Please convey to each lady who has been so liberal to me my sincere thanks, and my deepest gratitude, and God grant your Christmas may be as happy as mine, and that His smile broad and bright may ever rest upon you all.

Yours gratefully,

W. G. COOTE.

ST. THOMAS', RAWLINS, WYO., January 2, 1892.

MY DEAR ———:—I yesterday received a letter from Miss Emery, secretary to the Woman's Auxiliary, dated November 26th, telling me that you were purposing doing the very kind act of sending us a missionary box. I have already told you how much, how very much, my wife and I appreciate your goodness and kindness to us, and I wish you could realize what a real boon this help will be to us, living here is tremendously expensive and the knocking about one has to do is decidedly rough on clothes, and I have been wondering a little as to where I was going to get some more.

However, the blank form sent me by Miss Emery, and which I now return filled up, relieves me of all anxiety on that score. With reference to the other blank form, sent by Miss Emery, I have handed it to my wife who will write to you therewith and thereon. Again thanking you with all my heart and wishing you every blessing and happiness for the New Year.

Believe me, very faithfully yours, EDW. H. PARNELL.

ST. THOMAS' RECTORY, RAWLINS, WYO., Jan. 14, 1892.

MY DEAR ———:—My wife and I desire to thank you again and again for your kind letter. It does seem to us to be so generous of you all to think of the comfort of us so far off, and so entirely unknown to you. We are from the far East, and it does seem that by coming out to the wild West we are certainly able to realize to the fullest extent how that we are all one body in Christ Jesus, and that if one member suffers all the members suffer with it. I suppose you have heard from Mrs. Neilson how we are situated here on Uncle Sam's backbone, where the stormy winds do blow, blow, blow all the year round and all is sandy, bleak, bare and barren, but our little town is thriving, we have about 2000 inhabitants, mostly railway men and their families, while we are visited a great deal by sheep men and cattle men from the surrounding ranches. Since I have been here the congregations have considerably increased and we have commenced to restore the church, at present I am very busy organizing a men's club. Of course the work is very up hill, that is only to be expected, and sometimes, I am sorry to say, I get a little disheartened, but when such kindness as that of your committee comes and sheds a bright ray of sympathetic kindness across my path, then I get fresh courage and go upon my way rejoicing.

My wife joins with me in saying that while we fully appreciate your kindness in asking us if there is anything more we need, we would not think of asking for another single thing, we were very much afraid we had trespassed too far on your generosity already. We shall indeed appreciate the curtains very highly. Some of the second-hand clothing you mention, especially for girls, will be most welcome. We have one poor woman here with three girls who will be very glad of such kind help. Otherwise, we have no poor families in the ordinary sense of the term, and we have no rich ones. My wife joins with me in kindest regards.

Believe me, very faithfully yours, EDW. H. PARNELL.

ST. STEPHEN'S RECTORY,
357 MULLETT ST., DETROIT, Dec. 30, 1891.

DEAR MISS ——— :—The box you sent on the 14th, arrived last evening and was opened this morning, and I feel that I must say this, it is by far the best box I have ever received, everything sent is of use, and I can only tell you of a few things that were specially appreciated. The three books by your rector I had long wished for, and I think it was a very kind and thoughtful act on the part of some one to enclose them. The overcoats fitted as if made to order, and the shoes with one exception, my oldest boy's, and he was perfectly elated with the magic lantern. In a word, the toys will not only gladden my home but many others at New Year's, who were not recipients at Christmas. My wife was much pleased with her dress, the table linen, the web of cotton and all the made-up articles, and a small basket containing pins, etc., so useful to the mothers of any home, the blankets, sheets and pillow cases are of great use to us, and without going into fuller details, I can only add on behalf of my wife and family, we tender to the ladies, who so kindly remembered us, our very sincere and heartfelt thanks, and with all good wishes for the New Year.

I am yours truly in Christ, EDWARD COLLINS.

THE CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR'S treat, given by the Children's Friend Society, January 13th, was one of the most enjoyable entertainments the children have had.

Although the weather was very stormy three hundred children had gathered in the Sunday-school room by half-past seven o'clock, all eager to see what Prof. Hoy had to show them. Magic, Punch and Judy, and Marionettes all came in turn, each one pleasing and delighting them more and more.

The children could not understand how it was that Punch, on looking around the room, knew them, and called several of the little girls and boys by name.

Prof. Hoy could not have done more to make these little ones have a good time, which they certainly had judging from their laughter, and the remarks that those we have met since have made about it, such as: It was elegant, or grand, or beautiful, or lovely, and one little German girl said, "She was satisfied with it."

At the conclusion of the entertainment oranges were given to the children. The music necessary for the Marionettes was kindly furnished by Mr. David Fitler, whose performance on the banjo was highly appreciated.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS will hold their next meetings February 3d and February 17th, in the Parish House, at half-past seven o'clock.

On the evening of January 6th an entertainment was given to the King's Daughters. Mr. Thomas L. Perot exhibited a beautiful collection of photographic lantern slides, principally from views taken by himself. Through the kindness of Miss Cowan, who secured the assistance of several of her friends, a number of fine musical selections were rendered. A varied programme of songs, piano and cornet solos added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening.

OFFERTORIES IN MARCH.

Wednesday mornings and Friday afternoons, for Missionary Box Committee.
March 20th, Domestic Missions.
" 27th, Home for Deaconesses.
Other Sundays, General Charities.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week at 11 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 to 12 A. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

AN ENVELOPE CONTAINING SOME PIECES OF JEWELRY marked "For the Red Cross, from a poor woman," was found in the offertory last Sunday. It was forwarded to Drexel &. Co. for the Russian Famine Sufferers, and by them returned to the Rector with the notification that they could not use it for that purpose. He has it now, and would be glad to return it to the devoted giver.

A "QUIET DAY" FOR WOMEN, will be held on the second Thursday in Lent, March 10, 1892, in the Church of the Holy Trinity, Walnut and Nineteenth streets, Philadelphia, to be conducted by the Rt. Rev. Cortlandt Whitehead, S. T. D., Bishop of Pittsburgh. Services from 9.30 A. M. to 1 P. M., and from 2.30 to 5 P. M.

Holy Communion at 9.30 A. M.

A CONFERENCE OF CHURCHWOMEN will be held in the Lecture Room of the Church of the Holy Trinty, on the Second Friday in Lent, March 11th. Morning session from 10 A. M. to 12.30 P. M. Topics:

1. Clubs for Working Girls.
2. The Responsibility of Christian Women in Social Life.

Afternoon session, 2.30 o'clock. A Woman's Responsibility in regard to Missionary Work.

THE REV. DR. DONALD in urging the Endowment of the Church of the Ascension in New York has anticipated some things which the Rector of this Parish had intended to say to this people. What he says is this:

"Why has this Church never been endowed? It is because it has always been regarded as a "rich church." But it has never been that. A rich church is a church whose assured income is equal to its wise and economical expenditures. If it have not that, then it is poor, though its doors be thronged by Crœsus and all the rest. Every missionary from the West and South tells me, as he pleads with me for help, 'Your Church is so very rich!' The popular idea is that 'rich churches' need no endowment. And so what happens? We read every week of large bequests to Hospitals, Asylums, Dispensaries, Homes, Schools, Colleges—every form of charitable and religious work—but never of a bequest to the parishes that have educated the people in the principles of that charity which led them to make their bequests. It is a strange and significant fact. The Parishes support all these agencies by direct gift and by nurturing the benevolent spirit which bequeaths them rich gifts, but the Parishes themselves are passed by. We have the noble feeling that it is more truly a charitable act to leave or to give money to a hospital than to a Parish. But it is time—high time—to point out that he who endows, or helps to endow, a Parish is really endowing every good work of the city, for out of the Parishes is to come in the future, as in the past, the yearly support without which many an institution must languish and die. The Hospitals of this city have received from this Parish, for six years,* the interest at four per cent. of $15,000. And out of all the Parishes of the city comes the interest on $700,000 to the support of these same Hospitals. The endowment of a Parish is a double endowment, for it supports the worship of the Church, and ensures that a stream of benevolence shall flow out of it to every worthy cause that seeks the welfare of the town."

* St. Stephen's pays annually to Hospitals and Charitable Institutions an amount equal to the interest, at 5 per cent., on a capital of $30,000.

WHAT SHOULD PARENTS DO in the matter of bringing their sons and daughters to Church, and to Confirmation? It is often assumed that this is so perplexing a question that it must be allowed practically to remain unanswered. It has difficulties to be sure—indeed parentage is attended with embarrassments—but we venture to think that the difficulty here is just about the same that it is in any other direction. The key to it is this: while your children are children they will, as a rule, do the things you want them to do. If, therefore, they do not go to church, and do not come to Confirmation at that age when they are just leaving childhood behind them, it is because you, their fathers and mothers, do not want them to do so. This is as the rule. Of course there are exceptions. It is possible for parents to be so anxious about a child's religious training that they press him so hard that he revolts. That is possible. It is not very uncommon to hear a man say "I was dragged to church when I was a child until I got sick of it." In a very few cases this is true. But in many more cases a very slight acquaintance with the man who speaks so will show that he is one whom a very little religion is sufficient to make sick, that probably he was so when he was a child, and that probably his parents were quite right in "dragging him to church," as he expresses it, and that their good intentions failed on account of the intractable material with which they had to deal. But, be that as it may, every body knows that the danger now is all the other way. If you wish your children to have the support and stay which the Christian Church can alone give to their lives, you may depend upon it they will be likely to be more than willing. It will not need any exercise of authority, any urging. It will come just as naturally as their education or their manners. But you have no more reason to expect that your child will care for religion if you do not, than that he will be well bred if you are vulgar, that he will be honest if you are tricky. He may be all these, but if so it will be because he has better stuff in him than that which he directly inherits, or that other influences for good have been able to work upon him for good in spite of your indifference.

Have you, then, sons or daughters old enough to be confirmed at the Bishop's approaching? Will you bring them to the Rector? Will you say to them "Hadn't you better see the Rector about being confirmed this year?" If you yourself have without valid reason failed of this duty will you say to your children, "I think you and I ought to be confirmed this year?"

MRS. L. wishes to acknowledge, with thanks, a contribution of $5, from a gentleman in our congregation, for a lady in present need.

THE COMMITTEE on Lenten Sewing desire to thank the members of the congregation for money and material contributed for the work of this season. The cut garments will be ready for distribution, to any one applying, on Wednesday or Friday mornings immediately after the Church services.

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE.

The Garment Committee is always most truly grateful, and will always most thankfully receive partially worn outside clothing for men, women and children; no one need be afraid of ever sending too much of it, even if requiring slight repairs, but worn out clothing of any kind is not in our line; we ask for two new garments from each one interested in this charity in the course of the year; good, plain, unbleached cotton, or woolen flannel, muslin or calico, knowing these to be the things needed by the respectable poor we tide along who, through sickness or temporary loss of occupation, are suffering for want of warm clothing. It is beneath the dignity of our Parish to offer to such applicants, ragged garments, and all the ladies forming the committee would be afraid of handling them, with a view of repairing in these days of infection and contagion, it is demoralizing also to the class we wish to keep respectable and prevent falling into pauperism; and two new garments to them suggests cleanliness and proper pride, while two ragged pieces is most suggestive of poverty, sickness, death and sorrow. Flannels that are shrunken coming to us clean; and outgrown, but not worn-out clothing, will always be gladly accepted. With the money given us in the month of January, by the person designated as cash, we have purchased just such articles as we require to the number of sixty, twenty-two for men, thirty-six for children and two for women.

All contributions received every Monday morning at the Parish School Building by the committee in charge, between the hours of 10.30 and 12.30 P. M, or at any time they can be sent or left at 9 S. Tenth St., if marked for the Garment Committee and with name of sender.

THE BOYS' GUILD OF ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH gave their first entertainment on the evening of February 19th, in the Sunday-school room. Great taste was displayed in the decorations, which were in the hands of a committee composed of Harry Christensen, chairman, Edgar W. Spackman, secretary, and the executive committee, John Seed and Wm. Brown. Among the features of the occasion were the following: A comedy sketch by Messrs. Fogg and Semly, which contributed largely toward the amusement of the audience; a recitation by Mr. Bodkin, which was greatly enjoyed; "Christmas Day in an English Workhouse," a violin solo by Miss Williams, a banjo duet by Messrs. MacBeath and MacAfee, a recitation by Miss Edith Howard, also one by Clyde Mendenhall, and a duet on the piano by Mr. and Miss Borie, also a baritone solo by Edgar W. Spackman, which was rewarded by a large bouquet of Chestnuts. The entertainment ended by everyone singing "The Star Spangled Banner," and it was universally voted that the evening had been a decided success.

PRESIDENT W. R. HARPER, of the University of Chicago, will give a course of four lectures, (instead of six as before announced) before the American Institute of Sacred Literature, as follows:

Tuesday and Wednesday, March 1st and 2d, Tuesday and Wednesday, March 8th and 9th. The lectures will be given in the lecture-room of the Church of the Holy Trinity, 19th and Walnut streets, at 3.30 P. M., and at Oxford Presbyterian Church, Broad and Oxford sts., at 8 P. M.

Subject: The divine and human element in the first twelve chapters of Genesis.

A syllabus will be provided, giving a full outline of the course. These lectures will be especially valuable for all who wish to get an insight into the problems of the Pentateuch.

Tickets for the four lectures, $1.50; in groups of ten or more, $1 each. Tickets may be had at the Church book-stores, and at the door.

Also, six studies by the Rev. Prof. John P. Peters, Ph. D., on The Messianic Prophecy of the Old Testament. Each Messianic passage will be studied in connection with its historical bearings, and the development of the Messianic idea will receive special attention.

This course will be given Thursdays at 3.30 P.M., April 21st to May 26th, 1892, in the lecture-room of the Church of the Holy Trinity.

Tickets for the course, $2; in groups of 10 or more, $1.50.

WHAT SHALL WE DO for the children this month? was the question asked by the ladies of the Children's Friend Society. Give them a party, that means a good time.

February 24th was the date fixed upon, and long before 8 o'clock eighty-one children were in the Guild room, playing games and having a good time.

Favours were given them, and after much cracking it was an amusing sight to see how pretty some of them looked in their paper caps and bonnets.

Then came the ice cream and cake which all seemed to enjoy very much.

Those who are not working with us have not the least idea how much these poor children look forward to these monthly entertainments.

Ever since the ride in the street car up and down those that came a distance seem to enjoy. They talk of it for months and, when seen by any of the ladies, ask, "didn't we have a good time?"

DONATIONS RECEIVED by the Children's Friend Society:

Contributing members for 1892,
Mrs. W. Knorr,	1 00
Miss Marion Knorr,	1 00
Mrs. Joseph Reinboth,	1 00
Total	$4 00

Donation of two cloth coats from Mrs. Joseph Reinboth.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS, called the Whatsoever Circle, are doing just what their hands find to do. February 17th thirty poor children were invited to the Parish House and entertained by them. Games of all sorts were played and a grab-bag brought out, which was filled with all sorts of funny toys and as each little hand went in and out roars of laughter were heard all over the room.

The children were willing to do their part towards entertaining, many sang and others recited their little pieces. Then it was time for tea, sandwiches and cakes which the girls had so kindly prepared for them.

Each little child received, on going home, a small bag of candy, and many of the children thanked for the good time they had.

Mrs. Hansel very kindly donated a large cake towards this entertainment, Mrs. Molloy bananas, Mrs. Bloomfield eight pounds of candy, and Miss Washington toys, each member of the Circle doing their part.

The King's Daughters will hold their next meetings March 2d and March 16th, in the Parish House, at half past seven o'clock.

SELECTIONS.

THAT extremes meet is a truth that every day endorses. But we question whether religious extremes were ever so closely united as by a sergeant in the English army who was marshaling some recruits for Church. He asked one to what denomination he belonged, and was told, "Plymouth Brother." Prompt and stern came the reply: "There ain't no such religion in the British Army. Fall in with the Roman Catholics." He must have been the same uncompromising individual who on a similar occasion ordered, "Church of England to the front. All fancy religions to the rear."

OFFERTORIES FOR APRIL.

April 10, Easter Decorations.
" 17, Easter-Day, "Endowment Fund."
" 24, Society for Increase of Ministry.
Other Sundays, General Charities.
Wednesday mornings and Friday afternoons, in Lent, for Missionary Box Committee.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week at 11 o'clock. Church open daily from 9 to 12 A. M.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

THE EASTER CAROL SERVICE of the Sunday Schools, Parish Day School and Burd Orphan Asylum, will be held in the Church on the first Sunday after Easter, at four o'clock.

THE OFFERTORY ON EASTER DAY, morning and afternoon, will be for the Endowment Fund; of course any gifts marked for other purposes will be so applied.

THE EASTER SERVICES will be as follows:

Celebration of Holy Communion at 8 o'clock.

Morning prayer, Sermon and Holy Communion, 11 o'clock.

Evening prayer and Sermon, 4 o'clock.

The pew holders and regular congregation will be admitted through the north transept door. The front doors will be opened promptly at the time of service; after which all unoccupied seats will be filled at once.

AT ONE OR OTHER of the celebrations on Easter-day it is confidently expected that every communicant will be present. To absent himself on this day cannot be regarded otherwise than a confession that he has fallen out of harmony with the movement of the Christian world. This, all sober-minded men will regard as a great misfortune. If he be wise he will at once ask himself whether the loss of relish which makes him indifferent to the feast be not due to his own spiritual ill-health? He may need food all the more because he has little or no appetite. It is an ancient and reasonable custom that on two days at least in the year, Christmas and Easter, the anniversaries of His birth and resurrection, all the members of the family should gather about His table. Let there be no vacant places.

THE BISHOP WILL CONFIRM at the morning service, Tuesday in Holy week, April 12th.

All those who expect to be Confirmed will meet the Rector on Friday, April 8th, immediately after the 5 o'clock service, to sign the Parish Register, and make final arrangements. The Rector begs to repeat that it will give him sincere pleasure to meet half-way, or the whole way, for that matter, any one who is thinking of Confirmation. He wishes also to point out that the question for every man and woman to ask is not "Why should I be confirmed?" but "What reasonable apology have I for not doing so?"

Seats will be provided for those candidates who have no regular places of sitting.

The ladies to be Confirmed, will come to the chancel bare-headed. The class will assemble at the chancel rail, and remain standing until the Rector gives them the signal to kneel. (The proper attitude for the congregation in the Confirmation office is to stand until the Bishop bids them to prayer.) There will be a celebration of the Holy Communion immediately after, at which all the newly Confirmed are expected to receive. (It is one of the "lesser morals" of the Church, that the consecrated Bread shall always be in an open, ungloved hand.)

Those to be Confirmed will, by some means, find a little time in the morning before coming to Church, to be alone with God, and ask His blessings upon what they are about to do.

THE OFFERTORY ON EASTER DAY will be for the Endowment Fund.

This fund for the future was begun last Easter by the offerings on that day amounting to about $1400. According to a Deed of Trust, executed by the Vestry a year ago, neither principal nor interest of this Endowment may be used until the principal reaches $50,000. After that, one-half the income may be used until the principal reaches $100,000. The same Deed provides that any one giving, by bequest or otherwise, $2,500 may endow a pew which shall forever have upon it any name he may select, which pew may be used, free of rent, by any person he may select. During the year, the Rector has been notified that wills have been drawn providing for the Endowment in this manner of twenty pews. In this connection he begs earnestly to call the attention of a number of parishioners to this matter who might well do likewise, but so far as he is informed, have not done so. There are a number of honored names which have been on the pew list of St. Stephen's for many years. Will not those who bear them see to it that those names may perpetually abide there? By so doing, they will leave their names behind them in the Church of God on earth after they have passed to the Church above. And, better than this, they will have provided for the welfare of their fellows for generations unborn. Of course if one really thinks that his heirs need all, and will thank him for all he has to leave, then leave it all to them by all means. But if he is not sure of that, then what better can he do than this with a part of it?

Of course the actual gifts at Easter are expected to be substantial ones. Heretofore they always have been. If there is any one thing which this Parish believes in, it is the avoidance of shams. It hates a sham offertory above all other things. It does not ask anyone to give one cent for any object which he does not believe in. But it asks the people to seriously consider such objects as are laid before them. If such objects commend themselves then to one's judgment and conscience, he is asked to help according to his ability, but not to make a pretense of giving if he does not want to.

This endowment for the future of the Parish is not likely to be of advantage to any of us, but it will prevent the disgraceful possibility of this church being compelled in the future to move away from a poor neighborhood where it is needed to a rich one where it is not needed.

As the children did not have their usual monthly entertainment in March, it has been decided by the members of the Children's Friend Society, to give them an Easter entertainment the 20th of April, in the Sunday-school room at half past seven o'clock. Many of the children are asking if Easter will soon be here? for they have been told, that there would not be any entertainment for them until after Easter.

Members of the congregation have inquired of us, what are you doing for the little ones? Our answer is come and see on the evening of the 20th of April what we are doing, and what you have enabled us do.

Easter is all that is bright and beautiful to us and we want to make it so for the children. The entertainment will cost more than we generally give, and it would add greatly to the evening's enjoyment if we were able to give each child fruit or candy to carry home.

Will not some kind friend help us?

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS have met every Wednesday evening in the Guild room to do their Lenten sewing, and will continue to do so until all their work is finished.

The Wheeler and Wilson Sewing Machine Company have very kindly loaned one of their sewing machines, which has been quite a help to the girls.

April the 27th, the King's Daughters will have a "Clipping Party" in the Guild room of Parish House, the money which they get for their articles purchased will be used to take flowers, fruit, and other things to the sick in hospitals, and homes during the summer months. It is hoped that the congregation will encourage the girls by their presence and help. If you don't understand what a clipping party is come and see.

NOTES ON DEACONESS HOUSE.

The subject was brought before the Bishop in July, 1889.

In November, 1890, the house, 708 Spruce Street, was purchased. The mortgage, $8000, has just been paid off.

On Festival of Epiphany, 1891, the house was opened with a House Mother, and four students. This winter, the number has been twelve.

The duties of the students consist in their training in household matters, their training in the practical work of teaching, visiting the sick and poor, hospital work, Bible classes, mothers' meetings, work done in St. Mary and Alaska sheds, and in the prisons, in kitchens, gardens, sewing schools, church embroidery, and elsewhere. And in study, under an able faculty, on the Bible, Prayer Book, evidences, Church history, hygiene, cooking, nursing, etc.

These advantages are all intended, not only for the few students who live in the house, and who want to give their whole lives to church work, but also, and in its origin, specially for outside students, ladies living in their own homes, and keeping up with the duties of social life, who would yet gain inestimable benefit, by learning how to work well, and who can here have the advantages of better instruction, mental as well as spiritual.

Of the twelve students, five are about to become candidates for the Diaconate, the others are special students.

THE work of the Benevolent Society will close for the season next week. As a large number of garments and articles of necessary household use, remain unsold, the managers will hold a special sale in the Guild room on Wednesday the 6th of April, from 10 until 1 o'clock, to which the congregation is cordially invited.

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE

Will close on the 18th of April. After that until we resume in October all applications must be made to the Rev. Dr. McConnell or Rev. Mr. Miller, when they will be attended to if possible. All those members anxious to send contributions purchased from the Benevolent Society have about two weeks in which to do so, as after that it will close until November. We have been very liberally supplied with exceedingly good and appropriate garments so far this year, which will enable us to extend our charities beyond where we have ever gone previously. With the additional gift from Cash we have purchased twenty-six garments for children.

To the male members of the congregation who are afraid of moths we will gladly come to the rescue and relieve them of all superfluous clothing, cleaning and putting it safely away in readiness for our early applicants in the Autumn.

All contributions received every Monday morning at the Parish School Building by the committee in charge, between the hours of 10.30 A. M. and 12.30 P. M, or at any time they can be sent or left at 9 S. Tenth St., if marked for the Garment Committee and with name of sender.

SELECTIONS.

THOUGHTS FROM "BETWEEN THE LIGHTS."

"Are they not all ministering spirits?" Heb. 1: 24.

"It doth not yet appear what we shall be." 1 John 3: 2.

Not until we know all that God knows can we estimate to the full, the power and the sacredness of some one life which may seem the humblest in the world.

There is no action so slight or so mean but it may be done to a great purpose, and ennobled therefore; nor is any purpose so great but that slight actions may help it and may be so done as to help it much, most especially that chief of all purposes, the pleasing of God.—Ruskin.

Another delightful view of heaven is, that it unites us with the good and great of our own race, and even with higher orders of beings. But this union is one of spirit, not of mere places, it is accordance of thought and feeling, not an outward relation; and does not this harmony begin even now? and is not virtuous friendship on earth essentially the pleasure which we hope hereafter? What place would be drearier than the future mansions of Christ, to one who should want sympathy with their inhabitants, who would feel himself a foreigner there, who would be taught by the joys which he could not partake, his own loneliness and desolation.

Be always displeased at what thou art, if thou desirest to attain to what thou art not; for where thou hast pleased thyself, there thou abidest.—St. Augustine.

"See that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently." 1 Peter.

In love and compassion God hath made us dependent upon each other to the end that by the use of our affections we may find true happiness and rest to our souls. He hath united us so closely with our Fellows, that they do make, as it were, a part of our being, and in comforting them we do most assuredly comfort ourselves. Therein doth happiness come to us unawares, and without seeking, as the servant who goeth on his master's errand findeth pleasant fruits and flowers overhanging him, and cool Fountains, which he knew not of, gushing up by the wayside for his solace and refreshing.—Margaret Smith's Journal (Whittier.)

"COMFORT."

If there should come a time, as well there may,
When sudden tribulation smites thine heart,
And then dost come to me for help and stay,
And comfort, how shall I perform my part?

I must live higher, nearer to the reach
Of angels in their blessed trustfulness,
Learn their unselfishness, ere I can teach
Content to thee, when I would greatly bless.
Ah me! what woe were mine if thou shouldst come,
Troubled, but trusting, unto me for aid,
And I should meet thee powerless and dumb,
Willing to help thee, but confused, afraid!
It shall not happen thus; for I will rise,
God helping me, to higher life, and gain
Courage and strength to give thee counsel wise,
And purer love to bless thee in thy pain.

THE EASTER ENTERTAINMENT given for the children April 20th was one of the most enjoyable entertainments they have had.

Magic, Marionettes, Punch and Judy were the amusements for the evening.

A more orderly set of children it would be hard to find, even when Prof. Hoy distributed his magic Pop corn. There was not enough for all and when told it was all gone they took their seats quietly.

Each child was presented with a box of candy and an Easter card as they left the room, and almost every child said "thank you, we had a good time."

Prof. Hoy's little daughter played the organ for the entertainment.

AT A MEETING OF THE BOARD OF MANAGERS of the Church Training and Deaconess House, held April 5th, 1892, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved: That the warm and grateful thanks of the Board of Managers, be tendered to the Rector and Congregation of St. Stephen's for the liberal offering given to the Church Training and Deaconess House, and that the corresponding secretary be requested to forward a copy of this resolution to Dr. McConnell.

IN MEMORIAM.

The Girls' Friendly Society of St. Stephen's, having heard with deep sorrow of the death of Miss Leonard, desire to place on record the following resolutions:

WHEREAS; It has pleased our Heavenly Father in His Infinite wisdom, to remove from our midst our beloved friend and former secretary, therefore be it,

Resolved: That in her untimely death we have lost a true, kind and loyal leader, one who, by her noble example, warm heart and true christianity, endeared herself to all.

Resolved: That her bereaved family has in this affliction the heartfelt sympathy of the Society; also be it,

Resolved: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and be published in the PARISH NEWS.

SELECTIONS.

HIS NIGHT OFF.

My father played a queer trick on me the other night. You know I used to feel that I had done myself an injustice if I did not go to the theatre about five or six nights a week. It wasn't always the theatre, but if it wasn't that it was a music hall, or perhaps a game of cards or billiards with some of the boys.

Well, you also know how I am situated as to business. I work for my father, and I have to be at the office at 8.30 in the morning, just as the rest of the family are sitting down to breakfast. In consequence I get my breakfast and leave the house before they are up. But I can't complain of that. I'm doing exactly what the man who had my place before me did, and between you and me I'm drawing more salary.

But that's neither here nor there. It's the evenings. I used to finish work about six, get dinner in the city, and go to the theatre or somewhere else. I had been doing it for about six months, and, when I look back, about the only time I saw my mother and sister during that period was at Sunday dinner. Nothing unusual in that, of course. The same thing is true of hundreds of young men in town. But they haven't fathers like mine. He came to me one afternoon and asked me if I had an engagement for that night.

"Yes," I said; "I've promised to go to the theatre."

"How about to-morrow night? he asked.

"Nothing on at present," I replied.

"Well, I'd like you to go somewhere with me."

"All right," I said; "where shall I meet you?"

You see he leaves the office about an hour before I can get my work finished. He suggested Lenox Restaurant at 7.30, and I was there, prepared for the theatre and a quiet lecture on late hours. He had combined the two on several previous occasions. But when he appeared he said he wanted me to call on a lady with him. "One I knew quite well when I was a young man," he explained.

We went out and started straight for home. "She is stopping at the house," he said, when I spoke of it. I thought it strange that he should have made the appointment for the Lenox Restaurant under those circumstances, but I said nothing. Well, we went in, and I was introduced with due formality to my mother and my sister. The situation was ludicrous, and I began to laugh, but the laugh died away.

None of the three even smiled. My mother and my sister shook hands with me, and my mother said she remembered me as a boy, but hadn't seen much of me lately. Then she invited me to be seated. It wasn't a bit funny then, although I can laugh over it now. I sat down, and she told me one or two stories of my boyhood, at which we all laughed a little. Then we four played whist for a while. When I finally retired I was courteously invited to call again. I went up-stairs feeling pretty small and doing a good deal of thinking.

Then I made up my mind that my mother was a most entertaining lady, and my sister a good and brilliant girl.

Now I am going to call again, as I have been doing quite regularly for the last week. I enjoy their company, and I intend to cultivate their acquaintance.—Arkansas Traveller.

RELIGIOUS TRAINING.

"More and more there is growing up a disposition among parents to permit all matters of religious observance to be with their offspring mere matters of choice or preference. Your child must learn French and German and drawing; but he shall learn his catechism and his Bible lesson and a reverent observance of this holy day if he chooses, and not otherwise. A more dismal and irrational folly it is not easy to conceive of. I do not say that there may not have been folly in another and in an opposite direction. I am unmindful that religious teaching has been sometimes made a dreary and intolerable burden. But surely we can correct one excess (not, I apprehend, very frequent or very harmful), without straightway flying to an opposite and worse one. And so I plead with you who are parents to train your children to ways of reverent familiarity with God's word, God's house and God's day."—Bishop H. C. Potter.

OFFERTORIES IN JUNE.

For General Charities.

SOME TIME AGO the Rector of this church was called upon to speak before the Contemporary Club upon the present Christian outlook. His address was upon "The Next Step in Christianity." Inasmuch as an incomplete report of it in the secular papers occasioned criticism, he thought it well to have it published correctly. Copies of it may be had at Wanamaker's by any one who should care for it.

FOR A NUMBER OF YEARS the Church newspaper called "The Standard of the Cross and the Church" has been published in Philadelphia. It has now changed its name, and passed into the able editorial hands of the Rev. Dr. Fulton, and is called The Church Standard. For a considerable time Dr. Fulton was connected with the New York Churchman, and it was largely due to his ability and broad-mindedness that that paper was, for a time, so admirable both in matter and temper. It was during that period that the Churchman, with the hearty approval of the Rector, canvassed this point and secured a large number of subscribers. They will not have regretted their subscription, for they have received copies of that which, until now, has been the best religious paper in this country. But now that that excellence has been transferred to the Church Standard, published in Philadelphia, and giving large space to the affairs of our own Diocese, the Rector would be glad to know that hereafter the subscriptions of the parish should be given to it.

It has also the advantage of costing just half as much as the Churchman.

AT THE LATE DIOCESAN CONVENTION much discussion was occasioned by a proposition (which was adopted by a large majority) to exclude from the Convention all members of any "Religious Order." So much confusion of ideas has existed about the matter, that it would seem to be worth while to say just what the question was.

The persons whom it was proposed to exclude are clergymen or laymen who have taken the monastic vows of "poverty, chastity and obedience." There are a very few such clergymen in the Church—probably less than a dozen altogether.

There are none in this Diocese at present, although there have been until lately.

The right of any one to join an Order, and to take upon himself such vows, was not questioned. Nor was the right of any parish to put itself under the care of such an Order questioned. Nor was any reference made to the first two of the triple vow. The sole question was: Is it expedient that a man who has taken a vow of obedience in Ecclesiastical things to a foreign superior should have a voice in the legislation of the Church? It was urged that a man who is in this situation is not free to consider and vote upon the merits of any proposed law, or to cast an unbiased vote in any election. On this ground, and on this ground alone, it was determined to exclude such persons hereafter from a seat and vote in the Diocesan Convention.

CAMDEN, N. J., May 20, 1892.

REV. SIR:—As I was leaving St. Stephen's Church last Sunday, I found a small scarf-pin, which the owner can have by applying to me and proving property.

Yours most respectfully,

GEO. CUNNINGHAM.

937 Broadway, Camden, N. J.

REPORT OF THE BENEVOLENT SOCIETY of St. Stephen's Church for 1892:

The managers of the Benevolent Society present to the congregation of St. Stephen's Church their twenty-seventh annual report:

They have given, weekly, sewing to fifty women, and, although unable to give to each as much as they would like, still they have assisted them to pay their rent, and have also allowed them to buy the articles for which they had been paid for making, at the cost of the material. There was cut and made during the season 2,440 articles, and the managers wish to take this opportunity of thanking those who assisted them so much by buying the articles made, to give to the garment committees, or for their own use, or who came to buy the garments at the end of the season, thereby enabling them to pay all that they owed for dry goods, etc., etc.

The Treasurer reports that all money received from subscriptions, donations, sales and one offertory, amounted to $1,089.27, and paid for materials and to sewing-women $1,087.03, leaving a balance of $2.14 in the treasury.

H. C. WILKINS, Secretary,
1223 Locust Street.

THE ALTAR SOCIETY presents its annual report to the congregation:

The Chancel Committee has performed the duties of caring for the chancel and vestments. Wheat and oats were presented for decorating the church on Thanksgiving Day, palms for Palm Sunday, and flowers for Maundy Thursday.

The Embroidery Class report:

Work donated.—Surplice to Hahnemann Hospital. Surplice to Rev. Albert Ware, Millington, Md. Set of red altar hangings to Church of the Crucifixion. Surplice and black stole to Rev. Wm. H. Burkhart.

Work ordered.—Two white embroidered stoles, and materials furnished for two white stoles.

Work for our own Parish.—Set of white embroidered book-markers; one purple stole; an embroidered credence-cloth, chalice-veil and corporal donated.

The class at present are at work on a set of green altar hangings and stole for a mission church, Rawlins, Wyoming. A white and a red stole. A beautiful design having been chosen for the white altar-cloth, the class have commenced the embroidery.

THE LENTEN SEWING COMMITTEE report increased interest in the work, and wish to thank the ladies of the congregation for their generous support, in money, materials and sewing, and also the members of the King's Daughters and Girls' Friendly Society for the large number of garments made by them.

Children entertained and taken on excursions, 800.
Clothing given out, 150 pieces.
Donation received April 23d, Miss Louisa B. Edwards, $1.

OWING TO THE UNPLEASANT WEATHER, it has been thought best not to start with the excursions until the 4th of June. Then the summer work commences, and it is hoped that the kind friends who remembered the little ones last year will not forget them this.

In 1888 we had 75 children's names down in our books; now there are 800.

Entertainments have been given each month during the winter, and in the summer time they have been taken on excursions, sometimes having two each month when our funds would permit.

Last year we were able to have three excursions to Atlantic City, which do more good for the children than two or three others; but they are expensive, cost at the very least $50, then only sixty children can go. With the funds we now have on hand we could only have one excursion; what is to become of the other 700 poor children? It is one bright spot in their lives, and one thing talked over by them the whole year.

Don't forget that we are always glad to add new contributing members to our list, one dollar a year. Many dues are now owing, and if the members will kindly send either to the Parish House or to Mrs. E. S. Vanderslice, 127 South Fifth Street, it will save postage, which money can be used for the children.

SELECTIONS.

A BROOKLYN preacher thus speaks of the Ecclesiastical tramp:

He is the gad-fly who buzzes around all the churches, and settles in none; the bee who sucks the honey from other people's flowers, and stings as he takes his flight; the ecclesiastical dead-beat, whose name would be black-listed by all merchants and hotel-keepers, if he played the same trick on them that he plays on every helpful institution in society.

These sharks of society, these pilferers of other men's labors, are beyond the reach of human law, but they are all indicted as thieves under the eighth commandment. My friends, if you are here to-night, you are welcome. If the church can't reach you, nothing will this side of the grave. I have visited you in sickness, and buried you over and over again. I have seen you beat your way to the very grave, and sent off into eternity with a big religious funeral, under the respectable auspices and at the expense of that religion for the regular support of which you never paid a dollar.

IT IS good to often come near to the Lord's table. It is not, he said, a gem, the possession of which makes us a little richer; it is not a tool in hand by which we may become more effective; it is not simply an intellectual gift, through which we become wiser, but the bread and wine of the Lord's table makes us stronger through and through. Every part of the man is strengthened, broadened, elevated, and by it our lives are enriched by that peace and love which comes only from close fellowship with Him whose love is boundless.—Bishop Brooks.

CARDINAL NEWMAN was right in saying, "Truth has been propagated, not as a system, not by books, not by argument, not by temporal power, but by the personal influence of such men as have at once been the teachers and the patterns of it." That teaching is always most powerful which is illustrated and enforced by the example of the teacher.—Selected.

THE MAN WHO SAYS he is kept out of the church by hypocrites is not influenced by them anywhere else. Business is full of them, but if he sees a chance to make money he doesn't stop for that. The theatre is full of them, and yet he will go there and pay to look at them. Society is crowded with them, and yet he never thinks of becoming a hermit. Married life is full of them, but that doesn't make him remain a bachelor. Hell is full of them, and yet he is not doing a thing to keep from going there. He wants to have you think he is trying to avoid the society of hypocrites, and yet he takes not a single step towards the only place in God's universe where no hypocrite can go, and by his conduct proves that he himself is the biggest kind of a hypocrite.

"IT REQUIRES FAR MORE of the constraining love of Christ to love our cousins and neighbors as members of the heavenly family, than to feel the heart warm to our suffering brethren in Tuscany or Madeira. To love the whole church is one thing; to love—that is, to delight in the graces and veil the defects—of the person who misunderstood me and opposed my plans yesterday, whose peculiar infirmities grate on my most sensitive feelings, or whose natural faults are precisely those from which my natural character most revolts, is quite another."

THE Holy Communion is a test. Not an infallible test, perhaps, but still a fair indication of our Christian love and zeal.

It is the sacrament of obedience. Christ asked us to do this.

It is the sacrament of remembrance. Jesus desired us to do this in his memory, as a mark of our love and loyalty to him.

It is the sacrament of worship. It is the one distinctive Christian service of worship which Christ himself instituted. To turn away from it is to go out when Christ's own service is about to begin.

It is the sacrament of help. He gave us this to help us. "Whoso eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me and I in him."

OFFERTORIES IN JULY.

For General Charities.

WHY WAS IT that our Lord did not choose His first disciples from among the doctors, the priests, the theologians? Why was it the new founded Church did not secure its priesthood from among those who had been trained and accustomed to priestly duties? There were plenty such in the Church to choose from. "A great multitude of the priests were added to the Church," but not one of them became an Apostle, or, so far as appears, even a minister.

All this could not have been by chance. Divine wisdom choses instruments fitted to the end it has in view. What was that end in this case? If it had been to establish any one of the pretended "Orthodoxies," which soon overlaid the Evangel of Jesus, He would have sought His recruits among the scribes, the pharisees, the theologians.

But such, clearly, was not His purpose. What He wished was to communicate to the world a new moral life, a life of abnegation, of devotion, of charity. What he condemned in men was not mistake in Doctrine, but error of life. "Ye shall know them by their fruits." This is the criterion He establishes, and no other can be substituted for it without missing His single purpose. His severest condemnation is for those who, from hard and conceited devotion to an arbitrary "Orthodoxy," hold themselves aloof from their fellows, and lose that sweet kindliness which marked Himself. "I thank Thee, O Father, because Thou hast hidden these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes!"

The task which the Christian world has before it, just now, is to disentangle the Christianity of Jesus from these authoritative theological "systems" which have overlaid and well nigh smothered it. This is slowly but surely being done. It disturbs many and angers a few. But it cannot be helped. It must be done in order to save men from the indifference and unbelief which is spreading on every hand. Men are not indifferent to God, to righteousness, to their eternal destiny. But they do not care one farthing for the long drawn out formularies in which the Church has from time to time attempted to set forth the truth about these things. They are not indifferent to Jesus; but they will not receive, and ought not to receive, a great mass of what has been dogmatically laid down about the precise nature of His personality and the rationale of His work. "Sirs, we would see Jesus," is the determined challenge of the religious world of today. We would see Jesus, not Laud or Luther or Calvin, or even Paul, or the writer of Hebrews. "We would see Jesus."

REV. GEORGE H. KINSOLVING has been elected Assistant Bishop of Texas. Bishop Gregg, consecrated the first Bishop of Texas in 1859, now outranked in order of consecration only by the Presiding Bishop Williams and Bishop Clark of Rhode Island, has "practically resigned" his jurisdiction, it is said. Mr. Kinsolving is the fourth Philadelphia rector elected to a bishopric within three years—Bishop Davies of Michigan, Bishop Nichols of California and Bishop Nicholson of Milwaukee—having been taken from St. Peter's, St. James' and St. Mark's, respectively.

THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD of June 21st, contained a cock-and-bull story about a man having been accidentally imprisoned in St. Stephen's Church when it was closed on Sunday, and who only escaped a day or two later, when half famished, by ringing a cacophonous clamor upon the chimes. The story was a fabrication, pure and simple, as every one knows who knows that the Church is open every day. The Editor of the Record makes the following amende for the annoyance:—

REV. S. D. MCCONNELL,

DEAR SIR:

I had been led to suppose that the "St. Stephen's Chimes" story was a fabrication, and I now find my suspicions were correct. Our reporter thought, and I hope he was not far wrong, that no great injury would be done to anyone by his tale. I regret very much the occurrence.

Very respectfully,

EDW. ALDEN MILLER,
City Editor.

SOUTH OIL CITY, PA., JUNE 20TH, 1892.

MY DEAR BRO.:

Your letter, enclosing check, at hand. You can never know the good that has been done in individual cases through your kindness and interest in our behalf. The box has gladdened many hearts, and I would again thank the ladies of your congregation for the many useful garments sent by them. We are looking forward to plenty of work to be done this winter—many of our own families among the poor, but industrious, have lost their all.

Yours very truly,

J. H. B. BROOKS.

The Treasurer wishes to thank the members who so kindly responded to the request in last month's PARISH NEWS. Dues that are still owing can be sent to Parish House, or, to Mrs. E. S. Vanderslice, 127 South 5th Street.

Owing to the unpleasant weather, we were not able to have our excursion the 4th of June, as stated in last month's PARISH NEWS.

Many of the children assembled in the Guild room of Parish House determined not to be left if there was the least chance of going. When told the excursion would not be until June 11th, and that they could have all the week to think of it, they went home happy, each with a stick of candy and a banana to make up for their disappointment.

June 11th, was all that could be desired, and 62 children were taken to Mount Pleasant and had a very enjoyable time. One little girl remarking that she prayed all night Friday that it would be clear Saturday.

The ladies of the Children's Friend Society wish to thank the friends who have so kindly remembered the little ones this month, and it is hoped, if nothing happens, we may have our first Sea Shore Excursion to Atlantic City, July 13th.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS of St. Stephen's Church do not care to stop work for the summer, many little kindnesses are done by them too small to mention. They have visited for the month of June, the Home of the Merciful Saviour, and have taken a small gift for each child, but are particularly interested in one little girl who they have taken it upon themselves to dress.

They are now busy preparing a birthday box for her, which they will send in August to Avon-by-the Sea.

Their next meetings will be July 6th and 20th, in the Guild room of Parish House, at half-past seven o'clock.

SELECTIONS.

BISHOP HARE HAS THE FOLLOWING TO SAY upon the present crisis in China: "The condition of affairs in China at present is calculated to stir to its depths every Christian breast in which there beats one sentiment of reverence for Jesus Christ. On the one hand are certain of the literati and ruling classes who have deliberately set on foot a systematic effort to cover Christians and Christianity with infamy. The means used are the circulation of tracts and colored pictures of the most revolting sort. The blasphemy of them passes belief. If this were the whole story, the duty of Christians would be quickly told: 'Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine.' But over against these propagandists of blasphemy are hundreds of little congregations of Chinese disciples who, despite the tremendous odds against them, have confessed in baptism the holy Name which others blaspheme, are now growing and rejoicing in His grace and dare to assemble Sunday after Sunday for His public worship—nay, notwithstanding the recent uprising against the Christians, new converts are joining them. At Hankow, lately the scene of disturbances, a large class is preparing for baptism, and I confirmed eighty-four. Between these two classes, the blasphemers and the converts, is the vast multitude—millions upon millions in number—who of themselves have no hostility to Christianity, but whose minds are being poisoned by the calumnious literature referred to above, and some of whom have, by these means, been led on to incendiary and murderous proceedings such as excited so much alarm last summer. Who can be passive in the presence of facts such as these?"

We are not infrequently gratified with the information that the Episcopalians are the smallest of all sects. As the best refutation of this wild statement, we give the following facts from Whitaker, leaving our readers to make their own comparisons:

Episcopalians,	23,000,000
Methodists of all Denominations,	16,960,000
Roman Catholics,	15,200,000
Presbyterians of all Descriptions,	11,100,000
Baptists of all Descriptions,	8,600,000
Congregationalists,	5,500,000

The above table taken from Whitaker's Almanac shows a numerical strength of "Episcopalians" among English-speaking people, not commonly understood. Thus it appears that they outnumber the Methodists of all denominations by more than 6,000,000; the Roman Catholics by more than 7,000,000; the Presbyterians 12,000,000; the Baptists of all descriptions, by more than 14,000,000, and the Congregationalists by 17,500,000.

It would be well for that class of writers who are in the habit of speaking of these Episcopalians as "the smallest of Protestant sects" sometimes to remember the lesson of these figures.

THE following extract from an article by Mr. Gore, of Pusey House, Oxford, is of particular interest.

"Let us who wish to be servants of Jesus Christ at whatever cost, place ourselves again at the feet of our Master, as He sits conspicuous on the Mount and opens His mouth to teach us the moral law of His Kingdom."

For we need a better understanding of the authority which the Church ought to exercise in matters of social morality, and a better organization of Christian public opinion.

I. Some leading principles in our Lord's moral method.

(a) He demands not conduct merely, but character,—described, however, as it finds expression in detailed acts.

Christ's teaching should therefore be applied in detail to the circumstances of our day.

"We need consultation among small bodies of representative Christians who know exactly what life means in schools and colleges, in athletic contests, in business, in workshops, in political life, in law courts, so that a central public conscience of the Church may be deliberately formed as to the sort of typical acts and results to act in which the Christian spirit must exhibit itself in the various situations of life."

(b) Our Lord lays down laws for a kingdom, a society; but He seeks its establishment through the sanctification of the individual.

Christian effort for social improvement must always have its stronghold in the sanctification of individual characters. [Bad dwellings, inadequate wages, etc., are as stones on the graves of men spiritually dead, and have to be removed before the dead can be raised.]

(c) Our Lord is speaking to the Church and not to the State.

The Church is to be a distinct society (1) that Christians may, from the narrower, learn the wider, love; (2) that the world may find in the Church, —a "light," a "salt."

This should be applied in single parishes and districts of human life. The Church should represent, in each parish, those who are honestly striving after moral excellence and ready to make sacrifices in its interest; it is to be the home of the best moral conscience of the community.

II. Some of the leading features in the moral contents of our Lord's doctrine.

The fundamental principle of the Sonship and Brotherhood of Man as based on the Fatherhood of God, involves three subordinate ones:

(a) The principle of justice, or equal consideration for each,—not now approximately realized.

(b) The principle of trust in God's Fatherhood.

The Christian Society cannot alter the goal of the world's movement; but it can facilitate or thwart the purpose of God within its own area.

The "clear knowledge" of God a great help in social reform. It was the Apostles who were so full of the vision of God, who turned the world upside down.

(c) The principle of co-operation, not competition.

The Church must be, spiritually and physically, a profit-sharing company.

To act on these principles, we need to concentrate Christian influence:

(1) We need a careful organization of Christian moral opinion.

(2) We need to league ourselves together to observe the Christian code.

(3) We should draw together to centers, both in town and country, where men can frankly start afresh and live openly the common life of the first Christians.

"THE MOMENT HAS COME FOR THE CHURCH TO PUT SOCIAL MORALITY IN THE FOREFRONT OF ITS EFFORTS."

"A. K. H. B.," in his "Reminiscences," tells the following story, among others, of Dean Stanley. The incident occurred at the time he was rector of St. Andrew's, and the particular occasion was at a reception after his rectorial address: —"An awful incident occurred to the Dean, to which only his greatest friends ever ventured to allude in talking with him. He had been introduced to a dear old lady, and said a few kind words to her, at the same time bending forward his head in the way we all remember. The aged saint misunderstood the gesture and solemnly kissed him. My wife had his arm at the moment; but he rent himself away and fled from the spot with extraordinary activity. Few have ever seen Stanley so frightened as he was then."

OFFERTORIES IN AUGUST.

For General Charities.

THE RECTOR, the Rev. Dr. McConnell, left the city for his summer vacation about the middle of July, and expects to return to parish work about the middle of September. His family are at Watch Hill, R. I. The latest news from his home by the sea, is that the young son, born July 20th, and his mother are doing finely.

MR. WILLIAM PATTEN died on July 22d, while on a visit to Michigan. When he left the city he seemed in good health and the news of his death came as a severe shock to his many friends. He was a constant worshipper for the last two years in St. Stephen's Church, and a faithful attendant at the daily services which he seemed to especially prize. The several benevolent and charitable societies connected with the parish have special reason to remember him by reason of his interest in their work and the help extended by his generous offerings from time to time. He was a good friend and a noble generous-hearted Christian. He possessed enlarged sympathies and had practicable methods of showing his interest in Christian endeavors.

All sympathy is felt for the bereaved wife and earnest prayers have been made that the God of consolation may indeed be a present help in this time of trouble.

THE REV. MR. MILLER, while on his vacation, which began June 15th, and ended the middle of July, officiated and preached one Sunday at Beach Haven, N. J., and on another Sunday at Narragansett Pier, R. I.

DURING THE SUMMER the Church is kept open for Sunday services at 11 a. m. and 5 p. m. And on Holy days during the week there is a celebration of the Holy Communion at 11 o'clock a. m. Fortunately for most of our people they are enabled to be away from the city during this heated season, but thereby the Church is seemingly deserted. The congregations however, though small, testify to the rightfulness of keeping open doors. The services, if nothing else, are a witness to the sacredness of the Day of Rest.

THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY is about the only society in the parish whose greatest work is in the hot weather. They are busy as their report will show. The need of recreation is universal. The Jews were provided with at least three great holidays which while hallowed by religion were not absolutely to be spent in that way. The men were thus required to have not only a religious pilgrimage but the relief of new scenes and surroundings. As our Christianity advances the interest in others' welfare enlarges. We are taught to think not only of our home folks but of our poor neighbors also. Some one has said, "It is amazing often what easy, inexpensive frolics please people, if you consult their judgment, not yours alone."

The ladies of the Children's Friend Society have shown the many contributors to their funds, that they are both competent and willing to help the little ones, whose parents are unable so to do, to find rest and gladness in a healthful excursion away from the crowded streets and heated homes of the poorer neighborhoods of our city.

Very many thanks from the ladies of the Society to those who have so kindly remembered the little ones. Through your kindness many more children will be able to have a day's outing at the Sea Shore. August 10th will be the next excursion to Atlantic City, and another will be given on August 17th.

Long before eight o'clock on the morning of the 13th of July, 75 children were ready to start for a day's outing to Atlantic City, coming from all parts, north, south, east and west, each child looking so bright and happy.

After crossing the Market Street Ferry, they were taken to a special car which through the kindness of Mr. Reibernack and Mr. Dayton (gentlemen in the Pennsylvania Railroad Office), had been gotten at a very low rate, and was run all the way down to the Excursion House.

The children were delighted with the ride down, all anxious to see the ocean, even those who had not the least idea what it was. It may seem strange but one little girl remarked, she had never been in the steam cars before, and what made it more amusing, she came without an invitation and was greatly delighted when told she could go along.

Buckets and shovels were bought for the small children, after speaking to Mrs. Trenwith who was waiting so kindly to receive them. Then off they went to the beach, and commenced their digging, finding all sorts of curiosities, such as crabs and clam shells, but the most amusing of all, was to see them playing store with jelly fish, which seemed to be their special admiration.

Mr. Groff, the proprietor of the Merry-go-Round, who was such a good friend last year to the children, had not forgotten them and very kindly gave each one of the 75 children two free rides.

Next comes dinner, and all are ready at the sound of the bell, to see what good things Mrs. Trenwith has provided; soup, chicken, roast beef, three kind of vegetables, plenty of bread and butter with ice cream and cake for dessert. It was a sight worth looking at, to see how they enjoyed every thing and how well-behaved they were.

After dinner they go in wading and the fun commences, one can scarcely call it wading but it is the only way we are able to keep them from going out to the middle of the ocean, they don't seem to have the least fear. But the dressing and drying are the hardest part of the day's work, but one don't mind that when we see some color in a poor pale-faced child and know that all have had at least one good day's outing.

Then to the car and three cheers for Mr. Hall, who had done so much to make the day a happy one for the children.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS meet Wednesday evening, Aug. 3d, in the Parish House to pack the birthday box for their little girl at Avon-by-the-Sea, and to plan what work they will do next month.

SELECTIONS.

I HAVE often wondered how much of real crime is due to the presence of statutes, judges, police, and prisons. How much does the dread paraphernalia of punishment inflame the spirit of resistance? Is a prison a magnet drawing some souls to it as a snake fascinates its prey? I concede that those agencies prevent crime, although some persons deny that, but I also think that in some natures they inspire it. If the warning given in the garden of Eden had not been accompanied by a penal threat, would Adam have disobeyed it? I do not know; but I believe that the caution itself was based on the psychologic reason that the knowledge of evil is a temptation to sin; and I think that if Adam and Eve had remained perfect, and all their posterity for a thousand years, or until there were ten million souls in Eden, and somebody had then built a jail there, candidates for cells would have appeared at once. I was the first lawyer that settled in Marbletown, and I was at the head of the bar there for about a year, or until another lawyer came. Before I went there the settlement was quiet, friendly, and harmonious; and utterly free from crime, crimes, or quarrels; but as soon as I arrived and opened my office, the inhabitants began to think that as there was a lawyer in town it was their duty to go to law with one another; and they did. Many a time, when the village was in the throes of a lawsuit over a stray pig, or a dead horse, or a borrowed plough, or something; and the inhabitants were all divided into hateful factions on the question, have I heard old Mike Marquand say, "We was all peaceable, wasn't we until we got a lawyer here. We never had no furse with one another did we until he come to town;" pointing his finger at me, overwhelming me with conscious guilt, and proving the metaphysical knowledge of Shakespeare when he said "How oft the sight of means to do ill deeds makes ill deeds done." And I think that the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil was well forbidden, for the knowledge of evil is evil.—The Open Court.

POISONED EYES.

A TALK TO YOUNG PEOPLE.

There is a story of a painter who had bitterly offended a woman, so that she determined to take a cruel revenge. He was about to paint a picture for exhibition at a famous gallery, where he hoped to gain the first prize. The woman resolved to spoil that picture, and she went about the work very cunningly. She did not meddle with the picture itself; all she did was to give the painter every day a cup of coffee, into which she put a small white powder. What harm could that do, you want to know. Wait awhile, and the story will tell. The painter labored diligently and was well satisfied with his work. He was so confident that he should succeed in carrying off the prize, that when his picture was hung in the gallery, he placed a curtain before it, which he did not mean to take down until the last moment before the judges gave their award. The other pictures seemed to him very badly colored; the trees in them were all yellowish, their flesh color more like leather than flesh, and the tint of their seas like that of boiled greens. He felt sure that his picture far excelled such sorry daubing. When he drew aside the curtain from his picture he was gratified to see that a crowd quickly gathered round it; but the crowd did not admire. On the contrary, every one burst out laughing, and people called to their friends to come and look at this droll thing. His picture was entirely blue! What he had meant for flesh color was violet in shadow; what he had meant for emerald green was like blue ink; and his trees were of the tint of blue serge. Of course, he could not see that it was so, but his friends assured him of the fact. His enemy had poisoned his eyes with the powder, so that he saw everything as if through yellow spectacles. In a few days—taking no more of the powder—his sight was restored, and he saw how ridiculous was the picture he had painted.

The story may or may not be true, but it is quite possible, and I tell it you because, as a parable, it is entirely true. We are all painters at work upon a picture, and the picture is our own life and character. And our picture may be utterly spoiled if we take much of a certain powder. It will be more or less spoiled even if we take a little of it, and I am afraid that most of us take some. The powder is selfishness. How can we tell whether we have taken a good deal? If we have, we shall be like the painter in the story.

We shall think that our neighbors paint extremely ill. A very selfish boy (or man) has a bad opinion of most other folk. He thinks that this one is greedy, and that one is a coward; that this one is mean and that one is quarrelsome. He sees faults and vices in everybody, except in those who flatter him. An unselfish person is known by the respect he has for others. He may not think them perfect, but he believes that there are some better than himself. A selfish person thinks in his heart that there is nobody with whom he has to do, who is so fine a fellow as himself. The story of the painter is a perfect parable in making him with his poisoned eyes regard every other's work as mean and poor.

It is a perfect parable in another respect. The painter did not know what a miserable daub his picture was until the time of judgment. It is possible that we may not know what our life and character really are until the great Judge pronounces sentence. Our Lord has told us that there will be much surprise in the day of Judgment. People who have imagined that they were good and religious will find themselves terribly mistaken. Others will be astonished to find that they have the approval of the Judge.

In one particular the story is not a perfect parable. An enemy gave the painter the poison. In real life it is our friends, or those who think themselves our friends, who give it to us. They magnify our worth, they excuse our faults, they overpraise our doings, they flatter our weakness; and, though they do so in kindness, they often do us harm. It seems nice to have such friends, but they are our worst enemies. "A spoiled child" too often becomes a madly selfish man or woman. If you have a friend or a teacher who points out your faults, you will be wise to listen to him or her, for when that is wisely and gently done it is the greatest kindness that can be shown to us.—Independent (London).

CHARACTER IN THE FACE.

A gentleman who has long made a study of amateur photography asserts that its chief interest to him lies in the unconscious revelation of character in a photographed face. "If a man have any noble or mean traits latent in his nature, unknown to the world, it comes out in his photograph." Hawthorne declared that dominant family traits and likeness were always revealed in these sun drawn pictures, even though they might not be visible on the real faces of the sitters. These assertions, if correct, only illustrate a truth which is as old as mankind—that, as years go by, the character of a man writes itself indelibly upon his face. Not only the action, whether mean or noble, but the secret thoughts which are never put into deeds—the sensual imagination, the cruel purpose, the lofty hope, the kind feeling—all these record themselves upon the features, or, at some unexpected moment, peep out at the world from behind the eye —The Presbyterian.

A YOUNG minister, unexpectedly called upon to address a Sunday-school asked, to gain time: "Children, what shall I speak about?" A little girl on the front seat, who had herself committed to memory several declamations, held up her hand, and, in a shrill voice, inquired:—"What do you know?"—Morristown Banner.

OFFERTORIES IN SEPTEMBER.

For General Charities.

THE PARISH DAY SCHOOL will open for the coming season on Thursday, September 8th, the same day the Public Schools of the city begin their work.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL will be opened for the coming season on the first Sunday in October. It is expected that most of the teachers will again take charge of their classes. Some vacancies must necessarily be. These ought to be at once filled, for a class without a teacher is short-lived. The Scholars soon become irregular and losing their interest in their studies are lost to the school. We shall need more teachers. We want communicants of the Church. The more faithful and earnest they may be the more probability of success in Sunday-school teaching. The sessions are held in the morning from 9.45 to 10.45 o'clock. It is a short sesson and the demand upon one's time once a week for this work surely is not excessive. If there is any member of the parish who is willing to undertake the care of a class and feels a vocation for this work and has good "staying" qualities let such a person see the rector as soon as may be convenient that the school may be fully organized for the work this winter. If there are any teachers who know they shall be unable to take charge of their former classes they are asked to inform the superintendent of the school, the Rev. Mr. Miller, of the fact as soon as possible, that other arrangements may be made.

DONATIONS RECEIVED BY THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY:

Aug. 4th—Miss Elizabeth W. Stevenson,	$ 5 00

" 15th—G. H. P.,	2 00
" 17th—Cash,	1 00
" 17th—E. A. F.,	1 00
Total,	$ 34 00

From Garment Society 19 articles of clothing.
From Mrs. Joseph Reinboth, clothing.
From Miss Leah Russell, one bathing suit.
From Miss Marie Russell, one bathing suit.

Contributing members for August:

Aug. 12th—Mr. Sidney Harper Evans,	$1 00
" 12th—Mrs. John Heyl,	1 00
" 17th—Mrs. E. M. Rumpp,	1 00
" 19th—Miss L. L. Williamson,	1 00
Total,	$ 4 00

The donation of $30 received July 22d, entered in last report as from "The Housekeeper's Weekly," was part of the proceeds of two concerts given by Mrs. M. D. Lee, for The Fresh Air Fund. Henry Ferris disbursing agent.

Through the kindness of those who have contributed, the Children's Friend Society has taken to Atlantic City this year about 250 children for a day's outing, more than the Society has ever been able to do before, but there are still over a hundred who are anxiously waiting their turn.

Aug. 10th and 17th were the days set for the last two excursions, the train left at 8.20, but many of the children were on hand by half past six o'clock, eager to be off and see what the ocean looked like.

It is very amusing to see them when they get the first breath of Sea Air. They twist their little noses in every imaginable shape and ask where the ocean is?

On reaching the Excursion House, Mrs. Trenwith is on the porch with a kindly greeting. After putting away packages and bundles, they are ready to be off to the beach. Each child is given a bucket and shovel, and then they are ready for digging and hunting curiosities, but the water is more of a temptation and it is as much as the ladies can do to keep them from getting wet before dinner.

What's going on there a lady from the parish asked? Why its Mr. Clayton being buried in the sand, just look at their delight and how they pack the sand down with their shovels.

Mr. Graff their friend at the Merry-go-round sends for them to come and have a ride before dinner.

Next comes the dinner, which is soup, meat and chicken, vegetables, ice cream and cake; oh, what a good dinner we had some of the children said. But the first question on leaving the dining room, can't we take off our shoes and stockings? can't we go in the water? they can't resist any longer so the work commences, bath houses are hired, their dresses pinned up, and the next minute they are soaking wet, regardless of all their clothes, that don't trouble them. Mr. Hall and the Life Guard have as much as they can do to keep them from going out too far. Each set of children on the different trips seem to get more wild about the water.

Strangers stop to look at them and say why don't you put them in bathing suits? That we would gladly do, but the cost must be considered. Whilst we are talking two young ladies from Burlington, Miss Marie Russell, 10 years old and Miss Leah Russell 12, donate their bathing suits for the children next year. All go home, happy and tired with three cheers for Mr. and Mrs. Hall whom they leave at Atlantic City.

WORK IS GOING on in a quiet way by the King's Daughters, ice is sent every day to an aged lady in the parish, and many other little kindnesses are done, too small to mention.

July 13th they had their annual excursion to the Dairy, inviting others to join with them. Their next meetings will be Sept. 7th and 21st in Parish House, at half past seven o'clock.

Donation received from Mrs. Bloomfield, ... $1 00

THE CHURCH TRAINING AND DEACONESS HOUSE of the Diocese of Pennsylvania, now in its second year of life, is too well known to the congregation of St. Stephen's Church to require more than a brief notice now and here. The experiment of a training school for Church workers has proved a success, last year there were twelve resident students, and it has been thought expedient to arrange for a greater number during the coming term. The mortgage on the house, 708 Spruce street, has been completely paid off; the house has been made over as regards plumbing and drainage, of course at great expense; but so far there has been no difficulty in meeting the outlay, and to this good end the congregation of St. Stephen's have generously contributed.

There has, however, been one disappointment. The applicant for admission rarely come from our own diocese of Pennsylvania; perhaps this was to be expected in the case of resident students, but it was hoped that a great number of women would grasp this opportunity of instruction in the Bible, in Church History, in teaching, visiting, working among the poor, in any one of these branches, especially the practical ones; the opportunity seemed a great and unusual one, and so far the response has been less. Much less, than was anticipated.

So far, let us hope that this winter's experience will be different, and that many young women, eager to begin to do something, and to do it in the best possible way, as well as older women who have already begun and need the counsel and sympathy of other workers, may be enrolled among the "special students" of 1892–3. They will surely never regret it.

The charges for students are $200 a year; but for the second year of candidates, there is no charge. For non-resident students the charge is $5.00 for any single study, and for the whole scheme, $25.00 including the necessary text-books.

The Board of Managers are: Miss Mary Coles, President; Miss E. C. McVickar, Vice-President; Miss Esther Parry Aertsen, Treasurer; Miss Anne N. Sanders, Secretary; Miss Frances E. Bennett, Miss Agnes Irwin, Miss E. N. Biddle, Miss Elizabeth Morris, Miss Annie Buchanan, Miss Helen L. Parrish, Miss L. J. Hard, Mrs. Effingham Perot.

SELECTIONS.

DON'T.

The usages of good society called forth a little book with the above title. There are good usages in the Church, for in rubric, canon and tradition it is ever urging that all things be done "decently and in order." We take up, therefore, the title of this little book, and say to Church people: As you love evangelic truth and apostolic order—

Don't say Sabbath when you mean Sunday or the Lord's day.

Don't call yourself an Episcopalian, but a Churchman or Churchwoman, as the case may be.

Don't speak of a Church clergyman as an "Episcopal minister." He may only be a Priest or a Deacon. The term Episcopal means that which pertains to the office of a Bishop. Church clergyman is sufficiently explicit.

Don't speak of an acquaintance as a "Church member," as it may not convey the idea you have in mind. If you mean he is a communicant, say so. The term "Church member" is applicable to your infant child who has been baptised, for by Baptism we are made members of the Church. He who is confirmed and a communicant is not more a member of the Church than the baptized infant. He may have more privileges and a greater growth, but both the baptized and communicant are members of the Church. Speak of your friend or yourself as "baptized" or a "communicant," as the case may be.

Don't receive the element of bread or the cup in the gloved hand. Be as polite at the Lord's board as you would be at a neighbor's, to say nothing of reverence.

Don't sit during the prayers, unless you are infirm, but kneel.

Don't say you are going to hear some one speak, when you are going to Church to worship God. While we do not fail to appreciate preaching, yet why ignore the worship of God, in prayer, in hymn and in sacrament.?

Don't say Catholic when you mean Roman Catholic.

Don't speak of your Church as a sect nor treat it as such.

AFTER preaching on the occasion of the reopening of a restored Church, the bishop thanked the Churchwarden, an old farmer, for his share in the good work. "And I must thank your Lordship for your sermon," was the reply. "But I could not help thinking, as you talked about sin, that your lordship must have been a little wildish yourself when you were a young man."

"I NEVER," said Luther, "knew the meaning of God's Word until I came into affliction. I have always found it one of my best schoolmasters. Indeed, it may be most truly said, that affliction explains many a hard text, and seals many a precious promise, so that we should miss most of the meaning and spiritual blessing of the Word, if we were not more or less instructed in this school of affliction. For how can we have any experimental acquaintance with the promises of the Word, except we are brought unto those circumstances for which the promises are made.—Bridge's Exposition.

"WHEN the female martyr Agatha was upbraided, because being descendant of an illustrious parentage, she stooped to mean and humble offices"—"our nobility," she replied, "lies in this, that we are the servants of Christ."—Selected.

THIS PICTURE is from a photograph kindly taken by Dr. Vanderslice of the children invited by the Children's Friend Society to Atlantic City for one of the day's excursions, an account of which is given in the Society's report. These children were gathered together by the ladies of the Society from the poorer districts of our city. An excursion of this kind is a highly appreciated treat to the little ones, many of whom have only this to think and talk about of the great world outside the city. While the Society has given the children from time to time trips to the Park and other near places yet the ladies realize that these excursions to the sea-side, while requiring greater outlays of money, yet on the whole are much more beneficial to the poor children who have but little opportunity to get away from the crowded neighborhoods in which they live.

WHICH ONE WAS KEPT?

There were two little kittens, a black and a gray,
And grandmamma said, with a frown:
"It never will do to keep them both,
The black one we'd better drown.

"Don't cry, my dear," to tiny Bess,
"One kitten's enough to keep;
Now run to nurse, for, 'tis growing late,
And time you were fast asleep."

The morrow dawned, and rosy and sweet
Came little Bess from her nap;
The nurse said: "Go into mamma's room
And look in grandma's lap."

"Come here," said grandma with a smile,
From the rocking-chair where she sat;
"God has sent you two little sisters,
Now, what do you think of that?"

Bess looked at the babies a moment,
With their wee heads, yellow and brown,
And then to grandma soberly said,
"Which one are you going to drown?"

"THE person of bad manners is never more out of place than in the House of God. In a private house, in a parlor, and in most public gatherings he is constrained to conform to some of the proprieties. But in the Church he has little respect for the feelings of others, and apparently no fear of God. He sees people kneeling, or standing all around him. He has heard that these people believe in God, and are doing these things as an expression of that belief. But the ill-bred person, under such conditions cares not for the proprieties, the principles or anything else, it seems, of the time or place. A policeman's club would of course affect him at once; but his skin is so thick that teaching and kindly influence have a hard time in reaching his innermost self. The business sense of it would be—don't go into a gathering of people, and above all into a religious gathering where you can't act without wounding all others present."

THE VARIOUS CHARITABLE AND BENEVOLENT organizations of the Parish are ready now to begin their Winter's work. A glance at the PARISH NEWS will show what they are, when they meet, and who have been chosen and appointed to direct them. If any man or woman in the congregation can command an hour or two in a week to help with any of them, let him or her report himself at the proper time and place and take hold. They need not wait to be asked, and they need have no doubt about their welcome. There will not be much fuss made about them when they come. The Societies all mean business. They are in dead earnest. They don't talk, and they don't run after anybody to help. But they dearly like to see people come who sincerely want to do something for God or Man. Those who cannot command time can give money for the others to work with.

THE CONSECRATION OF THE REV. DR. KINSOLVING to the Assistant Bishopric of Texas will take away from this Diocese one of its most honored and trusted men. He has been for eleven years Rector of the Church of the Epiphany, which parish has steadily prospered under his administration. He will probably be consecrated at the Epiphany about the middle of October. No better choice could have been made by the Diocese to which he goes, and no one could have been taken away from this Diocese who will be more universally regretted.

THE GENERAL CONVENTION of our Church meets in Baltimore in October. This body meets once in every three years, and remains in session usually about three weeks. It is composed of two Houses; the first, the House of Bishops, containing all the Bishops. This House sits with closed doors. The second is the House of Clerical and Lay Deputies. It is composed of delegations of four Clergy and four Laymen from each Diocese. The Clergy and Laity sit and debate as one body; but a "vote by orders" may be called for on any question, in which case they vote separately, and a concurrence of both Orders is necessary to positive action. As a rule the actions of the General convention do not seriously affect the movement of the Church. To be sure, it is the ultimate legislative authority. It may, and does make what laws (canons) it pleases. If people choose to obey these laws, well and good. If they are disobeyed, it is practically impossible to enforce them. It is doubtful if any instance can be cited of any one being brought to punishment for violation of a General Convention Canon. In point of fact, the Convention does not make laws in advance, or for theoretical cases. It seeks only to ascertain and express what is the wish of the Church upon any given subject. It did try strenuously for twenty years or so to inforce uniformity in Ritual, by laying down specific and detailed rules, with penalties for their breach. But those who wished a different Ritual paid no regard to the Canons, and never suffered any Canonical penalties for their laches. A great diversity of Ritual observance grew up during the very period during which the Convention was trying to secure an uniform use. When these diverse customs had grown common, they sought the protection of law, so the Convention began the task of revising the Prayer Book. It tried to make the law fit the facts. It has been engaged at this task for fifteen years. This coming General Convention will probably complete it. The general sense of the Church seems to be in favor of having the improved Prayer Book printed and circulated without waiting for any further revision. This will, no doubt be done. A Committee which was appointed several years ago to revise the Hymnal, will also make their report. Indeed, they have already printed their report, recommending that about three hundred of the present Hymns be stricken out, and about three hundred others, which they have selected, be put in their place. There is little likelihood that the Convention can come to any agreement upon this subject. There will be some who love Hymns which it is proposed to drop, and some who love Hymns which it proposed, and nobody will be able to say very clearly why he likes the one or dislikes the other. The truth is, one likes a Hymn because he likes it; and he cannot say very much more. In a matter where tastes are so diverse it is not likely that any agreement shall be obtained. A good many sensible people think that the subject is one with which the Committee has no business any way. Even if it should "set forth" a Hymnal, nobody, or no Parish is under any legal obligation to use it. It is perfectly legal for any Parish to use any Hymn books it pleases, provided it buys them and pays for them.

The Committee will probably divide several dioceses and set off several new Missionary Districts, and elect several Missionary Bishops.

It will probably talk a good deal about the work of the Church among the Colored people of the South, and then leave the work in the same condition in which it found it.

Its chief function will be, as it has been for a century, to keep alive and reinforce the esprit du corps of the Church. It deepens its sense of solidity. It is a council of brethren drawn together from all sections of this and pagan lands. They meet each other face to face and confer upon the multiform problem of the Church's works and needs. For this purpose it is worth far more than the time and expense.

While it is in session the Church asks us all to pray God "to be present with the Council of the Church assembled in Thy Name and Presence. Save them from all errors, ignorance, pride, and prejudice; and of Thy great mercy vouchsafe, we beseech Thee, so to direct, sanctify, and govern them in their present work, by the mighty power of the Holy Ghost, that the comfortable Gospel of Christ may be truly preached, truly received, and truly followed, in all places, to the breaking down the kingdom of sin, Satan, and death; till at length the whole of Thy dispersed sheep, being gathered into our fold shall become partakers of everlasting life."

The Garment Committee will resume its duties on Monday October 3d. Although it was supposed to close in April, as usual, a great deal has been done through the Summer. At odd times (but never inconvenient times), one hundred and thirty nine (139) garments were received, and in the same way, 350 have been distributed. On June the 8th, a box containing 304 garments was sent to the suffering at South Oil City, and the remainder went in nearly equal proportions to the Children's Friend Society, to help make the "little ones" happy, and to a Parish in the city very much less favored than our own.

Contributions can be sent every Monday morning to the Parish School Building (rear of the church), between the hours of 10.30 A. M. and 12.30 P. M., or at any time, any day, to 9 South Tenth Street, if marked for the Garment Committee and name of sender written upon it.

The Children's Friend Society have been able to give over 500 children an outing this summer. Kind friends have helped in every way. Sept. 7th, seventy-five children were taken to the Park, Mr. Samuel Moore's donation of ten dollars paying for the car ride and the ride in Carousel. This was supposed to be the last excursion of the season, but the children at Bar Harbor had not forgotten the little ones. On the morning of the 17th of September, 87 children were taken to Atlantic City. It was a lovely morning, and each child seemed to appreciate its brightness. On reaching Atlantic City, they were taken on the new Pier and given a ride free on the Carousel, by the proprietors, Young & McShea.

A ride in the electric car brought them to the Excursion House, where Mrs. Trenwith had a good dinner waiting for them, which was enjoyed very much by all. Wading was their afternoon's enjoyment, each set of children bringing their curiosities to the ladies to admire. On this trip the fisherman gave several large fish to some of the little girls, which they carefully brought to the city. All went home happy and tired, saying they had such a good time.

Thanks to more kind friends, a trip to the Zoological Gardens will take place October 1st, if clear.

The King's Daughters have commenced their Fall sewing for the little girl they are trying to clothe in the Home for the Merciful Saviour. This letter, received from little Katie, will show how very much she appreciated their kindness.

My Dear King's Daughters:

I have returned from the sea shore and I enjoyed myself very much. I am well and go to school every day. I am very anxious to see you all, and hope you will come out soon. They are having a house built for the very sick children. There was a little girl and she was made well and she went home, she did not want to leave the home. Good-bye, I must close my letter, I have no more to say, with lots of love and kisses to all from your little girl. Katie Judge.

Donations received by the King's Daughters from Mrs. Nathan B. Clapp, $5.00; and fifty tickets for the Zoological Gardens.

Their next meetings will be October 5th and 19th, in the Parish House, at half-past seven o'clock.

SELECTIONS.

STRENGTH OF VOICE.

BY HAYDEN MOZART BELLINI.

The voice in speech is the chief means used for communicating our thoughts and giving vent to our feelings, and this not simply by words uttered, but by slight inflections. Emotions that we wish to conceal are betrayed by an unconscious change of pitch, an involuntary shading of tone or a change of key, major to minor or vice versa. Furthermore the feelings of one day or hour may prove to be most natural to us; methods of thought once employed may become habitual and the voice will make this known to our fellow men—that is, voice may be a more or less accurate index of character. A sunny, unselfish nature is known by a gentle, sympathetic tone, soft and mellow, yet clear and resonant; the arrogant egotist employs those heavy, grating tones which come from a distended pharynx and a throaty quality of voice; the showy, praise-seeking woman may possess a voice of full, mellow, ringing tone, yet the nature will be betrayed by absence of light and shade or a total lack of the "sympathetic" quality. A dull wit seldom has a clear, resonant voice with clear-cut articulation, nor does the logical mind use a muffled, uncertain tone or indistinct pronounciation.

While the voice betrays the condition of the mind and the emotions, its close connection with the most important organs of the body makes it reflect the physical state with accuracy. If this be true of the voice in speech, how much more true will it be of the voice in song, when the tones are more varied than in conversation!

The nerves which have to do with voice production are branches of the pneumogastric nerve and give motion and sensations not only to the lungs, the heart and the stomach, but also to the larynx, the pharynx, the trachea and the external ear. The small vocal cords are therefore in direct and intimate communication with the large organs of the body, and if one of these be irritated or diseased, the voice will feel and show a sympathetic irritation or weakness. The feeble, wavering tone of the sick room is familiar to all; nervous irritability or excitability pitches the voice in a high minor key; everybody knows how difficult it is to sing soon after eating. It is almost impossible to sing immediately after running, leaping or other severe exercise. Only a Mara could perform violent exercises and at the same time sustain a tone pure and true. Fright may temporarily deprive us of speech and great joy renders the tone tremulous, though perhaps brilliant. Whatever sets the heart into rapid pulsations affects the vocal cords. Long sickness may take away every trace of the once mellow, luscious voice; intense mental suffering or great grief, affecting as they do the whole physical being, have more than once robbed wonderfully lovely voices of all their sweetness. The voice is so complex, its connection with other parts of the body so intricate, intimate and delicate, that matters of seemingly slight importance disturb it seriously. We feel great admiration for the genius that first constructed a violin. The complicated mechanism seems marvelous, yet the violin is simplicity itself compared with the vocal apparatus of man. Here we have two small strings or cords, only two, yet capable of producing two or more octaves of tones, yes, and semi-tones, and these again divided and sub-divided, tones and semi-tones of every possible degree of light and shade. We have to consider the larynx, its size, shape, the toughness or delicacy of its cartilaginous walls; we must consider the glottis and epiglottis, the pharynx and uvula, the hard palate, the teeth, the tongue and the cheeks, the frontal and pharyngonasal cavities, the trachea and bronchi, the lungs and diaphragm, and it must be remembered that these are not dead tissue or seasoned wood, but living organs, each separate, yet all cunningly, carefully and delicately linked together, each dependent on the healthy condition and action of all the others, and all controlled by the will, the will itself being to some degree dependent on bodily health. It may therefore be asserted that a weak voice will hardly be found in combination with a strong physique, and that a strong voice in a fragile body would cause surprise. Strength of voice is in direct ratio to strength of physical constitution. As a rule we must expect to find massive bass voices or deep, sonorous contraltos in persons of large frame and broad chests, for these voices sing chiefly in the lower register, the resonance of which is directly dependent on breadth of chest. It is to be noticed also that sopranos who are not very strong physically have a weak, colorless chest register, but sometimes develop considerable power in the head voice, because these high notes require but little breath and are dependent chiefly on the resonance of the frontal cavities.

Enough, perhaps, has been said to prove that strengh of voice depends upon the general physical condition; that great power and volume must not be looked for in a small frame; that a soft, delicate, etherial quality of tone would be out of place in a person of large lungs and capacious chest. Whatever weakens the body will in all time surely weaken the voice, and whatever adds vigor to the physical powers will aid in strengthening the voice.

AT LAST.

JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER.

When on my day of life the night is falling,
And, in the winds from unsunned spaces blown,
I hear far voices out of darkness calling
My feet to paths unknown.

Thou who hast made my home of life so pleasant,
Leave not its tenant when its walls decay;
O Love divine, O Helper ever present,
Be Thou my strength and stay!

Be near me when all else is from me drifting—
Earth, sky, home's pictures, days of shade and shine
And kindly faces to my own unlifting
The love which answers mine.

I have but Thee, O Father! Let Thy Spirit
Be with me then to comfort and uphold;
No gate of pearl, no branch of palm, I merit,
Nor street of shining gold.

Suffice if it—my good and ill unreckoned,
And both forgive through Thy abounding grace—
I find myself by hands familiar beckoned
Unto my fitting place.

Some humble door among thy many mansions,
Some sheltering shade where sin and striving cease
And flows forever through Heaven's green expansions
The river of Thy peace.

There, from the music round about me stealing,
I fain would learn the new and holy song,
And find, at last, beneath Thy trees of healing,
The life for which I long.

OFFERTORIES FOR NOVEMBER.

Third Sunday—Female Benevolent Society.
Other Sundays—General Charities.

THE RECTOR EXPECTS to begin in December a course of Sunday Afternoon Lectures upon a series of special topics of current interest. As heretofore, these lectures will occupy more time than is usually allotted to sermons.

THE GENERAL CONVENTION which closed its sessions in Baltimore last week was one of the most satisfactory that has ever been held. Of course the larger portion of its time was taken up in the discussion and dispatch of that routine business, which, in the nature of the case, must accumulate in the space of three years for such a large organization as the American Episcopal Church. And of course, also, the dispatch of this business was woefully retarded by the man who feels bound to make a speech upon every resolution which comes up. He was out in great feather at this Convention, and, with that long suffering which is the characteristic of the American public, he was allowed to say his say.

The action of the Convention concerning the Prayer Book was that which most immediately cencerns the people generally. Fifteen years ago it was proposed to make a few changes in, and additions to the Prayer Book. It had not been touched for a hundred years. During that time a good many things had happened. In some ways new habits had grown up, and new needs had shown themselves. Now, the Liturgy is so carefully guarded by the Canon Law of the Church, that to change a word of it is a slow process. Such an alteration must be proposed at one General Convention and adopted; then reported to all the Dioceses; then reported to the next General Convention three years later, and approved by it.

When the subject was opened a multitude of amendments were proposed. A few of them were, from time to time, agreed upon. These have for the last few years been noted in an appendix or a preface to the standard Prayer Book. At the Convention just ended, all the proposed changes were acted upon finally, and the business closed, probably for a generation at least. A new Prayer Book will now be issued, with all the changes incorporated in it. They will not be very noticeable by the people, for they are mostly in the Rubrics, i. e., in the directions to the minister concerning the conduct of the service.

From all that can be learned the new Prayer Books will not be on sale until late in the winter, as the publishers require time to print them.

Meanwhile it would be well for all to postpone buying Prayer Books until the new one is out.

The Hymnal is in a similar situation. A committee to whom it had been entrusted, reported a new Hymn Book from which many of the present hymns had been left out, and to which many new ones had been added. Their report was adopted, and the new Hymn Book ordered to be issued; but at the same time it was ordered that the present one might remain in use if preferred. In our own Parish the old one will remain in use for the present.

The Convention erected new Missionary Jurisdictions, and elected Bishops for them as follows:

Southern Florida.—The Rev. William Crouse Gray, D. D., of Nashville, Tenn.

Western Colorado.—The Rev. William Morris Barker, of Duluth, Minn.

Oklahoma and Indian Territory.—The Rev. Francis Key Brooke, of Atchison, Kan.

North Michigan.—The Rev. Wm. R. Thomas, D. D., of New York.

It also elected the Rev. Samuel R. J. Hoyt, Missionary Bishop of Shanghai, and the Rev. Thomas A. Tidball, D. D., of Camden, N. J., Missionary Bishop of Yeddo.

A suggested union of the Parishes of St. Stephen's and the Epiphany has given rise to so many misapprehensions, that it seems well to state the truth about the matter.

In the first place, then, the project has been considered by both Vestries. It did not come as a proposal from either Parish to the other. Nor did it arise out of the necessity of either Parish. St. Stephen's is getting on very well, and the Epiphany is perfectly able to take care of itself.

But yet, it has been urged that here is a case where the whole would be greater than the sum of its parts. A careful survey of the whole situation, taking account of the religious needs of this section of the city, of the probable future of each Parish, and of the capacity of a consolidated Parish, would show that such an union would be desirable, provided, it could be done heartily and on terms mutually satisfactory. There the matter stands. The two Vestries are composed of fair-minded and clear-minded men. They will recommend for final action whatever they believe to be best for the Church in the city, after the most careful consideration, and after consultation with the authorities of the Diocese.

One of the first duties attended to on returning to the city for the winter is to go over closets and chests containing clothing packed away during the summer. Now, while you are wondering what to do with this coat or that skirt or the outgrown clothes of your children, please bear in mind that the Garment Society has a use for such things if you have not, and a committee of ladies will be at the Parish Building in the rear of the Church every Monday morning, from half-past ten to half-past twelve o'clock, to receive any packages sent to their care.

The bestowal of two new garments every year makes the donor a contributing member of the Society, and the ladies on the committee are always glad to have these welcome new garments sent in, as well as the half-worn clothing alluded to. If you do not see your name in the list of contributing members in this number of the Parish News, send a package of clothing to the Garment Society, marked as coming from you, and it will be gratefully acknowledged in the next number.

Eighty children were taken to the Zoological Gardens for an afternoon's outing, on Oct. 1st, this ended the summer work and the question now is what is to be done for the winter entertainments? Suggestions from any of the members of the Church would be a very great help, for it is very hard to think each month for some new amusement; these children have good memories and remember from year to year what they have seen, this makes it necessary to vary the entertainments as much as possible. Many of the children have been inquiring for the last month when the concerts and magic lantern entertainments would commence? They are just as eager for their winter pleasure as they are for their summer outings; and in this way the Society keeps up their interest in the children the whole year round.

The King's Daughters will hold their next meetings November 2d and November 16th in the Parish House, at half-past seven o'clock.

Haydn's Oratorio of The Creation will be given at the Temple, S. E. Cor. Broad and Berks Streets, on the evening of December 16th, under the direction of Mr. Wood, St. Stephen's organist. Among the soloists will be Mrs. Newkirk and Mr. Hurlburt, of St. Stephen's Choir. Mr. Gilchrist will conduct the chorus and orchestra, with Mr. Wood at the organ. No doubt many of our people will avail themselves of so rare a treat.

SELECTIONS.

CONSCIENCE OR CUPIDITY!

An interesting case of conscience is reported from Norristown, Pa. It is thus told for substance: A Mennonite minister in good standing named Landis, went before a Worcester magistrate and confessed that in January last he had violated the game laws by shooting a rabbit after the close of the season in which rabbits may be legally taken. He said that realizing immediately after that he had committed crime, he gave the rabbit to his nephew, who sold it to a man, by whom it was eaten. He said his conscience had troubled him ever since, and that he desired to atone by suffering the penalty prescribed by law. The accommodating magistrate at once imposed a fine of five dollars, which the preacher paid, subsequently claiming and receiving half the amount of the fine, which the law gives to the informer. Having thus appeased his conscience so far as his individual act was concerned, he lodged information against his nephew and the man who had eaten the rabbit for having respectively exposed it to sale and purchased it, contrary to the same laws. The magistrate imposed a fine of five dollars on each of the offenders, which Landis also paid, receiving in return the informant's half. A very neat little sermon this for respectable offenders against our game laws or other statutes. And now let no hardened Gospeler draw his pencil upon it, and reckon that the worthy Mennonite is presumably just $2.50 in pocket, he having made his collections from his fellow-culprits. Drowned be such pencil in the salt sea!—Evangelist.

An effort is under way in England to have a translation of the Bible made in the Jewish dialect now spoken by the majority of the Jews all over the world. As very few Jews understand Hebrew, the Bible has long been to them a sealed book. A strong, influential committee, including amongst others the names of the archdeacon of London, Prebendary Gordon Calthrop, the Rev. Messrs. G. F. Head, J. F. Kitto, H. C. G. Moule, and J. H. Scott, has been formed for the purpose of bringing out as quickly as due care will allow a translation of God's Word into the dialect approved by the most competent authorities.

VOILÀ LA FEMME!

Le monde, dans ses jugements sévères mais significatifs, emploie avec ironie cette locution bien connue: "Cherchez la femme!" Et dans toutes les intrigues, les perfidies, les hontes et les fanges de l'humanité, dans les drames affreux que les journaux nous jettent en pâture et qui nous épouvantent, il dit: "Cherchez la femme," et il la trouve. Mais aussi là où se rencontrent les sentiments les plus élevés, les passions les plus nobles, les dévouements les plus chevalresques, les abnégations silencieuses, les fatigues et les souffrances héroïquement supportées; là, où se produisent les faits qui, dans l'historie des familles et des nations, nous saisissent d'admiration, nous confondent d'étonnement, nous chrétiens, nous emparant de la locution sarcastique du monde, nous disons: "Cherchez la femme!" Et nous la trouvons. —Ainsi, vouée au meilleur ou au pire, selon qu'elle écoute les appels de la nature et de la grâce ou qu'elle ferme son cœur à ces deux voix sacrées, créature angélique ou satanique, voilà la femme!

MEN AND MONEY.

"Herein," says Mr. Ruskin, "is the test with every man, whether money is the principal object with him or not. If in mid-life he could pause and say, 'Now I have enough to live upon. I will live upon it, and, having well earned it, I will also well spend it, and go out of the world poor as I came into it,' then money is not principal with him; but if, having enough to live upon in the manner befitting his character and rank, he still wants to make more, and to die rich, then money is the principal object with him, and it becomes a curse to himself and generally to those who spend it after him. For you know it must be spent some day; the only question is whether the man who makes it shall spend it or some one else, and generally it is better for the maker to spend it, for he will know best its value and use. This is the true law of life."

HE (as the curtain falls)—"My dear, I believe I will go into the lobby to stretch my legs."

SHE—"You've been to the lobby three times to stretch your legs and the last time when you came back they seemed real weak. I am afraid you are stretching them too much."—Selected.

ONE of Queen Victoria's ladies in waiting, a charming young Irish woman, was asked to dance the reel of her country for her mistress' edification. She complied at once, and majesty was so delighted that she offered the fascinating dancer anything she liked to ask for, whereupon the greatly daring young witch quietly asked for the head of William Ewart Gladstone on a charger!

ONE DAY an Indian asked Bishop Whipple to give him two one-dollar bills for a two-dollar note. The Bishop asked "Why?" He said: "One dollar for me to give to Jesus and one dollar for my wife to give." The Bishop asked him if it was all the money he had. He said "Yes." The Bishop was about to tell him, "It is too much," when an Indian clergyman who was standing by whispered, "It might be too much for a white man to give, but not too much for an Indian who has this year heard for the first time of the love of Jesus."—Sunday-School Magazine.

THE NATIVE Christians of the Hawaiian Islands not only sustain home missions among their own people, but also among the Chinese, Japanese and Portuguese, who are living in the Islands, and they also send their representatives to Christianize Micronesia.—Sunday-School Magazine.

THE Rev. Robert Herbert Godwin, Provost of St. John's Cathedral, Kaffraria, in addressing the members of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, spoke of Kaffraria as being the most thickly populated part of South Africa, and of its importance from the point of view of influencing the natives, as its language (practically) extends from the Cape to the Zambesi. There is a rapidly growing native ministry, who reach a high standard of learning, the candidates for holy orders passing, in many cases, better examinations than those sent out from England.—Sunday-School Magazine.

IN SETTING forth recently the debt of science to missions, Archdeacon Farrar said: "Is it nothing that through their labors in the translation of the Bible the German philologist in his study may have before him the grammar and vocabulary of 250 languages? Who created the science of anthropology? The missionaries. Who rendered possible the deeply important science of comparative religion? The missionaries. Who discovered the great chain of lakes in Central Africa on which will turn its future destiny? The missionaries. Who have been the chief explorers of Oceanica and America and Asia? The missionaries. Who discovered the famous Nestorian monument in Singar Fu? A missionary. Who discovered the still more famous Moabite stone? A Church missionary. Who discovered the Hittite inscriptions? A Presbyterian missionary."—Sunday-School Magazine.

A HINDU and a New Zealander met upon the deck of a ship. They had both been converted from heathenism, but they could not speak to each other. They pointed to their Bibles, shook hands and smiled in each others faces; but that was all. At last a happy thought occurred to the Hindu. With sudden joy he exclaimed "Hallelujah." The New Zelander, in delight, cried out "Amen!"—Sunday-School Magazine.

IN THE LAST NUMBER of the PARISH NEWS notice was made of a proposition to consolidate St. Stephen's parish with that of the Epiphany. Since that time the matter has been considered in all its bearings by the vestries of the two parishes, and the consolidation has not been effected, and, so far as can be seen, is not likely to be. The difficulties in the way of such a project were known in advance to be very great, and have proved to be insuperable. It seems a pity, for the gain would have been great to all concerned. But there is plenty for each parish to do, each "standing in its own lot." There is no rivalry between them except the friendly emulation as to which can best do good to the people of this great city.

ON THE FIRST SUNDAY AFRERNOON IN DECEMBER the Rector expects to begin a series of lectures upon what has been well described as "Applied Christianity," i. e., the way in which the principles of the Christian Church are related to some of the great institutions of common life. In considering such grave and complex topics more time than that conventionally allowed to a sermon will be required for each lecture. Yet it is believed that many men who are perplexed in the attempt to adjust their religion to the exigencies of life will be glad to give the time and thought which may be needed. The order of topics will be as follows:

"Christianity and Business," Dec. 4th.

"Christianity and the Social Situation," Dec. 11th.

"Christianity and the Administration of Charity," Dec. 18th.

"Christianity and Education," Jan. 1st.

"Christianity and Culture," Jan. 15th.

"Christianity and Politics," Jan. 22d.

"Christianity and Amusements," Jan. 29th.

"Christianity and the Church," Feb. 5th.

THE RECTOR HAS RECEIVED the following letter from the Bishop, to which he has responded by sending a list of those whom he believes might reasonably be asked to contribute:

EPISCOPAL ROOMS, 1102 Walnut St.,
PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 5th, 1892.

Reverend and Dear Brother:

I am very desirous to have the scheme for the erection of a Diocesan House brought to a successful conclusion. Already much has been accomplished. A very eligible site on South Broad Street, No. 221, has been purchased for the sum of $60,000 and the title vested in the Trustees of the Diocese. In the judgment of the Committee having the matter in charge, about $50,000 more will be required to erect and furnish the proposed house.

In order to facilitate making collections for this purpose, will you nominate two or more persons from your congregation who are qualified and presumably willing to canvass either personally or by letter, those in your parish who would be likely to contribute; or if this is impracticable, will you furnish the Committee a list of names of persons to whom they may apply for subscriptions? And will you also speak of this matter from the chancel of your church, explaining the need of such a house, and urging your people to contribute towards it? I feel more at liberty to ask you to do these things because the Diocesan House will be a great benefit to the Clergy of the Diocese, and I feel sure that you will heartly co-operate in the measures necessary to its completion.

Will you kindly send a reply to this note to the chairman of the Committee, the Rev. G. Woolsey Hodge, 334 South 13th Street, within ten days, in order that an appeal for funds with which to build may be sent out by the 15th.

Faithfully Yours,
O. W. WHITAKER.

CHURCH TRAINING AND DEACONESS HOUSE.

Interest having been awakened in the "Church Training and Deaconess House," and many questions asked in regard to its work, it has been thought well to explain its objects to the women of the Church.

The need has long been felt for better-trained workers in our Sunday Schools and Mission Fields, and the first thought of those interested in forming this Institution, was to put within the reach of any earnest woman a thorough course of instruction and training at as small a cost as possible. But, when three years ago the Canon was passed reviving the primitive Order of Deaconesses, we gladly enlarged our work by adding to that object the training of postulants for this order.

It is emphatically a TRAINING SCHOOL.

Lessons are given by competent Clergymen on the Bible, Prayer-book, Theology, and Evidences, Church History, etc.; and at the close of each term the students come up for thorough examinations. Lectures on Hygiene, Cooking, and Nursing are also given, and during the three summer months the students have the privilege of living in our Church Hospital, with the opportunities there afforded for such training and practice as are given to their regular nurses.

In addition to these very great advantages, they visit and minister to the sick and erring, under the supervision of devoted women who have passed their lives in such service.

We would earnestly emphasize our desire to receive, not only those who are able to enter for the entire course, which covers two years, but any who may wish to take only a partial course; and we hope many women of education, cultivation, and refinement in our Church may avail themselves of these facilities.

Any further information will be given gladly by the House-Mother,

CAROLINE H. SANFORD,
708 Spruce Street.

Or by
MARY COLES,
President of the Board of Managers.

Or by
THE RT. REV. O. W. WHITAKER, D. D.,
Bishop of Pennsylvania.

LOST!

Lost in the church a pocket book containing papers and a sum of money. The finder will please return to the Verger, Joseph Clayton.

IN MEMORIAM.

MAJOR GENERAL S. WYLIE CRAWFORD, AT ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH, NOVEMBER 7TH, 1892.

Up in the tower
Muffled bells toll;
Sad is the hour,
For a brave soul
Has passed away.
And naught but clay
Remains to-day.

Tenderly the casket bear,
With its pall, the "Stars and Stripes,"
While the "Dead March" is the air
Wailing from organ pipes.

Up the aisle, with solemn tread,
Soldier friends are moving slow,
And the service for the dead
Is heard in accents low.

And strong men weep
And show their grief;
Their honored chief
In death doth sleep.

Anon the hymn, "Lead, Kindly Light!"
Is softly, sweetly sung;
And then a prayer, "Lord of all might,
Rest this brave soul among
Thy blessed saints, who in their strife
With sin, have gained eternal life!"

Amen.
H. A. DE FRANCE.

November, 1892.

THE SENTENCE quoted below is from a weekly religious paper, in reference to the influence of the Church on "them that are without," and speaks of her "as a boundless storehouse out of which she must bring forth garments to fit the people, and not expect the people to fit her garments."

This same phrase might apply in a fitting manner to the Garment Society, except that theirs is not a boundless storehouse, and they look to you to fill the empty spaces on their shelves with such articles as will gladden the hearts and warm the bodies of the poorer half of humanity. It is confidently asserted by those in authority that unbleached night gowns, flannel skirts and sacques, are particularly adapted to produce this effect, but other articles as well are necessary to health and comfort.

THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY had their Thanksgiving Entertainment, Nov. 22d. Over three hundred children were in the Sunday-school room long before eight o'clock, eager to see what was coming.

It was an illustrated concert by the Surricks, opening with views of Rome, London and Paris, exhibiting many views of the United States, Independence Hall, the old Liberty Bell and the steamship "City of Paris."

The hymn Rock of Ages illustrated, pleased the children very much as also did the views of the Christian Martyrs by day and night.

Many humorous views were shown, the Black Brudders, the Famous Little Brownies and many others. Some of the children have said this was the best entertainment yet, and on passing out said thank you it was very nice. Christmas is coming and with it we hope good cheer for the little ones.

Donations of candies, toys, books or fruit would be very acceptable and help to give the children a good time.

"WHATSOEVER OUR HANDS find to do, is the motto of the King's Daughters Circle of St. Stephen's Church.

Four large baskets of provisions were filled and sent to poor families for Thanksgiving. A new dress made for their little girl in the Home and a package sent to the Home of the Merciful Saviour for Crippled Children.

The Circle has now thirty-five active members, all ready to do and help others along, four or five of the members have gone to other cities but still wish to belong to St. Stephen's Circle.

The next meetings will be Dec. 7th and Dec. 21st in Parish House at half past seven o'clock.

MISSIONARY BOX COMMITTEE.

In beginning the winter's work, the Missionary Box Committee feel confident that the congregation will help them as in former years. They have already undertaken to send three boxes—one to Oregon, one to Minnesota, and one to Pennsylvania, which they hope to have ready so as to reach their destinations before Christmas. As in former years, they can make good use of anything sent them in the shape of second-hand clothing, etc.

The Committee think it well to give a resumé of how this work began, and what it has accomplished.

Last winter seven boxes were sent, valued at $838.93, and $85 was given in specials.

The Treasurer reports money received, $685.62
" " " " paid, 648.80

Balance now in Treasury, $ 36.82

Missionary boxes have been sent from St. Stephen's for many years, but the earliest records of the work that can be found is in 1878. Since then, 127 boxes have been sent by them to the missionaries scattered over the United States, valued at $11,939.17. Through the delegates to the Woman's Auxiliary, Scholarships, Salaries of Matrons of Church Hospitals, etc., are helped.

The report of the Woman's Auxiliary, of which this is a branch, to the General Convention, shows that the total work in money and boxes in the United States, for twenty-one years, as reported from 1871 to 1892, has been $3,623,505.65.

HAYDN'S ORATORIO OF THE CREATION will be given at the Temple, S. E. Cor. Broad and Berks Streets, on the evening of December 6th, under the direction of Mr. Wood, St. Stephen's organist. Among the soloists will be Mrs. Newkirk and Mr. Hurlburt, of St. Stephen's Choir. Mr. Gilchrist will conduct the chorus and orchestra, with Mr. Wood at the organ. No doubt many of our people will avail themselves of so rare a treat.

THE MOTHER'S LOYAL CIRCLE of King's Daughters, composed of women belonging to the Mother's Meeting, Miss Stoddard, President, will hold a Fair in the Parish House, Friday evening, December 9th.

OFFERTORIES FOR JANUARY.

Foreign Missions—Third Sunday.
General Charities—Other Sundays.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR to one and all is the earnest wish and prayer of the Clergy for the people of this Parish and congregation.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOLS of the Parish held their Christmas Festival on Wednesday, Holy Innocents evening at half-past seven o'clock. The carols were well sung by the children after careful training by Mr. David Wood during the Sundays in Advent. The rector, Dr. McConnell made a short address. Mr. Hall kindly consented to entertain the children by recitations, etc., and gave much pleasure to all. The Christmas tree was handsomely trimmed. Candies, cakes, and oranges were distributed to the children, and all present had a happy time.

THE REVISED PRAYER BOOK is now to be had of the book sellers. Theoretically it has been the only legal Service Book since the beginning of last Advent. But practically the Book had not been printed, so, in most Parishes the old one has remained in use. Now that the law can be obeyed, of course it will be. We hope to begin its use in this Parish on Septuagesima, the last Sunday in January. This will give time for all to procure new Prayer Books, if they wish to do so. But it should be distinctly understood there is no actual necessity for any to do so. Of course it is desirable, and no doubt will generally be done. But by far the larger part of the changes which have been made are in the Rubrics, and are for the direction of the Minister in conducting the service. The fact is that worshipers do not actually need to have books in their hands at all at any point of the service save at the reading of the Psalms. Here, because they have to read alternately they need the printed page. But in all the rest of the service they would do better to close their books, and close their eyes, and follow the Minister's voice. But long experience has shown that they will not do so. For some reason, whether because they think he may make mistakes, or because they think that upon general principles it is better to watch him, they like to follow him page by page. Now, any one who wishes to do this must get a new Prayer Book. With the old one in his hands he will be thrown out.

For at the very beginning of Morning Prayer there are quite a number of new opening sentences of Holy Scripture inserted. Then there is Rubric which says that, at certain times, (as when the Holy Communion is to follow) he will go at once from the sentences to the Lord's Prayer, omitting the Exhortation, Confession and Absolution. He will find also that a portion has been added to the Benedictus.

In Evening Prayer he will find also additional opening sentences; a Rubric for shortening the service by omitting the Exhortation, and stopping after the second collect. He will find two new Canticles, the Magnificat, and the Nunc Dimittis. He will find a number of new Versicles immediately after the Creed.

He will find also a provision for reading certain selected Psalms to be announced by the Minister at any time, instead of the Psalter for the day.

In the Burial Service he will find the Anthem divided into two portions, either one of which may be said or sung.

These are about the only changes which the ordinary worshiper will notice.

Particular attention is called to an entirely new service in the Revised Book. It is A Penitential Office, on page 48. It will be used on Ash Wednesday, and frequently during Lent, and occasionally at other times.

A MONTH AGO it became the duty of the Rector to officiate at a funeral where the body was cremated. Instead of committing it to the ground, he committed it to the consuming and purifying fire. For a long time he has believed that this is the right mode of disposing of our dead. After once seeing it done, this belief has been deepened into an abiding conviction. It is so decent, so reverent, and above all, so final that beside it sepulture has no argument for itself. The horror of sepulture is the awful burden which it lays upon the imagination of those who survive. To picture the loved and revered body changing slowly, but surely into the horrible thing which decay compels, is, to many, an intolerable burden. Cremation saves from this.

Why there should be supposed to be a Christian objection to it is difficult to understand. Whether a body be consumed in a few minutes in the roseate heat of a retort, or in forty years in a grave, burning it is in either case. Chemically the two processes are absolutely identical, save only in the length of time required. Ashes to ashes is the end in either case. The strange notion that it should be thought to touch in any way upon the question of the Resurrection of the body seems amazing.

It would be a gain from every point of view if the Church would frankly accept and endorse cremation as a fitting thing. In the country where a sweet "God's Acre" can be had and kept, it might well continue to be used as a burial place. But in a great city where a place to lay ones dead must be bought in the midst of a great cemetery, and must be paid for at a price which will allow a round dividend to be paid to the stockholders of the cemetery, where a permanent resting place cannot be guaranteed against the encroachment of a growing city, so remote and inaccessible that in the vast majority of cases the grave can only be visited at rare intervals, if at all, there to melt into a sea of corruption, what but the stolid inertia of old custom would compel a continuance of the habit?

How much better in every way if some provision were made at points in the city convenient and accessible to all, where the bodies of our dear dead could be at once reduced to ashes, and then the urns containing them be placed in niches in the Church walls, or Cloister, or in a Columbanim to be built beside God's House. Then they would abide through the years in the midst of the incense of prayers and praises of those survive, "waiting for the general Resurrection in the last day through Our Lord Jesus Christ, when the corruptible bodies of those who sleep in him shall be changed and made like unto his own glorious body, according to the mighty workings whereby he is able to subdue all things to himself."

THE PROCEEDS of the Sale of Woman's Work held in Guild Room of Parish house, on Dec. 1st, 2d, and 3d, amounted to $1059.60. The whole of this amount went directly to those who sent the goods for sale without any discount for commission or costs.

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE.

The ladies of the Garment Committee submit the following report for the year ending November 30th, 1892.

The number of members and contributors is 173; of these 110 have contributed during the year.

Balance of garments Nov. 30, 1891,	785
Garments received up to Nov. 30, 1892,	816
Total,	1601
Garments distributed up to Nov. 30th, 1892,	996
Balance,	605
Total,	1601

The distributions were to

Foreign Missions,	24
Individuals,	450
Children's Homœopathic Hospital,	25
Orthopædic Hospital,	18
South Oil City,	304
Missionary Box Society,	60
St. Mary Street Day Nursery	30
Home of the Merciful Saviour,	7
A City Church,	21
Children's Friend Society,	57
Total,	996

Figures speak plainer than words always, so comment on these statistics is scarcely necessary. Attention is merely drawn to the fact that a new year has begun for the work of this Committee, and with the generous help of former, as well as new contributors, the ladies hope to be able to relieve as many pitiful cases in the future as they have in the past.

In a city so charitably disposed as is our own, where exist institutions for the amelioration of every imaginable ill or misfortune, it has been thought best by the Committee to give their helping hand primarily to the poor of the Parish, and to such individual cases of distress as are constantly brought to their notice, rather than to bestow large donations upon Homes, etc., which are always before the public, and which never appeal in vain. Individuals are far harder to reach, and the personal interest adds to the gift, when brought face to face with the "special case."

Many pathetic, as well as humorous, incidents have occurred, for instance, one woman, on being given half-a-dozen warm, useful articles, with tremulous voice thanked the ladies for providing her with clothing enough to last her until she went to Mt. Moriah; another one could not be prevailed upon to accept any night-gowns for herself or her children, as they had never possessed any and had no use for them! A German family this, not Americans fortunately, and it is indeed an interesting study to note the needs and degrees of poverty in different nationalities.

In concluding the annual report, the Committee beg leave to state that the articles most needed at present, are men's unbleached nightshirts, infants' clothing, and dresses and aprons for women and children.

Other donations received, Miss K. B., for the Children's Christmas, handkerchiefs, stockings, mittens and eighteen little purses containing five cents each. Three hundred Christmas Cards from Miss Stevenson. From the King's Daughters five pounds of nuts, two dozen candy canes, and a large box of toys and one dozen books; candy toys from Mrs. Marion B. Smith.

Very many thanks to those who have so kindly helped to give the children a bright Christmas on the evening of the 29th of December from the ladies of the Society.

One box of toys from Miss Stevenson also received.

December the 7th two hundred children and the ladies of the Children's Friend Society were very kindly entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Kellar. The children were delighted, and it was very amuseing to hear their curious questions.

DONATIONS of fifty Christmas cards from Miss Stevenson for the King's Daughters.

Donation from Miss Sidford, $1.00.

The King's Daughters packed a box for their little girl in the Home of the Merciful Saviour for her Chsistmas.

Also filled five large baskets of provisions for poor families, with groceries, fruit and poultry. They will help the ladies of the C. F. S. on the evening of the 29th, trimming a tree for the poor children's Christmas.

Their next meetings will be January 11th and January 25th, in Parish House, at half-past seven o'clock.

SELECTIONS.

SOME STATEMENTS WRONGLY ATTRIBUTED TO THE BIBLE.

1. That the world was created 6,000 years ago. The Bible assigns no time whatever. It uses the most indefinite phrase that could be used—"in the beginning God created."

2. That man has been on this globe only 6,000 years. The Bible simply says that he was created in the image of God; but when, he says not. Man may have lived on the earth six millions, for anything that the Bible says to the contrary.

3. That there was no death till Adam sinned. The Bible nowhere says this. Some men may have, and have drawn this inference; but the Bible is not responsible for their inferences; and the record does not say whether there was, or not. The rocks indicate that there was.

4. That the world was created in six days of twenty-four hours to the day and sixty minutes to the hour. The Bible simply says, in his Hebrew idiom, that it was created in six great indefinite epochs. If some men, few or many, have taken upon themselves, to take a certain one out of the sixteen or eighteen meanings of the English word "day," and say that the Bible meant that, it himself is surely not to be held responsible for their gratuitous action. It says nothing about the length, or the brevity, of the six periods; it speaks of them as eras, or epochs, and lets them go altogether undefined.

These are samples of the statements that have been falsely attributed to this book.

What other volume is treated in like manner? Would it not be well to try and adhere a little more closely to the actual statements of the writer? It would be a good habit to get into for our own sakes, to say nothing of the advantage it would be in aiding us to arrive at, or to help others to arrive at, the truth in one of the most important departments of human knowledge.

The fact is that some hundreds of years ago, science, not as far advanced as it is now, was followed by Biblical interpreters, who were no wiser than the scientists of that day themselves; and thus mediæval science has led us all wrong, and unto this day many still cling to the errors of its former teaching.

Later science has corrected earlier science, but many persons yet adhere to the former dicta of mediæval knowledge, and the Bible gets the blame for the false science of four or five hundred years ago.—Rev. R. W. Lowrie, M. A.

Wednesday mornings and Friday afternoons in Lent—Missionary Box Committee.

THE BISHOP HAS APPOINTED the usual date for his annual visitation of the Parish for Confirmation. It will be at 11 o'clock Tuesday before Easter, March 28th.

As the Rector looks over the congregation Sunday after Sunday he sees the faces of many men and some women who have not openly identified themselves with the Church, and who ought to do so. It is a duty which seems to him so plain and obvious that he is always perplexed to imagine why they do not recognize it. He wonders if there is anything he could possibly say, which might move them to do it. They are already so evidently on the side of Christ that he cannot see why they hesitate to acknowledge what every body sees to be the fact. It cannot be cowardice, or even mauvaise honte which deters them. They are above that. It can only be that they fail to realize what the nature of the obligation is.

Why is it, then, that every man and woman is bound to be a member and communicant of the Church? It is not primarily in order that he may secure his individual "salvation" thereby. That may be achieved without. If one say boldly that the professed members of the visible Church will ultimately be "saved" and the non-members "lost" there are few who would believe him. One has only to look facts in the face to see that this is incredible. The real question is not one of personal gain or loss at all. It is a question of right or wrong doing.

The Church is the society which Jesus established for the betterment of the world. It has not always kept this purpose singly before its eyes. But in the main it has been and is true to its original aim. It does make its members good; and it does act for good upon the world. Jesus insisted that every man and woman who is at all in sympathy with Himself and with His purpose should make himself known to the society. He would not have clandestine followers. He did not ask that any one should blow a trumpet and proclaim to the world that he was about to become a Christian. But He ordained that any one who wished to be on friendly terms with Him should make himself known to the Brotherhood. Such an one is in search of righteousness. Let him therefore join the society for the promotion of righteousness which is organized about the person of Jesus, that is, the Church. He is officially received into it by the sacrament of Baptism wherein the pure water betokens the spirit of purity. The venerable Father of the Household lays his hands upon his head in benediction, and in the name of the whole society recognizes him as one of us. Then he eats and drinks with the fraternity and shows his brotherliness. It is all simple to the last degree. It was meant to be simple and easy. The conditions are easy. "Do you accept the essential facts of Christianity as they are stated in the Apostles' Creed?"

"Do you promise that, by the help of God, you will endeavor to lead a sober, righteous and godly life?" These are all. Beyond these one's doctrinal opinions may be what he chooses. His personal conduct is left to his own ordering, subject only to his own voluntary promise to endeavor after righteousness. The conditions cannot be made any easier. But therefore the Master insists upon avowal. He wants to know whom he may count upon for help, and whom he may not.

To say "I am not fit: I am not good enough," is simply trifling. Any one is fit who wishes to be fit. The wish is itself the qualification. The Master's plan is to bring this wish for goodness to a fruitful issue by setting him who so wishes in the midst of forces and influences which will produce that result. The Church is such an environment. Its sacraments and ordinances are adjusted to that purpose by Divine wisdom and by customs of human experience.

Of course, hereditary misconceptions, and common prejudices must be taken account of But is it too much to ask that candid men and women, who already strive after goodness, and who already revere the Son of Man, will look fairly in the face the facts of their spiritual life, and be guided by the spirit of all wisdom?

The clergy of the parish will be ready to meet any one half way, or the whole way, or to go to them concerning this matter upon the slightest intimation. There will be instructions upon the nature and obligation of church membership, and upon those things which a Christian ought to know and do, on Wednesday and Friday afternoons at 5 o'clock. There will be also a Confimation Class for younger people in the Guild Hall on Wednesday evenings during Lent at 7.45 o'clock.

During last Lent the Rector received a very striking anonymous letter. He does not know yet who wrote it. It was signed "A Business Woman." Its purport was that, while great pains was being taken by the Church to provide services at convenient times and places for business men, business women were being forgotten and neglected. It then went on to call attention to the large number of women who are employed daily within easy reach of St. Stephen's Church, and suggested that a service be started for them daily, like the daily one at St. Paul's for men. The suggestion seemed so wise and temperate that the Rector felt bound to carry it into action. A daily service was therefore begun, at noon, especially, but by no means exclusively, for women, with special view to the convenience of those who are employed in stores and shops. The larger business concerns cooperated most cordially. Notices were posted at Wanamaker's, Darlington's, Sharpless', Strawbridge & Clothier's, etc. The attendance numbered many hundreds during the short time the services were maintained.

It did not seem wise, without further experience, to abandon the 11 o'clock service, or to merge it into the special one. Both services were therefore maintained. But it has been determined now to merge the two services into one.

During the coming Lent, therefore, the Morning Service will begin every day at five minutes past twelve; and end promptly at twenty-five minutes of one. There will be a short address at every service.

The Annual Offering for Diocesan Missions will be placed on the Altar on Sunday morning, February 19th. This annual offering has come to be a well known and well approved institution in St. Stephen's. For the sake of those who have come to the parish within the year, we will explain the way it is done.

On Sunday morning, February 12th, the Rector will speak more in detail about Diocesan Missions. During the week which follows every family will be waited upon by a committee of gentlemen among whom the parish has been districted for this purpose. The committee simply calls to receive offerings of those who give. They will make no argument or appeal of any kind. The Rector will do all that publicly. Of course the committee will be courteously received by all well-bred people, whether they can see their way to contribute or not. The amount expected, according to a tacit agreement which has been in force for a number of years, is equal to $5 from each person. This is what we have done heretofore, and nobody is any poorer, while many a poor missionary and struggling handful of people are much the better off.

Of course there are many in the parish who cannot afford to give so much as the sum mentioned above, but there are many others who can, and heretofore have, given far more than the amount so as to make up for their poorer neighbors. There is no fear but that they will do so again. The whole amount gathered by the collectors will be by them placed in the alms-basins, Sunday, February 19th.

The Rector ventures to publish the following short list of books, for people who can do so, to read during Lent. They are not taken from among those tons of stuff which are constantly being issued as "Lenten Reading." That kind of literature is one for which he confesses to have small appetite. "Milk for babes" is very well, but pap is not very well. Beside that he ventures to hint that we are not all babes. The following books are not milk but meat:

1. The Great Discourse. (Anonymous.)
2. The Influence of Jesus. (Phillips Brooks.)
3. The Episcopal Church. (Hodges.)
4. The Incarnation of the Son of God. (Gore.)
5. The Social Law of God. (Washburne.)
6. The Destiny of Man. (Fiske.)
7. The World and the Kingdom. (Thompson.)
8. Questions of Faith and Duty. (Thorold.)
9. The Kingdom of God. (Bruce.)
10. Christus Consummatur. (Westcott.)

For a little book of daily devotions is earnestly recommended "The Daily Round:" with an introduction by Bishop Coxe.

The Committee on Lenten work will be glad to receive contributions, in money or goods, to have work prepared for the Lenten sewing.

Owing to the unusual severity of the weather during the last month, and in answer to some urgent appeals from missionaries for blankets and other warm clothing, the Missionary Box Committee of St. Stephen's Church thought it advisable to anticipate in some measure the generous gifts of the congregation to them during Lent. They trust that their confidence in their kind hearts will soon meet with the usual ready response that always comes when any known want is brought to their notice. Although a detailed report of the work cannot be made until after Lent, yet a few extracts from the letters may prove of interest:

The Rev. Mr. C. says: "Because of some criticisms on boxes to missionaries, which met my eye in the Spirit of Missions, I want to say with reference to the one sent us, that, with few exceptions, every article in it was perfectly new, and of those that had been used all were in the nicest order, and very helpful to me and mine."

The Rev. Mr. B. says: "I wish I could convey to you some idea of the great comfort secured from the portieres, [a special gift from one of the congregation] for the cold continues most penetrating. The degree to which these furnish the rectory is astonishing. The various other contents, I can assure you, are appreciated. My wife has good reason to be thankful for the warm jacket. Prosperity and happiness to St. Stephen's and its Auxiliary."

The pocket communion service, sent by a member of the committee, to a missionary who had several stations many miles apart in Bishop Hare's jurisdiction says: "It will be to me a constant reminder of the 'one communion and fellowship' that exists among the members of the 'one body' of our blessed Lord."

A touching letter from the daughter of one of the missionaries we aided last year, telling of the death of her father, asking for some help to buy some mourning, resulted, through the personal gift of some of the congregation, in sending her an outfit of mourning and eighteen dollars, for which she writes an acknowledgment. "To say we are grateful for such loving kindness cannot begin to give expression to our feeling of thankfulness to the kind and thoughtful donors who have so generously helped us. I was just racking my brain to find out how I could raise some money to pay the few small debts, not exceeding twenty dollars, so this lifts another burden. We can utilize each and every article and are so much obliged."

It may also be of interest to know that the average cost of a box is about a hundred dollars.

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE.

A winter of such unusual severity has made many demands upon the stock of clothing kept in reserve by the Garment Committee, and it has been distributed most gladly, for when the thermometer nears zero, shivering humanity abounds, and to be able to relieve physical discomfort is indeed a pleasure, a pleasure which the ladies of the Committee in great measure owe to the generous contributors whose names are on their list. To be sure, when inquiries into the occasion of the needs are made, the question might well be asked, for instance, why a tin roofer who applied for an overcoat was not able to buy one out of his earnings, but when reflecting that such arctic weather put an end to work of this sort by the day, and that a wife and two children claimed the support of this boy husband and father, not yet one-and-twenty years of age, the question was answered, and the overcoat given.

All kinds of warm clothing, for both sexes, from stockings up to coats, will be gratefully received and distributed during the expected cold weather predicted for another month.

Early on the afternoon of the 29th of December, the King's Daughters and the ladies of the Children's Friend Society were getting ready for the children's Christmas Entertainment.

The Rev. Mr. Miller had kindly loaned the use of tree from the Sunday-school, which the King's Daughters were going to trim with all sorts of funny toys and candies.

The ladies were busy filling the bags with candies and nuts. All is ready, and at half past seven o'clock the Sunday-school room is well filled.

Professor Hoy, their kind friend, entertained them with his Punch and Judy show for over half an hour; all were delighted and very sorry to see him go.

Miss Mazie E. Rose and Miss Jessie E. Tabler, from Washington, helped to make the evening very enjoyable by their singing.

Mr. William Lemly played the cornet and Miss Florence Reede gave a recitation.

Their kind friend Mr. Hall must not be forgotten, for the children always enjoy hearing him talk. "Hark, what is that?" Mr. Hall said, "I hear bells! It is Santa Claus, dressed all in furs and wishing all a Happy New Year."

The next thing to be done was distributing the gifts. Each child had some little remembrance, besides a bag of candy and a large orange. The children then go home happy, wondering who Santa Claus was. Some said it was Mr. Clayton.

February third has been selected for the next entertainment, which is to be the Original Brownie Family (in costume). Mr. A. E. Henior has them in charge. Any one wishing to see the children's delight, will be gladly welcomed by the ladies of the Society.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS will hold their meetings February 1st and 15th, in the Parish House, at half past seven o'clock.

The question has been asked, what the King's Daughters do? They do all they can to help the poor and the sick in hospitals and other places. It is for this purpose that on February 7th they will give a Musical Tea to aid them in charitable work during the Lenton season.

The following members of St. Stephen's choir, under the direction of Prof. Wood, have very kindly consented to sing:

Mrs. Emma Newkirk,
Miss Anna D. Cowen,
Miss Rebecca Lowenberg,
Mr. George Roden,
Miss Alice Burdette,
Miss Emily Young,
Miss Jennie Galligher,
Mr. C. Stanley Hurlbut.

HENRY C. OLMSTED.

IN MEMORIAM.

At a meeting of the Vestry of St. Stephen's Church, Philadelphia, on Tuesday, February 14th, 1893, the following Resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, It has pleased God in His wise providence to take out of this world the soul of our dear brother and fellow vestryman, Henry C. Olmsted;

Resolved, That we desire to place on record our grateful recollection of his high qualities as a man, a Christian and a citizen. By his consistent character and conversation he showed himself worthy of the high vocation in which he was called. In the Church's Councils, whether of the parish or Diocese, he was diligent and faithful, with wisdom and power, seeking always the upholding of the church which he loved. In his death we lament the loss of an honored associate and a dear friend;

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent with our hearty sympathy to Mr. Olmsted's family, and that they be published in The Churchman, The Church Standard, and the Public Ledger, and that they be spread upon the minutes of the Vestry.

EDW. ROWLAND, Secretary.

OFFERTORIES FOR MARCH.

Wednesday mornings and Friday afternoons—Missionary Box Committee.
March 19th, Fifth Sunday in Lent—Domestic Missions.
" 26th, Sixth Sunday in Lent—Easter Decoration.
Good Friday—City Mission.
Easter Day—Endowment Fund.

BY AN ERROR in last month's PARISH NEWS, the time of the Lenten mid-day service was set as 12.05 o'clock, it should be 12.30.

CONFIRMATION Tuesday in Holy Week, March 28th, at 11 o'clock.

The Rector desires particularly that all who are to be Confirmed will meet him in the Guild Room after the 5 o'clock service on Friday, March 24th, to sign the Parish Register, and arrange for the Confirmation Service.

THE EASTER CAROL SERVICE of the Sunday Schools, Parish Day School and Burd Orphan Asylum, will be held in the Church on the first Sunday after Easter, at four o'clock.

THE OFFERTORY ON EASTER DAY, morning and afternoon, will be for the Endowment Fund; of course any gifts marked for other purposes will be so applied.

THE EASTER SERVICES will be as follows:

Celebration of Holy Communion at 8 o'clock.

Morning prayer, Sermon and Holy Communion, 11 o'clock.

Evening prayer and Sermon, 4 o'clock.

The pew holders and regular congregation will be admitted through the north transept door. The front doors will be opened promptly at the time of service; after which all unoccupied seats will be filled at once.

AT ONE OR OTHER of the celebrations on Easter-day it is confidently expected that every communicant will pe present. To absent himself on this day cannot be regarded otherwise than a confession that he has fallen out of harmony with the movement of the Christian world. This, all sober-minded men will regard as a great misfortune. If he be wise he will at once ask himself whether the loss of relish which makes him indifferent to the feast be not due to his own spiritual ill-health? He may need food all the more because he has litt'e or no appetite. It is an ancient and reasonable custom that on two days at least in the year, Christmas and Easter, the anniversaries of His birth and resurrection, all the members of the family should gather about His table. Let there be no vacant places.

THE OFFERTORY ON EASTER DAY will be for the Endowment Fund.

This fund for the future was begun several years ago. According to a Deed of Trust, executed by the Vestry at that time, neither principal nor interest of this Endowment may be used until the principal reaches $50,000. After that, one-half the income may be used until the principal reaches $100,000. The same Deed provides that any one giving, by bequest or otherwise, $2,500 may endow a pew which shall forever have upon it any name he may select, which pew may be used, free of rent, by any person he may select. The Rector has been already notified that wills have been drawn providing for the Endowment in this manner of twenty-two pews. In this connection he begs earnestly to call the attention of a number of parishioners to this matter who might well do likewise, but so far as he is informed, have not done so. There are a number of honored names which have been on the pew list of St. Stephen's for many years. Will not those who bear them see to it that those names may perpetually abide there? By so doing, they will leave their names behind them in the Church of God on earth after they have passed to the Church above. And, better than this, they will have provided for the welfare of their fellows for generations unborn. Of course, if one really thinks that his heirs need all, and will thank him for all he has to leave, then leave it all to them by all means. But if he is not sure of that, then what better can he do than this with a part of it?

Of course the actual gifts at Easter are expected to be substantial ones. Heretofore they always have been. If there is any one thing which this Parish believes in, it is the avoidance of shams. It hates a sham offertory above all other things. It does not ask anyone to give one cent for any object which he does not believe in. But it asks the people to seriously consider such objects as are laid before them. If such objects commend themselves then to one's judgment and conscience, he is asked to help according to his ability, but not to make a pretense of giving if he does not want to.

This endowment for the future of the Parish is not likely to be of advantage to any of us, but it will prevent the disgraceful possibility of this church being compelled in the future to move away from a poor neighborhood where it is needed to a rich one where it is not needed.

THE COMMITTEE ON LENTEN SEWING makes an earnest appeal to the members of the congregation for their generous support in this work, in money and materials. If any of the Lenten Sewing Circles desire it, the committee will be glad to furnish them with garments to make. This work is of great help to many. An appeal from an orphanage, whose inmates have suffered from scarlet fever, and all bedding and clothing destroyed, has been answered by a contribution of sheeting. Over 600 garments were made and distributed last year. Cannot another hundred be added this season and so aid many more sufferers? The committee will receive and distribute every day after service.

THE MISSIONARY BOX COMMITTEE has received an appeal from a colored Missionary of the Diocese of Tennessee, for second-hand clothing for the children of his Parish school, the want of which is an excuse for their absence from the sessions of the school. Also for testaments, prayer books, catechisms, and discarded school books, such as spellers, readers, arithmetics, etc. The committee will gladly send for any package. Anything sent to the Parish House marked Missionary Box Committee will be forwarded.

ON THE evening of February 3d, the Sunday-School room was well filled with children, all were eager to see the little Brownies, and hear them sing. The evening was enjoyed very much by all. A day or so after the entertainment, one poor child called at one of the ladies' houses, and said, they have forgotten me this year, will they have any more?

The answer was, not until Easter.

THE DONATIONS AND PROCEEDS of the Tea given by the King's Daughters, February 7th, were $94.50.

Very many thanks to all from the members of the Circle for your kind donations and help, also to the members of the Choir for making the evening so very enjoyable with their music.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS will hold their meetings Wednesday, March 1st and 15th, in the Parish House, at half past seven o'clock.

ON OPENING PACKAGES of clothing sent to the Garment Committee, it is almost as easy to read between the stitches, as "between the lines" of written words, not that the stitches are necessarily so far apart, but those garments made by the givers themselves stand out markedly from those bought from the Benevolent Society or from the ready-made department of any large shop. Is it not Hawthorne who says, "a woman's best thoughts come to her when sewing?" So, during this Lenten season, let our best thoughts be at work in our brains, while our hands are busy fashioning clothing for the helpless and improvident.

A LENTEN MUSICALE will be given in Parlor "C," Continental Hotel, for the benefit of the "Home for Aged Couples," No. 1723 Francis St., on Tuesday evening, March 14th. Prof. D. D. Wood, with some members of St. Stephen's Choir, and the "Treble Cleff," have kindly offered their services for the evening.

AN APPEAL FROM MRS. BUFORD.

LAWRENCEVILLE, VA., JAN. 29TH, 1893.

MY DEAR MR. MCCONNELL:

When I saw you in Philadelphia last December, you very kindly asked me to write to you in February, and tell you about my Hospital. There are not many leisure days in my crowded life, but to-day has been one—a churchless Sunday—dreary, dark, dismal, and now the night has closed around us early and gloomily, and outside, the ghostly rain goes by in haste, and the wind is wailing bitterly. In the Hospital and Orphanage there are between seventy and eighty patients. It is hard to tell the exact number, because every day some are coming, some are going. In work like mine, among people so poor and ignorant, we can have no rules of admission or regulations, as in better conducted institutions.

The poor people for whom this asylum was built, cannot read or understand such things. The sick and helpless are brought to me without previous notice or permission. God pity them—no one with a human heart could refuse admission to such as they. On Friday, an awful operation had to be performed at the Hospital, it is over now, and the poor woman, wavering between life and death. While we were trembling with anxiety for her, an ox-cart drove up and the driver sent for me. "I found dis boy," he said, "trying to git here, and I took him up in de cart and brung him on. I don't know nothing 'tall bout him, but he mighty nigh gorn." A wretched object sat shivering in the cart, a boy about twenty, neck and face horribly blotched, his feet so swollen the poor remnants of his shoes had to be cut off, his hands and legs covered with sores, exhausted by a frightful hemorrhage, panting for breath, coughing incessantly, he could scarcely utter a word. He was taken into a warm room, seated before a blazing fire, his dirty tattered garments removed, a clean, comfortable bed prepared for him, warm, nourishing drinks given him. Meantime another cart had driven up with its mournful burden, an old woman, bowed and bent, her hands twisted with rheumatism, wasted to a skeleton, a starving creature, with a low, wasting fever and the same fatal cough. Both friendless, penniless, hopeless, dying, and the Hospital already full of creatures just as pitiful.

Last night, a poor girl died, and is lying unburied now. Consumption is so prevalent and so fatal to this race. I sometimes think it will solve the negro problem and take them all away. Two years ago, this girl's father, an honest, industrious, well to do man was taken sick, for months he languished, his wife and daughter his devoted nurses, then the end came. The woman was entirely broken down. I kept her in the Hospital, and, as she grew stronger, I gave her charge of some of the children. The girl married, but in a few months the fatal symptoms appeared. The mother begged with tears that she might bring her to the hospital and take care of her. I have never witnessed anything more touching and beautiful than their devotion, each striving to be brave and patient and hide from the other her own sufferings. For a little while the girl rallied, but when she saw her child's condition was hopeless, the poor broken-hearted mother sank rapidly. Three weeks ago she was buried in the cold, white, pitiless snow. They are all gone now, but a frail little boy now in the Orphanage.

For years I have hoped and prayed that you and Mr. Binney would come once more and see my poor work. I want to show you what a large comfortable building the new Hospital is, and the Orphanage also. They are plainly but suitably furnished, each room has a large open fire-place. It has been hard work during the fearful cold weather of the past month to keep up great fires in the thirty fire-places of the different buildings. If you could go into these rooms and see the wretched sufferers in them, you would realize how utterly helpless their condition would be without this blessed Asylum. The kindest thing my friends could do is to come and see with their own eyes if this be a charity worthy their blessed gifts. Six of these poor patients are stone blind, some epileptic and idiotic, three deaf and dumb, many hopelessly deformed, many paralyzed, many covered with scrofula, many old, worn out, all helpless.

Do you remember about twelve years ago, I can never forget it, when I was at your house in Middletown, and brought to your study my poor appeal for this Hospital, and asked you if I must send it to The Churchman for publication? God bless you for your warm sympathy, your kind interest and wise advice. The appeal was published. God's richer children built this, the first Hospital ever built for negroes. It is well that He draws a curtain before our eyes and hides the future from us. Could I have seen, could I have conceived of the misery I have been forced to witness, and vainly try to relieve all the weary years that have intervened, the wearing anxiety and fearful responsibility of providing for these helpless creatures day by day, the long night watches when the black distorted, agonized faces of these poor dead and living sufferers crowd around me and will not down at my bidding, the crucifixion it has been of all the joy and brightness of my being, I should have shrunk back appalled, and never dared with presumptuous hand to take such burden up.

Two years ago the Hospital was burned to the ground. Crushed with grief, mourning with sorrow unutterable for my poor homeless charges, I could not repress a feeling of joy and relief; my work was done, God had taken it from me. Help was sent me promptly, most generously, a nobler, handsomer, more substantial structure, rose from the dead ashes.

Now I know for me, there is no reprieve. God has laid on me the sacred duty, the blessed work of helping the poorest of His children, by His help I will try to do it faithfully and bravely, and make no moan in the years to come, be they long or short.

I know how besieged you and all ministers, and all rich people who dare to be generous and charitable, are with appeals for objects worthy and unworthy. It sickens me to read them in the Church papers. Not the least of my trials is that I too must be a beggar for these poor dumb sufferers, or else they starve.

When I was in Philadelphia, I listened to your Advent Sermon, every word was a tonic to me. By His humanity, not His divinity, shall we be judged and every poor creature whom we fail to help, or turn coldly from, shall rise up in judgment against us. I shudder at the thought. Believe me, I would not send this letter to you unless my needs were urgent and pressing.

Most respectfully,

PATTIE BUFORD.

I hope Mrs. McConnell and the dear little baby have kept well and warm all this freezing weather.

AN intelligent foreigner is said to have expressed himself after the following fashion on the absurdities of the English language: "When I discovered that if I was quick I was fast, if I stood firm I was fast, if I spent too freely I was fast, and that not to eat was to fast, I was discouraged; but when I came across the sentence, 'The first one won one one-dollar prize,' I was tempted to give up English and learn some other language."

OFFERTORIES FOR APRIL.

Easter Day—Endowment Fund.
Second Sunday in Month—Society for the Increase of the Ministry.
Other Sundays—General Charities.

THE EASTER CAROL SERVICE of the Sunday Schools, Parish Day School and the Burd Orphan Asylum, will be held on Sunday after Easter, April 9th, at four o'clock. The offerings of the Schools, collected during the year, will then be presented. They are to be given to the homes for crippled children in our city and to the Sheltering Arms. The congregation is also asked at that time to contribute.

"DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN, on Easter Day I intend, by God's Grace, to celebrate the Lord's Supper: unto which, in God's behalf, I bid you all; and beseech you, for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake, that ye will not refuse to come thereto, being so lovingly called and bidden by God himself. Ye know how grievous and unkind a thing it is, when a man hath prepared a rich feast, decked his table with all kind of provision, so that there lacketh nothing but the guests to sit down; and yet they who are called (without any cause) most unthankfully refuse to come. Which of you in such a case would not be moved? Who would not think a great injury and wrong done unto him? Wherefore, most dearly beloved in Christ, take ye good heed, least ye, withdrawing yourselves from his holy Supper, provoke God's indignation against you. It is an easy matter for a man to say, I will not communicate, because I am otherwise hindered with worldly business. But such excuses are not so easily accepted and allowed before God. If any man say, I am a grievous sinner and therefore am afraid to come: wherefore then do ye not repent and amend? When God calleth you, are ye not ashamed to say ye will not come? When ye should return to God, will ye excuse yourselves and say ye are not ready? Consider earnestly with yourselves how little such feigned excuses will avail before God. Those who refused the feast in the gospel because they had bought a farm, or would try their yokes of oxen, or because they were married, were not excused, but counted unworthy of the heavenly feast. Wherefore, according to mine Office, I bid you in the Name of God, I call you in Christ's behalf, I exhort you, as ye love your own salvation, that ye will be partakers of this holy Communion. And as the Son of God did vouchsafe to yield up his soul by death upon the Cross for your Salvation; so it is your duty to receive the Communion in remembrance of the sacrifice of his death as he himself hath commanded: which of ye shall neglect to do, consider with yourselves how great is your ingratitude to God, and how sore punishment hangeth over your heads for the same; when you wilfully abstain from the Lord's Table, aud separate from your brethren, who come to feed on the banquet of that most heavenly food. These things if ye earnestly consider, ye will by God's grace return to a better mind: for the obtaining whereof we shall not cease to make our humble petitions unto Almighty God, our heavenly Father."

THE APPEAL in last month's PARISH NEWS for school books, catechisms, etc., was so generously responded to that it has enabled the Missionary Box Committee to send a large supply of books to the Parish School for Colored Children in the Diocese of Tennessee. As the gifts had only in a few cases the names of the donors, it is impossible to acknowledge them except in this way. The Garment Committee, the Lenten Sewing Committee and the King's Daughters have helped to make the boxes sent to the Missionaries much more valuable than they otherwise would have been.

A TESTIMONIAL CONCERT WILL BE TENDERED MR. DAVID W. WOOD by the members of the Baptist Temple, on the evening of April 26th. For this occasion several of the best known soloists of Philadelphia have kindly volunteered their services, among whom are some of the principal singers of St. Stephen's Choir. "The Chorus of the Temple," will also take part. The performance will take place at the Temple, corner of Broad and Berks Streets. Tickets may be had of the Verger, and it is not doubted that many members of this Parish will gladly avail themselves.

PERHAPS the paraphrase that in the Spring a woman's musings surely turn to thoughts of clothes, may suggest that the Garment Committee are at the Parish Building every Monday morning from half-past ten to half-past twelve, to receive any clothing sent them, to be distributed as necessity demands. Sheets and Canton flannel garments are specially needed.

THE MANAGERS OF THE BENEVOLENT SOCIETY will hold a sale of the garments and household articles that have been made by the poor women during the winter, in the Guild room, on Easter Monday, from 11.30 A. M. to 1.30 P. M. The congregation is earnestly asked to come and buy these things, as money must be realized on them as soon as can be.

DONATIONS received by the Children's Friend Society in March:

Mrs. Moody, ... $1 00

DON'T FORGET THE LITTLE ONE'S EASTER. April 4th has been selected for their Easter Entertainment. It will be a Stereopticon Entertainment with refreshments. If any of the members of the church would like to see the children's delight, they will be gladly welcomed by the ladies of the society on Tuesday evening, April 4th in the Sunday-school room.

THE QUESTION has been asked, what are the King's Daughters of the whatsoever circle doing? Just what their hands have found to do. Helping with the Lental sewing, working for the fair for the Seamen's Mission, also for Missionary Box and Garment Committee.

A donation of money was sent to Mrs. Buford, also a small donation to help build a colored church in Philadelphia.

To a Mission Chapel in Reading was sent as a Lenten offering, a linen altar cloth.

This letter, received from one of the members of the chapel, will show how much their kindness was appreciated.

MY DEAR KING'S DAUGHTERS:

Your lovely and welcome gift for our little chapel reached me safely yesterday, and it will always be a source of pleasure that the altar cover for our first celebration of the Holy Communion was your gift. Such loving gifts make us feel that we serve the same Master, yet after all; "the saints on earth, and those in heaven, but one communion make." Gifts like these help us to realize, even here on earth, some of the joys of the blissful communion that awaits us in heaven. Our people will, I know, be delighted when they see their altar so beautifully covered on Easter morning, and will join with me in most hearty thanks to one and all of you, and in the earnest desire that much Easter joy and peace may be granted to you.

With love and best wishes,

Faithfully your friend,
M. C. E.

A FAIR for the benefit of the Church Home for Seamen, will be held in the Henry J. Morton Guild House, 2210 Sansom Street, on Wednesday, April 5th, from 3 P. M. to 10 P. M., and Thursday, April 6th, from 10 A. M. to 10 P. M. The committee of ladies, who have promised to have a table from St. Stephen's Parish, earnestly hope the congregation will show their interest in the charity, by visiting the fair and buying from them some of the many useful and handsome articles contributed to the St. Stephen's table.

MISS STEVENSON,
MISS M. S. WILKINS.

SOUND AND LIGHT.

TO DR. PHILLIPS BROOKS.

*BY THE REV. CHARLES JAMES WOOD.

The people heard him gladly, for his words
Were strong and wise; hearts' mysteries he knew,
And reverenced in man the pure and true;
With subtle touch he sounded spirit-chords
Till tones of creed and deed united were,
Godhood and manhood one, the Lamb's high song
Purged of all discords—sorrow, sin and wrong.
So men once more saw Faith divinely fair,
And Hope rose again in desperate days,
And Charity, from dogma's bonds released,
To all God's sons said, Peace! Still gaze,
Brave Heart! our storm has almost ceased.
Lo, rounds on clouds of contest to thy sight
God's arc of truth unto vast circling light.

*Formerly Assistant Minister in St. Stephen's.

SELECTIONS.

"THY BURDEN."

To every one on earth
God gives a burden to be carried down
The road that lies between the cross and crown;
No lot is wholly free;
He giveth one to thee.

Some carry it aloft,
Open and visible to any eyes;
And all may see its form and weight and size;
Some hide it in their breast,
And deem it thus unguessed.

Thy burden is God's gift,
And it will make the bearer calm and strong,
Yet, lest it press too heavily and long,
He says, "Cast it on me,
And it shall easy be."

And those who heed His voice,
And seek to give it back in trustful prayer,
Have quiet hearts that never can despair;
And hope lights up the way
Upon the darkest day.

Take thou thy burden thus
Into thy hands, and lay it at His feet.
And whether it be sorrow or defeat,
Or pain, or sin, or woe,
Upon thy path below.

It is the lonely load
That crushes out the life and light of heaven,
But borne with Him, the soul, restored, forgiven,
Sings out through all the days
Her joy, and God's high praise.

A LESSON FROM THE LITTLE HEATHEN.

"A lesson from the little heathen!" I hear one of our young readers exclaim, "Why, I should like to know what the little heathen can teach me? I have been giving my pennies that what I know may be taught to them. Can they teach me anything?" I think if you could walk with me through the streets of Yokohama this pleasant afternoon, I could show you that there are some things you could learn from these poor children, who are not so very different from yourselves, except that you know about Jesus and they do not. As we cannot take such a walk, shall I tell you one or two things that I think the heathen boys and girls in Japan can teach you in America?

Well, the first thing is to be good-natured. The other day I saw a large party of school-boys about twelve years old having a nice time wrestling. Two boys would be picked out to wrestle together; a third boy would hold a short stick between them until all was ready, and when he took it away it was the signal for them to begin. They would clasp each other around the waist and struggle, and all the others would shout the name of one or the other, until at last down they would go and one would be victorious; but when they got up the boy that was defeated was just as good-natured as the other. As I stood and watched them a long time, I did not see a single boy get angry because he was beaten. I could not help thinking of the many times I had watched boys at their sports in America, and seen some little fellow lose all self-control because he had been beaten in a game. I wished that some of the American boys who sometimes pout and say, "I won't play any more," when things do not go to suit them, could see these Japanese boys at there play, and learn from them the lesson of good-nature.

Have you a little baby at your house, and do you like to take care of it? How many times I have seen a girl or boy very cross and unhappy when asked to mind the baby for a while! I do not suppose there are any children in the world who have to take care of the baby so much as the boys and girls of Japan. A very common way of taking care of the baby is to have it tied upon the back and carry it around in this way; there are no cradles in Japan. I often see little children carrying a baby brother or sister upon the back when it is hard to tell which is the larger. Of course it is hard to play with such a burden, and many times they can only stand still and look on to see others play. There is a very interesting book called "Unbeaten Tracks in Japan," written by a lady, who says in it that the Japanese babies never cry; but I have seen the children who were taking care of the baby, trying very hard to amuse the baby and stop its crying. I have never yet seen any one cross or unkind to his or her little baby brother or sister. Is not this loving patience a sweet lesson for you to learn from them?

THE RECTOR EXPECTS TO BE ABSENT Sunday May 14th, having accepted an invitation to preach the annual "Sermons on the Sage Foundation" before the University of Cornell.

"FOUNDER'S DAY" AT THE BURD ASYLUM is an institution which seems to be greatly misunderstood. It is not a "free lunch," nor the occasion of a city excursion. It is a day when the members of St. Stephen's parish are formally invited to be present and assist at the annual award of honors to the children. But for several years such a crowd of people have congregated who have no connection with either the Parish or the Asylum that it has been thought well this year to change the day, and to add a notice to the card of invitation asking that it be presented at the door of the Asylum. In a word, it is sincerely desired to have the presence of those who are invited, and not of other folk.

REPORTS IN DETAIL.

FEMALE BENEVOLENT SOCIETY.—The managers of the Female Benevolent Society of St. Stephen's Church present to the congregation the twenty-eighth annual report. During the season of 1892 and 1893 the following money was received and expended:

Balance from last year,	$ 79 57
Offertory,	159 50
Subscriptions,	76 50
Sales,	662 91
Total,	$978 48

Donations—One piece of gray flannel from Mrs. Adams, one piece of red flannel and one piece of canton flannel from Miss McDonall.

Amount paid Sewing Women,	$520 95
Materials,	457 53
Total,	$978 48

Fifty-six women received regular work during the winter. Two thousand four hundred and fifty-three garments and other articles were made by them.

April, 1893. H. C. WILKINS, Secretary.

THE MISSIONARY BOX COMMITTEE.—The Committee present to the congregation their annual report.

Ten boxes and one pocket communion service have been sent, valued at $1,213.26, to Maryland, Minnesota, California, Georgia, two to Virginia, West Virginia, South Carolina, Missouri, Pennsylvania and South Dakota.

The Treasurer reports money received and expended, $747.67.

The difference in the money reported and value of the boxes, is owing to the discount taken off purchases, and the valuable gifts of new and second-hand clothing. Over two hundred school books were kindly donated for the use of a colored school in Tennessee. ANNE N. SANDERS, Sec.

THE ALTAR SOCIETY presents its Ninth Annual report to the congregation:

The Chancel Committee has performed the duties of caring for the chancel and vestments, and reports that during the past year gifts were received of wheat, oats and corn, for decorating the Church on Thanksgiving Day, palms for Palm Sunday, five dozen Easter lilies and a box of white roses on Easter Sunday.

The Embroidery Class report:

Work donated.—Black stole and surplice to St. Stephen's Mission, Norwood, Pa.; surplice and set of altar linen to Dalton, Ga., surplice to Rev. C. W. Tyler, Missionary at Guthrie, Oklahoma; surplice to St. George's Mission Chapel, Philadelphia; pulpit fall to All Souls' Church, Philad'a.

Through Miss Sandford: Set of green altar hangings, and set of book markers to St. John's Church, Salisbury, Conn.

Through Mrs. Taylor: Set of red book markers to Home for Aged Couples, Philadelphia.

Through Miss Stevenson: Set of altar linen to St. Phillip's Church, Bolivar, Tenn.

Work ordered.—Two black stoles for Church of Our Father, Hull's Cove, Mt. Desert; surplice for St. Mary's Church, Washington; white stole for a Church in Minnesota; white altar cloth and hangings for Chapel at Burd Orphan Asylum, Philadelphia; fair linen cloth for Faith Chapel, Reading; set of altar linen prepared; white stole worked by a member for the Warden Burd Orphan Asylum.

Work for our own Parish.—One purple stole; one fair linen cloth embroidered; three embroidered linen chalice veils; four embroidered linen corporals; one embroidered white stole; three surplices; six lavabo cloths; one embroidered linen chalice veil presented by Mrs. Nixon.

Instruction in embroidery has been given this winter by a member of the class to the Altar Society of the Church of the Crucifixion.

It is earnestly hoped that for the coming year a few more ladies can undertake to work regularly once a week in the embroidery class.

Mrs. C. E. Wetherly,

April 4th a Stereopticon Entertainment was given to the children. Prof. Harper's pictures were enjoyed very much by all. Prof. Hoy very kindly offered to do the lecturing, and the ice cream and cake helped to make the evening one of the most enjoyable the children have had. Over 800 children have been entertained and taken on excursions this year. The Winter work will soon be over and it is hoped that the kind friends that remembered the little ones so kindly last year will not forget them this, so that many more little pale faces will get a breath of sea air. Many thanks to those who have so kindly donated bathing suits. What will we do with the other fifty children who have not any suits? hire them you say, but that takes money that could be used to give them more pleasure in some other way.

Donation of Easter cards from Miss Stevenson. Donation from Mrs. Taylor, April 19th, $1.00. Clothing from Altar Society, to be given by the King's Daughters to the poor.

A very enjoyable evening was spent in the Guild room of Parish House, April 19th. The King's Daughters engaged Prof. Harper to give a Stereopticon Entertainment to the members of the Royal Legion and some children of the Children's Friend Society.

The pictures were very fine but made much more enjoyable by Mr. Hall who so kindly consented to do the lecturing.

The King's Daughters will have their next meetings, May 3d and 17th, in Parish House at half-past seven o'clock.

OFFERTORIES FOR JUNE.

Third Sunday in Month—Children's Friend Society.
Other Sundays—General Charities.

THE DONATIONS to the Home for Aged Couples as reported in the May number of PARISH NEWS, should have been "set of book markers and stole."

THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY received just too late for the last month's report, a donation of clothing from the Garment Society, also two bathing suits.

Owing to the uncertainty of the weather, the children have not had any outings yet, but many of them have been around inquiring, and are looking forward to having a good time and also to getting a breath of fresh air.

Many of these children are crowded together, five and six, or more, in one room, the air is close and one can scarcely get their breath on entering, even the streets they live in seem stuffy.

Will you not remember these little ones when you are sight-seeing in Chicago this Summer? Let us try to keep sickness away by giving them all the fresh air we can. Last year we had four excursions to the sea-shore, taking between 60 and 65 children on each trip, making about 250 in all.

We hope to do more this year if funds will permit. Each trip costs between $60 and $70, but it does sights and sights of good.

From Mrs. Lundy for Fresh Air Fund,	$1 00
Mrs. Kate Burton,	5 00
Contributing Member, Miss Kate Liddell,	1 00

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS will have their next meetings on June 7th and 21st, in the Parish House, at half-past seven o'clock.

Money received in May:

Miss Sidford,	$1 00
Miss Sanders,	1 00
Total,	$2 00

Work done by the King's Daughters in May: An entire outfit of clothing made for little Katie Judge at the Home of the Merciful Saviour.

Officers elected at the last meeting:

Vice President.—Miss Ella Riffel.
Treasurer.—Miss Nellie Miller.
Secretary.—Miss Minnie Koch.

THE "RELIGIOUS PAPERS" have fallen foul of the Rector for the alleged fault of having said in a sermon that "he would not pray against the cholera." The Presbyterian does it after this fashion:

"This is to trifle both with God and the cholera. . . . Were the principle involved in it carried to its full extent, all prayer for Divine interference in human affairs would be set aside, because evils are preventable, if the causes of them are ascertained and duly removed by human effort. We believe in work, but we believe also in prayer. Man must do his part, yet God must incline and help him to do so. Prayer and effort must go together. We must clean our streets, but we must ask God, at the same time, to stay the cholera. . . . Let us have the praying spirit, as well as the working. . . . Keep person, domicile, city, and village clean, but at the same time pray, Lord, keep the cholera from our land."

The Southern Churchman is still more severe, as thus:

"We have heard of such preaching before. No doubt means are to be used to avert cholera, but after we have used all the means, then what? Our Lord and Master has told us what. He knew no daily bread would come to our tables unless we plow and fertilize and sow seed, and unless we do these it is in vain to pray. But we do them suppose, do them wisely and well—then what? Christ has told us the next thing: 'Our Father, give us this day our daily bread.' Dr. McConnell did not think of Christ's teaching, but gets up in his pulpit as a minister of Christ, and tells people prayer for the averting of cholera is unwarranted, clean up. He may find out that Philadelphia can be made as clean as Broek in Holland, and yet the cholera sweep it as with a besom of destruction."

Well, well, all this zeal might have been saved for some better purpose if the editors of these papers had simply taken the trouble to find out the truth and to abstain from bearing false witness. For as it happens the Rector did not say what they quote, but something altogether different. What he did say was this:

"The Bishop of the Diocese has very properly set forth a form of prayer against the pestilence, which form it will probably be the duty of this congregation to use. But before they, in common with the people of the city, will be in a position when they can use such a prayer without mockery there are some things incumbent upon them to do."

He then proceeded to point out what those things were. He believes in praying: believes in it so sincerely that he is not willing to do it in any sham or make-believe fashion. He believes that our good Father who is in Heaven is even more ready to hear than we are to pray. But he finds no warrant either in religion or common sense for believing that God will give him any good thing for the asking unless he honestly becomes to the extent of his ability a co-worker with God; or that He will save him from any threatened evil, unless he himself shall first do what lieth in him to protect himself.

He said that the people of Philadelphia as a whole had, at that time, no right to ask God to save them from a pestilence, because they had refused to do what they acknowledged to be their duty in the way of means to prevent it; and that whenever they should be ready to work, then, and not till then, would they have the right to pray. He is glad to think and to believe that the community is coming to a better mind with regard to this whole question.

CHOLERA MAY POSSIBLY VISIT the city this summer. Everybody hopes that it will not, and there is no occasion to get into a state of mind even if it should. It is a "filth disease," and, as a rule, is only fatal to filthy people. We hope not many such are to be found in this parish. Nevertheless it often happens that very cleanly people are compelled from no fault of their own to live in very filthy surroundings. Practically that is the situation of every decent person in Philadelphia. There has been what looks like an honest effort on the part of the city authorities to get the city cleaned up and put into a better sanitary condition. The effort has been honest, and to some extent successful. At the same time it must be said that city officials are a good deal more successful in explaining why the city is not clean than in getting it clean; in admonishing the citizens as to their duties rather than in discharging their own. There is not much use in grumbling about this. So long as good and otherwise sensible men continue to be governed in their voting at municipal elections by political considerations things will not be better than they are now. At least we have now a Chief Executive of the city whom we believe to be an honest man and an intelligent one, and that is a combination we have not had for a good while. His power is very great, though not absolute. It would be a most excellent thing if the people of the city should get into the habit of looking to him when they find that they are suffering from any municipal ill, and of asking him why it is not corrected, and just when it will be.

But in case an epidemic should occur, which may God forefend, the clergy of this parish would gladly be of any service which it is in their power to render. In such a case they will not hesitate to call upon the more fortunate members of the parish to aid the less fortunate ones. Very many of our people are able to go out of the heat, and dirt, and peril of the city for the summer. We are heartily glad they can. But if it should be needful to draw upon them for food, or care, or burial of any less fortunate one, we will not hesitate to do so. We will do so the more boldly because they have always responded cheerfully to any appeal which has been made.

And we beg once more that when serious illness of any sort enters any household in this parish the clergy may be advised of the fact. May be they can be of no use, and may be they can. In an experience somewhat prolonged we have never known or heard of a case where a sick person was the worse for being visited by God's Minister, and we have known very many who were the better for it in every way. The truth is that when one is seriously ill he thinks about some things which are little in his thoughts while he is well; and he would be very glad indeed to hear a prayer said at his bedside, while he is far to shy to suggest such a thing to the family. Let the clergyman have the opportunity to come to his room, as a friend of the family, without making any fuss about it, or trying to "prepare" him for it, and the result will be peace for body and soul.

ON MONDAY EVENING, May 29th, the Girl's Friendly Society gave an entertainment at their closing meeting, which consisted of solos and choruses interlined with some very bright witticisms. The music was very well rendered and reflects great credit upon the girls.

The sparkling wit that pervaded the first part, called forth peals of laughter. The second part was made up of dialogues and recitations, all of which were written and arranged by Miss Emma Edwards, who deserves special mention for the clever manner in which she rendered the different characters she assumed. Miss Katie Hinds displayed unusual ability and afforded great amusement by her bright delineation of the Irish girl, as well as the clever sayings in the first part.

All the girls did exceedingly well, and are worthy of commendation, inasmuch as they got up the programme without any assistance whatsoever. And it was pronounced by all, as one of the most successful entertainments given in St. Stephen's Parish. The Sunday-school room was well filled by the Friendly Society and their friends.

THE BOYS' GUILD of St. Stephen's Church went up the Delaware River to Andalusia on Decoration Day, and there had their annual pic-nic, spending the day in games of base ball, athletic contests, and other sports.

Prizes were awarded for the following contests:

100 Yards Dash, won by Chas. Fogg. Time, 15 seconds.

220 Yards Dash, won by Chas. Fogg. Time, 39 seconds.

¼ Mile Walk, won by Harry Christenson. Time, 2 minutes, 50 seconds.

Running Broad Jump, won by Edgar Spackman. Distance, 12 feet.

Standing Broad Jump, won by Edgar Spackman. Distance, 7 feet.

Putting the Shot, won by Chas. Fogg. Distance, 22 feet.

MÈRE ET RITUEL.

Lors de la récente consécration de l'évêque Hortsmann à la cathédrale de Philadelphie, l'archevêque Ryan crut devoir terminer son discours par quelques paroles adressées personnellement au nouvel évêque. "Bientôt, ditil, vous nous donnerez à tous votre bénédiction en tant qu'évêque. Mais votre première bénédiction épiscopale doit être pour votre mère présente à cette solennité et si justement fière de son fils." Tous les regards à ces mots se tournent vers le nouveau prélat. On lui met la mître en tête, la crosse à la main; puis il descend les marches de son trône, s'avance jusqu'à l'entrée du sanctuaire, et alors on voit paraître une grande dame aux cheveux blanchis, qui tombe aux genoux de l'évêque, son fils, pour être bénie par lui. A peine a-t-elle reçu cette faveur pour elle si douce et si précieuse que, n'écoutant que l'impulsion de son cœur, elle jette les bras au cou du nouveau pontife et l'embrasse avec une respectueuse tendresse. Il va sans dire que cet incident, qui n'était nullement dans le programme, causa dans l'immense congrégation une sensation profonde.

Une dame connue pour l'élévation de ses pensées fit à ce sujet la remarque suivante: "J'eusse préféré voir Mrs. H. ainsi bénie par le nouvel évêque se lever et bénir à son tour son fils agenouillé devant elle. C'eut été en pareille circonstance une revendication et une consécration solennelle de la plus haute dignité qui soit au monde, la dignité de mère!

Aussi longtemps qu'il y aura des mères sur la terre, Dieu y montrera par elles ce qu'est un amour vrai.

Une femme n'oublie jamais qui a parlé bien de son mari ou admiré son enfant.

La distinction entre le profane et le sacré est illusoire; pour l'homme vraiment religieux tout est sacré.

De même la distinction entre le naturel et le surnaturel; tout ce qui est vrai est naturel.

SELECTIONS.

"If it is true that our Master estimates our services by what they cost us in effort or self denial, it follows that when we give money without at all feeling it, we shall not get much credit for it in heaven." "I will give you $10. I will never feel it," said a gentleman to a friend of ours. "Give me something you will feel," was the reply.

THE BUSINESS MAN'S LESSON.

He was an upright business man. In his heart he believed the religion of Christ to be true. But he was very busy, and when Sunday came he was thoroughly tired. He had become interested, too, in his Sunday paper, so he gradually dropped off going to church. His wife went regularly, and sometimes the children. One morning, just after his wife had set out, he was comfortably seated reading the money article, when he heard his boys talking in the next room. Said 8-year-old Willie: "When you grow up shall you go to church as mother does, or stay at home like father?" "I shall do neither," said the one decidedly. "When I'm a man, I shall have my horses, and be on the road Sundays, and enjoy myself." The newspaper suddenly lost it attraction. Between the father and it there came a picture of his boys associating with loose men, and drifting into a godless, reckless life, and of himself looking on it in his old age as the fruit of his self-indulgence. Five minutes after he was rapidly walking toward the church. When the service was over, his wife, coming down the aisle, saw him waiting at the door. There was questioning, glad surprise in her eyes, but he only remarked that he had taken a walk, and thought he would join her on her way home. Next Sunday, however, the whole family were in their pew, and all the rest of the day there was a kind of peace about the house that reminded him of his boyhood days in his father's home. And who will say that he was the less fitted for another week of business life by this share in the services of God's house instead of "staying at home all Sunday to rest."—S. S. Times

You must quarantine against immoral literature. This is a deadly poison. It comes in various and attractive disguises. Exclude it as you would the germs of a pestilence. To effectually protect your homes from its baleful influence, supply them with healthy literature. It is as easy to cultivate a good as a depraved literary taste in children. They will read something, and what they read will exert an important influence on their character. Let your most earnest effort be exerted to keep out of the house the sensational novel, the blood-curdling tales of vice, the obscene pictures, the whole flood of wicked, degraded, crime-producing literature that threatens us. Put in reach of your families good papers, magazine and books. Bait them with a chaste story, and keep them supplied with wholesome knowledge. A bad book may prepare your son for the cell of a felon. A bad novel may vitiate the whole life of your daughter.

There's many a trouble
Would break like a bubble,
And into the waters of Lethe depart,
Did we not rehearse it,
And tenderly nurse it,
And give it a permanent place in the heart.

There's many a sorrow
Would vanish to-morrow,
Were we but willing to furnish the wings;
But sadly intruding,
And quietly brooding,
It hatches out all sorts of horrible things.

Build a little fence of trust
Around to-day;
Fill the space with loving work,
And therein stay.
Look not through the sheltering bars
Upon to-morrow:
God will help thee bear what comes
Of joy and sorrow.

OFFERTORIES FOR JULY.

For General Charities.

THE RECTOR HAS ENGAGED to deliver a course of five Lectures in the Summer School of the "University Extension," upon the Religious History of the United States. They will be delivered at the University at 5 o'clock each day, July 10th to 14th.

THE REV. MR. MILLER is away, enjoying his well-earned vacation.

MRS. S. WIER MITCHELL has made a beginning which it is earnestly hoped will be followed by many in St. Stephen's, in providing for the perpetual endowment of her pew according to the terms of the Endowment Trust, adopted by the Vestry a year or two ago.

By the generous gift of $2500 the pew has been endowed in perpetuity as a Memorial to the Father and Mother and Sister of the giver. Provision has already been made in wills for the endowment of other pews; but Mrs. Mitchell is the first to be the almoner of her own gifts for this good purpose.

WE ADOPT AS OUR OWN the following editorial article from "The Kingdom," and commend it to the attention of all whom it may concern:

Before the Christian starts upon his vacation, he sees to it that some brother or sister of his, who is not so well off as he is in this world's goods, is provided with the means of taking a vacation also. The Christian does not anticipate any pleasure from a selfish vacation. Unfortunately, as the affairs of men are at present divided, the people who do not need any vacation get more vacation than they know what to do with, while the people who are literally dying for a vacation get none at all. Why, simply to live as we live all the time, would be paradise to many a hungry soul in the hot tenements of Philadelphia.

If the Christian is not very rich, he puts five dollars into an envelope and lays it in the alms basin on the Sunday before he goes, marked "For the Children's Friend Society." If he has more money than that he puts in more.

And suppose that the Christian has a horse and carriage that is to stand idle most of the summer, he leaves directions that some family of his acquaintance shall be taken out in that carriage at least twice a week during his absence—some family that must otherwise walk or go by cable car, or else he sends a note to the Rector, in which he says: "My horses and carriage are at your disposal twice a week during July, August and September. If you will send a note each week to such and such an address the carriage will call wherever you may designate."

And suppose that the Christian has a greenhouse or garden, where the flowers will be blooming all summer, or fruit will be growing. He leaves directions with his gardener before he goes away, and in the course of these directions he tells the gardener to take all the flowers and all the fruit that can be picked each week and carry them to such and such houses on such and such days. The amount of thoughtlessness that is locked up in green-houses is incredible. These beautiful flowers that blaze away beneath the sultry roof of glass might give so much delight to somebody!

And suppose that the Christian has a great space of cool lawn around his house. He does not want a rabble of people trampling over it. Of course not. But why not choose a quiet family or two, and say: "Use my grounds this summer during the hot days. Come in out of the close air of your narrow rooms, and bring the baby with you, and sit under the shady trees." Why, that would double the delight of the sea breezes, to know that the pleasant places at home where not locked up, to be only looked at by the tired eyes of weary people, but were open and were giving strength and rest to those who need it.

The Excursions have now commenced for the season. About 100 children were taken to the Zoological Gardens this month, as we had a number of tickets left over from last year that Mrs. Clapp so kindly donated.

It was very amusing to hear the strange names many of the animals had given them by the children. Tigers were called big pussies; Seals were Eels, and Peacocks, Turkeys.

But what gave them most pleasure was feeding the animals, especially the elephants. Old Bolivar stood there with his mouth open, waiting for a cracker that might by chance, fall into his open mouth, then there would be shouts of laughter.

One poor little girl, so anxious was she to go, that she came shoeless and stockingless, much to the pity of several children. However, she was provided with both. A very kind little girl gave her a second-hand pair that she might look a little like the rest of the children and have a good time.

We hope next month to commence with the Sea Shore Excursions, for they do the children so much good, and give them something to talk about the whole year.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS will have their next meetings July 5th and July 19th, in Parish House, at eight o'clock.

BISHOP WALKER, of North Dakota, writes:

"Our city of Fargo was swept on last Wednesday, June 7, by a most disastrous fire. Many claim that it was more destructive in proportion to population and property than that at Chicago.

"A fierce south wind was blowing and notwithstanding extraordinary exertions on the part of the citizens to stem the tidal wave of fire it swept away probably one-fifth of the city, or about 150 acres of thickly populated ground. The loss is estimated at $3,000,000. It is a serious blow to us, but the people are courageous. Many noble helping deeds were wrought by our people in the midst of the alarm and destruction.

"I am glad to say that our church and the 'Roaming Catholic Cathedral' were untouched. I, however, lost my entire library of about 4,000 volumes. All my pictures, furniture, works of art, even my clothing, were consumed. I am realizing the absolute desolation of a man who has not one book on hand that he can call his own. What solitariness can be greater?"

SELECTIONS.

"YOU KNOW the wish of my heart; I have uttered it to you more than once. It is to see the mutual hatreds by which Christians are separated dwindle and disappear in face of the multiplying attacks of atheism. I recognize with joy that these hatreds tend continually to vanish from among you, and give place to love. In England I have seen the dawn of this mutual love. It was with deep emotion—shared, I am sure, by all present—that I found myself seated, with my eminent and venerable colleague, Cardinal Manning, at a Protestant meeting attended by Anglican bishops and ministers, all manifesting equal delight in being thus able to work together, without a single allusion to the things that still divide us, in a great work of humanity and mercy. It was clear to me that we are no longer separated, the most of us, save by habits, prejudices and interests. Mighty hindrances, no doubt, and not to be overcome in a day; but it is no small matter when hatred ceases and gives place to love."—Cardinal Lavigerie.

IN THE minds of most laymen there lurks more or less impatience concerning missionary work, and the subject seems to produce ennui or out-and-out skepticism with some. Robert Louis Stevenson has belonged to the class of the prejudiced, to which it may be added that he has never given evidence of an especial interest in religion. Yet after having had an exceptional opportunity of studying the workings of missions in a far-away land, he writes as follows in the British Weekly: "I suppose that I am in the position of many other persons—I had conceived a great prejudice against missions in the South Seas, and I had no sooner come there than that prejudice was at first reduced, and at last annihilated. Those who deblatterate against missions have only one thing to do—to come and see them on the spot. They will see a great deal of good done; they will see a race being forwarded in many different directions, and I believe, if they be honest persons, they will cease to complain of mission work and its effects."

AT ONE time Drs. Onderdonk, Wainwright, and Schroeder, were the three chief preachers in Trinity parish, and a witty layman undertook to give the style of the dogmatic Onderdonk, flowery Schroeder, and courtly Wainwright, as exemplified in brief sermons on the text: "Two beans and two beans make four beans," somewhat as follows: Dr. Onderdonk: "The Church in her wisdom has decreed that if two beans be added unto two beans, the product shall be four beans; and if any self-sufficient mortal shall presume to question this conclusion of the law and the prophets, together with the canons, let him be anathema maranatha." Dr. Schroeder, after enunciating his text, was supposed to wake at sunrise, wander into the dewy fields, and pluck one pearly bean after another, and finally go into ecstasies over the quartette of shining beauties which he held in his hand. But the point of the satire was reached in Dr. Wainwright's case, who was made to say: "It has generally been conceded, and nowhere that I know of denied, that if two beans be added unto two beans, their product shall be four beans. But if there be in this intelligent and enlightened audience, any who may venture to have conscientious doubts upon the subject, far be it from me, my brethren, to interfere with such a person's honest convictions."

VIE CHRÉTIENNE.

A notre époque, ce que l'humanité déçue par le langage et la vie de tant de faux chrétiens demande, ce sont des faits, ce sont des vies! Les théories, les discussions, les belles paroles ont lassé les esprits sérieux de ce temps et les ont rendus sceptiques. Ils ne croient á l'excellence d'une doctrine qu'en voyant la supériorité de la vie. Très-peu parmi eux lisent la Bible; très-peu sont édifiés par le rituel; mais tous lisent la vie des chrétiens et subissent la salutaire influence d'une vertu vèritable!

L'ecclésiasticisme avancé, ou ritualisme, ou pharisaïsme, ou traditionalisme, n'a jamais eu pour objet la rèalisation de la divine parole: "paix sur la terre, bienveillance aux hommes." Il n'a réussi qu'à semer la division et la haine entre les différents membres de la famille chrétienne, enseignant comme doctrines divines des ordonnances humaines.

THE Christian Union says: "The Episcopal Church is not disturbed by controversies over fundamental questions of doctrine, which have of late years agitated other denominations. It now gives its attention to matters pertaining purely to worship, or the carrying on of the great beneficial enterprises of the Church. It is small wonder that such a Church has a great and growing attraction for many who have no relish for weary theological disputes and tedious heresy trials."

"WHAT is an agnostic?" asked Rollo, who was reading something about Huxley.

"An agnostic," replied his Uncle George, "is a man who loudly declares that he knows nothing, and gets mad and abuses you if you believe him. He says he doesn't know anything, but he really believes he knows everything."

"DO YOU really believe that an ass ever spoke to Balaam?" queried a man who prided himself on his intellect. Coleridge, to whom the question was put, reflected very calmly for a few moments, and then responded: "My friend, I have no doubt whatever that the story is true. I have been spoken to in the same way myself."

EXCUSES.

So you are not going to church this morning, my son? Ah, yes; I see. "The music is not good." That's what you go to church for, to hear music. And the less we pay, the better we demand.

"And the pews are uncomfortable." That's too bad—the Sabbath is a day of rest, and we go to church for repose. The less work we do during the week, the more rest we clamor for on Sunday.

"And the sermon is so long, always." All these things are to be regretted. I would regret them more sincerely, my boy, did I not know that you will often squeeze into a stuffed street car with a hundred other men, breathing an incense of whisky, beer and tobacco, and hang on a strap by your eyelids for two miles, then pay fifty cents for the privilege of sitting on a rough plank in the broiling sun for two hours longer, and come home and talk the rest of the family into a state of aural paralysis about the "dandiest game you ever saw played on that ground."

Ah, my boy, you see what staying away from church does. It develops a habit of lying. There isn't one man in a hundred who could go on the witness stand and give, under oath, the same reasons for not going to church that he gives to his family every Sunday morning. My son, if you didn't think you ought to go you wouldn't make any excuses for not going. No man apologizes for doing right.—Robert Burdette.

AMBITION.

"Never relinquish the great object of your ambition, whatever it may be. Let it be, more or less distinctly, ever present in your mind. Let it exert a controlling influence over all your actions. In the first place, have some definite aim to your life—some distinct and leading object of your ambition, and be ambitious to accomplish it. In choosing an object of ambition choose a worthy one, in behalf of which all your strength, all your higher and nobler faculties of your nature, may be enlisted. Have an aim that you may unblushingly and proudly exhibit to the light of day, and for which you may safely challenge the respect of all. Then pursue it earnestly and steadfastly. No matter what discouragements assail you or place themselves in your way, keep right on in the pursuit of your knowledge. If your progress be slow, still persevere and make it sure. Do sorrows come to you? They come to all. The continued adherence to the great plan of usefulness which you have laid out will do as much as anything to brighten your path, even when grief and gloom evershadow it."

OFFERTORIES FOR AUGUST.

For General Charities.

DURING the absence of the Rector, the Assistant Minister, Rev. Mr. Miller, is in charge of the Parish. He can be found during the week in the Parish House at 11 o'clock each day.

THE RECTOR, Rev. Dr. McConnell, as Chaplain of the First Regiment, National Guards, went into camp with officers and men, and on Sunday evening of July 23rd, held service and preached to the Regiment from the text, "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."—Gal. 6: 7.

After leaving camp he started off on his summer vacation, expecting to stay for a few weeks with his family at Watch Hill, R. I. While there he will officiate and preach in the Church of that place for two Sundays. After this he will go into the woods for his annual fishing and hunting trip.

THE MEMBERS of the Choir of St. Stephen's Church, with the Organist and Choir Master, Professor D. D. Wood, take their annual vacation during the month of August. They will be gladly welcomed back on the first Sunday in September.

July 19th seventy children with their care takers were anxiously waiting at the Camden Ferry for the time to start for the ten minutes of seven train, to Atlantic City.

A glance at their bright little faces was enough to show how delighted they were at the thought of a day's outing.

When all were seated in the car it was very amusing to hear them talk about the trip. One said, "I was up at four o'clock." Another, "I could not sleep half the night." Then another asked what time it was? When told half past seven, said, "Oh! I thought it was nine o'clock!"

One small child asked if that was "Lantic," meaning the first stopping place after we left Camden. "Have you a hymn book?" was the next question. Never being asked for one before of course we were not provided, however, the young lady managed to entertain her friends at her end of the car with a number of popular hymns.

On reaching the Excursion House, Mrs. Trenwith was on the porch to receive the children. Hats, wraps, and packages were disposed of, then each with a shovel and bucket in hand started for the Beach. Almost the first question asked was, "Can't we take off our shoes and stockings?" The keys of bath houses which Mrs. Trenwith had so kindly given them the use of, were sent for, and about twenty-five children were put into bathing suits, others not quite so fortunate had to wear Gingham Aprons. Now comes the fun; Mr. Clayton gave each in turn a dip in the Ocean, and it was very funny to see the more timid ones run when they would see him coming, all the time wanting to do as their friends had done. For about two hours they thought of nothing else, and were it not for dinner, it would have been hard to get them to leave the water.

Half past twelve o'clock they went to the Excursion House, where Mrs. Trenwith had a dinner of soup, meat, chicken and vegetables, ice cream and cake for desert. They all behaved nicely and enjoyed their dinner.

But the Beach was the attraction and many could not resist the temptation of taking off their shoes and stockings again, others gathered shells and crabs and asked all sorts of funny questions.

One little girl asked "what time the whales came up." Another wanted to know "if she would be allowed to take home some sand?"

At five o'clock they were given tea and sandwiches, and as we had the Dancing Room all to ourselves just before train time, the children were permitted to have a little dance, and it was noticeable, that the one that was so anxious for the hymn book was the best dancer on the floor.

We are indebted to the Penna. R. R. Co., for the favorable rates at which they took the Excursion, and to the Conductor and Brakesmen who did everything in their power to make us comfortable on the trip.

The King's Daughters had their annual excursion on Saturday afternoon, July 29th, accompanied by their President, Mrs. Vanderslice.

They went to Wilmington on the steamer Brandywine and saw the Old Swedes' Church, built in 1698. Had a very enjoyable ride in the Electric cars to Shellpot Park, had lunch on the grounds, returning home by the steamer City of Chester, the ride home being made delightful by the moonlight.

There will not be any meetings during the month of August.

They have contributed in July to the Children's Country Week Association, Ice and Flower Mission, and the Children's Friend Society.

Acting Secretary.

Let us try to touch other lives on the positive and helpful side. "Share with me your beliefs; I have doubts enough of my own," said Goethe. Do not talk of your ailments, your worries, your disappointments.

THE ALTAR SOCIETY OF
ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH,
PHILADELPHIA.

I.

This Society shall be called The Altar Society of St. Stephen's Church, Philadelphia, and shall meet annually on All Saints' Day, at which meeting a Secretary and a Treasurer shall be chosen and the Committees of the Society appointed.

II.

Its object shall be

1. The care of the Altar Furniture, Vestments of the Clergy, and everything appertaining to the Chancel, which belongs to the due and reverent performance of Divine Service.
2. To assist other Churches as far as possible in making suitable provision for the worship of the sanctuary.
3. To direct and send Parish News to the members of the congregation.
4. To prepare the work for the Lenten Sewing.

III.

The Rector of the Church shall be ex-officio President of the Society, and preside at all meetings, when present, and nothing shall be done without his consent and approval.

IV.

Any lady, being a communicant in the Parish, may become a member by being elected thereto by a majority vote of the members and approved by the Rector.

V.

The members of the Society shall be divided at the beginning of each year into the following Committees:

1. The Chancel Committee.
2. The Sewing Committee.
3. The Parish News Committee.
4. The Lenten Sewing Committee.

The heads of the above Committees, to be appointed by the Rector, shall, together with the Secretary and Treasurer, constitute the Executive Committee, which shall have general charge of the work of the Society.

VI.

These Laws shall not be altered except by the consent of the Rector, and by a vote of two-thirds of the members present at a regular meeting.

VII.

The Treasurer will receive donations from any member of the Parish for the use of the Society.

SELECTIONS.

THE DECALOGUE IN RHYME.

1. "Have thou no other gods but me,
2. Unto no image bow thy knee;
3. Take not the name of God in vain,
4. Do not the Sabbath Day profane;
5. Honor thy father, and mother, too,
6. See that thou no murder do.
7. Abstain from words and deeds unclean;
8. Steal not, though thy state be mean;
9. Of false report bear not a blot,
10. What is thy neighbor's covet not."

—Old Scotch Version.

THE LOYAL CHURCHMAN.

In speaking of a loyal Churchman, there is not meant one who is bigoted, but one who honestly believes that there are reasons for his loving his Church with a very firm and true affection.

Many persons imbibe the notion that it matters very little with which of the many religious bodies one is connected. It is true that a person can lead a very sincere Christian life and yet not be connected with this Church, but as you have opportunity to know more of the history and the principles of the Protestant Episcopal Church, you will be convinced that you will find in it the stimulus to a holy life, and the means of usefulness, such as may not elsewhere be furnished for you. If you are thus persuaded, you will be loyal and true. You will think charitably of others, but you will cling with unswerving devotion to the Church of your choice and affections.

You may hear objections made to your Church, but they are objections which can all be fully answered, and which need not give you one moment's uneasiness. In maintaining your loyalty the following considerations will prove helpful:

First. You are connected with a Church which has a lineal descent from apostles; which has numbered holy martyrs in its ranks; and which has given birth to some of the noblest names which appear upon the annals of the past.

Second. You are connected with a Church which cares for its members from the cradle to the grave; which makes no distinction between rich and poor; which follows you with holy words throughout all of your career, and which will encourage you to lead a sober, righteous, and godly life.

Third. You are connected with a Church which honors God as He has revealed Himself to us as a Trinity of three Sacred Persons: the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost; and which teaches you to revere Him as your Creator, Redeemer, and Sanctifier.

You must not be surprised to find those who, not appreciating the value of this Church, and perhaps not being friendly to some of the scriptural doctrines and usages which it maintains, presume to attack it. Ever consider that their assaults would not be made if they were to go to the trouble to understand what the truth really is.

You will now and then hear some of its own members complaining of some of its features, and you may hear controversy and partisan opposition; but be not moved by any of these things. There will be differences of opinion so long as men see in part. Avoid numbering yourself with parties, but consider that one of the admirable features of a catholic (universal) Church is the very fact that it can embrace those who hold differing views upon minor points.

Now and then you may be tempted to dislike some of its arrangements, or to wish that it were differently constructed; but it is true wisdom not to let our own whims or fancies rule you, but to submit them to what the wisdom of pious men in ages past have thought would tend to God's glory and to man's welfare.

Your loyalty will often be put to the test, and sometimes in very painful ways, but you will never regret standing firm for the truth and laboring in every proper manner to uphold that which has had so many signal evidences of God's approval; and which you are to transmit intact to those who come after you.

—Rev. J. W. Shinn, D. D.

NATURE never provides for man's wants in any direction, bodily, mental, or spiritual, in such a form as that he can simply accept her gifts automatically. She puts all the mechanical power at his disposal—but he must make his lever. She gives him corn, but he must grind it. She elaborates coal, but he must dig for it. Corn is perfect, all the products of nature are perfect, but he has everything to do to them before he can use them. So with truth; it is perfect, infallible. But he cannot use it as it stands. He must work, think, separate, dissolve, absorb, digest; and most of these he must do for himself and within himself. If it be replied that this is exactly what theology does, we answer it is exactly what it does not. It simply does what the green grocer does when he arranges his apples and plums in his window. He may tell a Magnum Bonum from a Victoria, or a Baldwin from a Newtown Pippin. But he does not help me to eat it. His information is useful, and for scientific horticulture, essential. Should a special pomologist deny that there was such a thing as a Baldwin, or mistake it for a Newtown Pippin, we should be glad to refer to him; but if we were hungry, and an orchard were handy, we should not trouble him. Truth in the Bible is an orchard rather than a museum. Dogmatism will be very valuable to us when scientific necessity makes us go to the museum.

General Charities, ... $27 68

OFFERTORIES FOR SEPTEMBER.

For General Charities.

SUMMER IS ABOUT OVER. Soon the warm weather will pass away. The people will settle down in their accustomed places, and active Church work in the city parishes will be resumed. Perhaps many in this congregation of ours have been thinking of what they ought to do for others, and how best they can help the Church in the work she has to do in our portion of the city. It does seem as the city increases in size the shorter time there is to do active work. The fashion of spending a greater portion of the time in the country or at the sea-side of those well furnished with money and leisure, greatly impairs the parishes in the heart of our city life. But soon the work here will begin. What will you do?

"THERE ARE DIVERSITIES of gifts but the same Spirit. And there are differences of ministries but the same Lord." The Church has so many channels of work. So many ways there are to be of use. In our own parish we have many societies. Would it not be well for those willing to work in the parish to look at the list of our societies with their times of meeting, the names of directors, etc.? and then at the earliest opportunity, upon your return to the city, let the Rector know just what you would like to do, or better still, to let him know what you feel you are best able to do for the Church and your fellow-men.

THE PARISH HAS a goodly list of societies and organizations for work. The members are in earnest, and when help and assistance are asked for, it is because there is work to do and willing hands alone are invited to come and take hold.

The Altar Society, with its Chancel Committee; its Library Committee, Embroidery Class, Order Committee, and with these also the superintending and management of the Lenten Sewing.

The Female Benevolent Society, with its Board of Managers, Cutting Committee, Parcelling Committee, Distributing and Paying Committee, Selling Committee, Special Orders Committee, Examining Committee, and Garment Committee.

The Missionary Box Committee.

The Sunday-school, with its various classes; Infant School and Bible Classes.

The Mothers' Meetings.

The Children's Friend Society.

The Boys' Guild, with its Singing Class.

The Girls' Friendly Society.

And besides all these, from time to time, special work for young men who have placed themselves ready to respond to the calls of the Rector.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL of our parish will open for the Fall on the first Sunday in October at 9.45 A. M. The children have had a long vacation. They will be gladly welcomed back to the school. There will be need of more teachers, owing to several vacancies in the classes that must be filled. There are many communicants in the parish the size of ours, that have plenty of time to do some Church work. The appeal for teachers is made to such as these. Teaching is not easy work. So much is demanded. Love of children, aptness to teach, regularity of attendance and punctuality as well. Then an interest in the religious work and a feeling of responsibility as to the advance in Christian growth of the children committed to one's care. Other Church work there is an abundance, but as things are as they are, it does seem the care of the Sunday-school children is one of the most urgent duties that the parish is bound to fulfill. If any teachers find they cannot enter upon their work this Fall, they will please notify the Rector as soon as may be, that other arrangements for the classes may be made.

THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY is an organization that has deservedly met with the approval and has received the help of the members of the congregation. It began in a small way to give attention to the neglected and little favored of the poorer children about us. It has grown in size, and by the generous support of the people, it has been enabled to do quite a large amount of good to very many children. It is a society managed by ladies, who do the work of the society themselves, having no agents or paid assistants. They do not send the children to the sea-side or to the country, but they take them by the hand and say come with us. And after all else said or done it is the personal ministrations of faithful and interested people that lift the load from many a tired and weary heart. If all our charities could be done by ourselves and not by strangers, the world would be a better and happier place. The neighbor is loved and helped, and he knows it, and he feels a different person, not merely because he has been helped, but because those about him cared enough for him to help him.

As I write the poor children are calling to know if there will be room for them on the next Excursion, August 30th. One poor child said: "I have not been any place this summer."

"Can't Mary go?" asks another. Her mother was sick, so her friend pleads for her. "I was in the country a week, but I never saw the ocean; can't I go?"

Their faces brighten, for they have been in a state of uncertainty until they see their names written in the book and told to be at the place of starting five minutes before six o'clock. "Oh thank you; much obliged;" off home they start looking very happy.

A poor girl, weary from work, perhaps fourteen years of age, with a very torn dress, said, "I have never been anywheres."

One can hardly realize what these trips do for the children this warm, sultry weather. Many of them have been disappointed by the Country Week Association not having funds to carry on their work, we therefore feel very strongly tempted to have another Sea Shore Excursion in September, trusting to our kind friends helping us to carry on the Winter work.

The next excursion, August 30th, will be called the Bar Harbor Excursion, as the donations from kind friends there are enough to cover the expenses of the trip.

Questions like these are asked: How are you getting along? What are you doing for the children? The answer is having excursions as often as our funds will permit. August 9th a party of 90 were taken to Atlantic City. Again on the 16th of August 86 more, and each set of children seem to enjoy it more than the last.

It is very pleasing to hear the children say "I never had such a good time," also to have their parents come and thank you, saying John, or Mary, never had such a good time in their life. Many of the little girls wanted their faces red, saying they wanted mamma to see what a good time they had.

One of the children, while in bathing, came running out to tell there was some kind of a fish with wings floating out there. When told to catch it and bring it in, it proved to be a small dead chicken.

One whose experience was founded on visits to the Sanitarium on the Delaware River, wanted to know what made the waves roll in all the time when there was'nt any steamboats passing. And the person she asked had to give it up.

Another, when the train was crossing a bridge over a small lake, wanted to know whether there were any whirlpools in there.

The idea of most of them was that all the things mentioned in the Geography books, from a whale to a waterspout, ought to be seen on the first glimpse of the ocean.

After next Wednesday's excursion about 325 children have had a day's outing at the sea shore.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS' first meeting will be September 20th, in the Guild room at half-past seven o'clock.

THE BOYS' GUILD of St. Stephen's Church will meet after the long vacation on the first Friday in October. It is hoped that the old members will all be in their places when the roll is called. Any boy over thirteen years of age can be voted in if he be willing to conform to the rules of the Guild.

SELECTIONS.

THE WAY TO A HAPPY LIFE.

Lay nothing too much to heart; desire nothing too eagerly; rejoice not excessively, nor grieve too much for disasters; be not violently bent on any design, nor let any worldly cares hinder you from taking care of your soul, and remember that it is necessary to be a Christian (that is, to govern one's self by motives of Christianity) in the most common actions of civil life.

"Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by Him."—Col. 3: 17.

"He that would not fall into temptation must have a presence of mind, a watchful eye over himself; he must have great things in view, distinguish betwixt time and eternity, or else he will follow what passion, not what reason or religion suggests."—Bishop Walson.

THE DEATH of the Right Rev. Dr. Alexander Gregg, on July 11th, removes one of the elder Bishops, who although set over an organized diocese, was in reality Bishop of a region which was almost wholly missionary. The setting off of the two large jurisdictions of Northern Texas and Western Texas still left under his charge an enormous area to which his energies were devoted, for which he lived and in the service of which he died. The election of Bishop Kinsolving, as his assistant, no doubt was a great relief to his declining years.

In closing its editorial comment upon the death of Mr. Drexel, the New York Tribune used these striking sentences: "Death has stripped many rich men of all their acquisitions. Throughout his life Mr. Drexel saved great sums of money by giving them away, and therefore he has carried priceless possessions into the other world."

PRAYER.

In the old heathen times, a man in certain circumstances might perhaps, with a clear conscience, have prayed to a Dionysus or an Aphrodite to consecrate his acts of drunkenness or debauchery; but, thanks to the preaching of the Galilean fishermen, we have got beyond that now; and universal experience declares the fact that genuine private prayer (for I do not speak of course of repeating routine formularies), which is the vital element of a noble moral nature, is to the coarse, sensual, and selfish man, an atmosphere which he cannot breathe. Take, therefore, young man, the apostolic maxim with you—Pray without ceasing. Keep yourself always in an attitude of reverential dependence on the Supreme Source of all good. It is the most natural and speediest and surest antidote against that spirit of shallow self-confidence and brisk impertinence so apt to spring up with the knowledge without charity which puffeth up and edifieth not. What a pious tradition has taught us to do daily before our principal meal, as a comely ceremony, let us learn to do before every serious act of our life, not as a cold form, but as a fervid reality. Go forth to battle, brave young man, like David, with your stone ready, and your sling well poised; but be sure that you are fighting the battle of the God of Israel, not of the devil. Whether you have a sword or a pen in your hand, wield neither the one nor the other in a spirit of insolent self-reliance or of vain self-exhibition; and, not less in the hour of exuberant enjoyment than in the day of dark despondency and despair, be always ready to say,—"Bless me, even me also, O my Father!"—Professor Blackie.

EVENING SERVICE AND SERMON beginning today, October 1st, at 4 o'clock.

IN THE DEATH OF MRS. CRAWFORD ARNOLD this Parish has lost one of its most valued members, and this city one of its most distinguished women. Of the irreparable personal loss to some this is not the place to speak. What was said of her by one of the city papers is all true: "She united in her winning personality and qualities of mind and heart the finest characteristics of the substantial old Philadelphia families with which she was connected. There have been few movements, religious, philanthropic or social, in which women had a share within the past twenty years in Philadelphia in which Mrs. Arnold has not taken a prominet part. No woman who has died in a decade in this city will be more extensively or more sincerely mourned." She was beautiful in soul and body.

May she rest in peace; may perpetual light shine upon her!

A DEACONESS WILL BE ADDED this fall to the working force of this Parish. One of the first and best of the graduates of the "Training School for Deaconesses" has been secured. Among the first works which she will undertake will be a Sunday afternoon class for children of parishioners. Last winter Miss Sanford the Deaconess' House-Mother had such a class with admirable results. She will not continue it this winter however, and our Deaconess will take it up. It is not a Sunday-school class precisely. None will be admitted to it except upon personal application to the Rector. The teaching will be such religious instruction as Christian parents would gladly give to their Children if they felt themselves qualified to do so. Of course no one can ever take the place of the father and mother in teaching a child "those things which he ought to know and believe to his soul's health;" but in cases where the parents are perplexed either as to what to teach or how to teach, they will be glad to take advantage of the offer of a trained teacher, able and willing to do just the thing which they think they cannot do.

Parents who wish to secure this advantage for their children for an hour on Sunday afternoons will please speak to the Rector about it.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL HAS opened for the Fall and Winter season. The sessions are held in the morning at 9.45 o'clock. The teachers are expected to report for work and if possible they are asked to be early in charge of their classes. Nothing helps so well to keep the scholars in attendance as regularity or punctuality on the part of the teachers. If you are unable to attend the school this year please report the fact to Rev. Mr. Miller who has charge of the school.

THE RECTOR HAS IN SOME WAY MISLAID the addresses of the following persons, and would be glad to secure them:

Edward E. Barr, Mary Jane Hall, Charles Bowen, D. R. Richardson, C. Irvine Walker, Mrs. Mollie B. Ashcroft, Luther P. Mason, Miss Mary Wightman, Miss Annie T. Seabrook, Samuel Weatherill, Edward C. Weatherill, Mrs. Jennie L. Robinson.

THE BOYS' GUILD of St. Stephen's Church will meet after the long vacation on the first Friday in October. It is hoped that the old members will all be in their places when the roll is called. Any boy over thirteen years of age can be voted in if he be willing to conform to the rules of the Guild.

CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY.—Donations received by the Society in September:

Sept.	7, Mrs. T. P. Chandler,	$5 00
"	14, Miss Dutilh,	2 00
"	17, E. C. B.,	1 00
	Total,	$8 00

From Mrs. Wimley, two large boxes of fancy cakes for the Excursion, August 4th.

August 30th was the last Sea Shore Excursion for the season.

Over 325 children have had a day's outing to Atlantic City this summer.

Fifty children were taken to the Zoological Gardens for an afternoon's outing.

But the summer work would not be complete unless they had an Omnibus ride.

There are yet some poor children who have not been any place this summer. The Excursion of September 30th, takes just as many of these children as two coaches will hold, starting from Parish House, for an afternoon's outing to the Dairy, at Fairmount Park. Ice cream and cakes will be given them for refreshments.

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE will resume its duties on Monday next, October 2d.

Since the last report two Garments have been received and one hundred and forty-two distributed. The hours and the place will be as heretofore. from 10.30 A. M. until 12.30 P. M., in the Parish School Building, rear of the Church.

Monday,	2d.—Mrs. Reinboth,	Miss Cleemann,
"	9th.—Miss Stoddard,	Mrs. Lammot,
"	16th.—Miss Sidford,	Mrs. Muirheid,
"	23rd.—Miss Dutilh,	Mrs. Stratton,
"	30th.—Mrs. Reinboth,	Miss Cleemann.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS of St. Stephen's Church will have their next meetings Oct. 4th and 18th, at half-past seven o'clock.

To the Editor of THE PARISH NEWS.

The next term of the Church Training and Deaconess House will begin Oct. 4. The object of the House is not only preparation for the Diaconate, but the better training of Church workers for their work. The opportunity is here given for thorough instruction in the Bible, Church History, the Prayer Book, and other studies, and the students also receive a practical training, and are taught how best to visit in hospitals and among the poor and outcast. It is earnestly desired that this work should be brought before the women of our Church, who feel the need of deeper knowledge, and it is hoped that there are many who desire to lead more consecrated lives, and who will gladly take advantage of these privileges. Students can either reside in the house, and give up their whole time, or can continue to live in their own homes, and come to the House for one or more courses of instruction. Further information will gladly be given by any of the Managers, or by Miss Sanford, at the House, 708 Spruce St.

MARY COLES,

President Board of Managers, 2111 Walnut St.

The following is the two years' course of study:

FIRST YEAR.

Tuesday: Life of Christ, Miss Aertsen; History of Prayer Book, Rev. L. M. Robinson.

Wednesday: Acts of the Apostles, Miss Coles; Christian Evidences, Rev. Wm. Ely; Practical Training.

Thursday: Hygiene and Home Sanitation, Seneca Egbert, M. D., Ancient Church History, Rev. R. S. Eastman; I and II Corinthians, Prof. Micou.

Friday: Practical Training.

Saturday: Missions.

SECOND YEAR.

Monday: The Collects, Rev. Wm. Ely; Church History, Rev. J. R. Moses; Practical Training.

Tuesday: Bible Class Teaching, Miss Biddle; Liturgies, Rev. L. M. Robinson,

Wednesday: The Thirty-nine Articles, Rev. Wm. Ely; St. Paul's Epistles, Miss Coles; Practical Training.

Thursday: Emergencies (Advent Term), Seneca Egbert, M. D.; General Epistles, Prof. Micou; Old Testament, Prof. Batten.

Friday: Practical Training.

Saturday: Missions.

THE GREAT DIFFICULTY AND ITS REMEDY.

One great difficulty in Church work is the inexperience of the workers. Many ladies of the very best disposition find themselves at fault for want of training. They need knowledge and practice in the use of knowledge; but they seldom think of fitting themselves for activities in which they might be exceptionally useful. It is not altogether their fault, because, until recently, there has been but little opportunity for systematic learning.

In other churches there have been many opportunities of learning many things. We read, for example, that in Chicago, during this year of many distractions, Mr. Moody's "Bible Institute" has been in active operation, with as many as one hundred devout women regularly studying the Scriptures and the best methods of practical Christian work. We hear, moreover, that one hundred other women are already entered for the winter term of work and study. That such devotion must bring large results of usefulness in the communions in which they exist is evident; but, until recently, hardly anything of the kind has been known in the Protestant Episcopal Church. The good works of men and women have been done in a hap-hazard sort of way, without personal training or any systematic preparation of the workers. Under such conditions it is simply marvelous that so much has been actually done. With a better system, what is there that might not be done?

In Philadelphia there is now an opportunity of personal training in the knowledge and work of the Church which could hardly be excelled. We print elsewhere a letter from Miss Mary Coles, calling attention to the programme of studies in the "Church Training and Deaconess House." It ought to be understood that while this House has been established with a primary view of the training of deconesses, it is equally intended for the instruction and training of devout women who have no intention or expectation of entering the diaconate for life. Now, there is a large class of young women whose lives are frittered away in mere social inanities, and whose personal dignity would be enormously raised if they should devote an hour or two per day or per week to the studies proposed in the curriculum of the Church Training House. There are also many married women whose lives would rise into something more like intellectual dignity if, to such an extent as may be possible, they were to do the same thing. If one hundred intelligent women, married and unmarried, were to take regular courses of study in the Training House under the accomplished gentlemen and gentlewomen who have consented to act as instructors, the effect of their devotion would be felt in every department of Church work in this city long before twelve months had passed, and their influence would spread abroad throughout the length and breadth of the country. We commend this suggestion to the serious consideration of all to whom it applies. We refuse to believe that Mr. Moody's "Bible Institute" in Chicago can be crowded summer and winter with eager students, and that the Church Training House of Philadelphia cannot be made as fully beneficial to the women of the Church in this great city.

THE GIRLS' FRIENDLY SOCIETY will resume its work for the winter, on Monday, October 2nd, when the regular classes in millinery, dressmaking, gymnastics, current topics, plain sewing, and embroidery will commence.

The class in cooking, in charge of a graduate of Mrs. Rorer's school, will re-open the first Thursday in November.

SELECTIONS.

La concentration de la population dans les grandes villes, particulièrement aux Etas-Unis, est un des caractères de la civilisation moderne et ne saurait manquer d'avoir de très-graves conséquences.

Dans ce pays, c'est l'élément étranger qui constitue cet accroissement, et avec lui croit de façon inquiétante le nombre des pauvres et des criminels, et, comme la ville est le centre de l'influence nationale, on peut prévoir les tristes et inévitables résultats de cet état de choses.

Il y a quarante ans, ou comptait aux Etas-Unis un criminel sur 3,500 personnes, on en compte un aujourd'hui sur 750. Le nombre des criminels augmente cinq fois plus, proportionellement, que celui de la population.

Les émigrants fournissent plus de la moitié des détenus dans les prisons et les maisons de correction.

Bishop Huntington says: "This country is not in so much danger from a few hundred tramps strolling in the streets, always repulsive and restrained, as it is from an equal number of gentlemen of very different appearance and manners, astute and cautious, with an annual income of a million or more, who never snatch a purse, or break into houses, or pick a lock, and never steal less than $50,000 at a time."

WHAT IS BIBLICAL CRITICISM?

But what is criticism? Some seem to think of it as in the colloquial sense of fault-finding; as if the criticism of the Bible and of literature were the same as the criticism of blameworthy character or conduct. Some people seem to think it is the wanton rejection of what any one dislikes. True criticism is simply discernment; the exercise of the judgment. If a book of the Old Testament seems to be written by Isaiah, or a Psalm by David, or a gospel by St. John, it is criticism that makes us think so, and by criticism alone can we reasonably maintain the opinion. If a passage of Prophecy or a Psalm seems to me not to unfold its fullest spiritual significance in connection with the events with which some equally uninspired critic before me has connected it, even though that other critic has been privileged to write his opinion over the chapter or at the top of the page, my effort at criticism is made not alone, if at all, in literary pride, or pedantic wantonness, but expressly to enter into the emotions of the inspired writer. And it is wonderful how the spiritual enthusiasm and devotion of Bible study quicken, not indeed by questioning every tradition and received opinion, and approved result of former scholarship, concerning the sacred volume, but by willingness to receive light from every quarter, and to correct, if need be, the misinformation of less privileged days. "Then shall ye return," says a prophet, "and discern between the righteous and the wicked; between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not." True religious fellowship consists not in accounting every hypocrite who boasts with his tongue or makes a fair show in the flesh a true and faithful man, to be cherished and defended against the just punishment of his faults, but in discerning and knowing men by their fruits, and honoring most those whose worth is modest and true. So true loyalty to God's Word consists not in reading it with every tradition of man encumbering it, and every mistake in printing or copying it uncorrected, as if these were from him; but in reading it with every faculty awake to His voice and to the movings of His Spirit in the hearts of all sorts and conditions of men.—Standard of the Cross (Episcopal).

FREE THOUGHT.

"Thanks be to free thought," exclaimed the radical passenger who had just demonstrated that matter is indestructible, that force with a big F is co-eval with space with a big S, and that the co-ordination of the senses were recreative and primitive, and that the Ego, co-existant and repellant, was the corollary of creation, and therefore there was no God. "Thanks be to science," he said, "this is the age of reason."

"Yes," said the pale slim passenger on the wood-box, "it is. Your reason appears to have reached about its eleventh or its ninety-seventh year, it's hard to tell which." And the conversation perished and immediately there arose a great calm. It was eleven miles to the next station, and everybody looked out of the windows all the way.—Burdette, Burlington Hawkeye.

One of the clergy of the parish will be at the Parish House, 10th St., above Chestnut, every day during the week, at 11 o'clock. Church open daily, from 9 to 12 o'clock.

It is well for those making arrangements for baptisms, marriages, funerals and other services, needing the presence of a clergyman of the church, to see one of the clergy before fixing the time.

FORMS OF BEQUEST.

FOR THE ENDOWMENT FUND.

OFFERTORIES FOR NOVEMBER.

Third Sunday of the month—Female Benevolent Society.
Other Sundays—General Charities.
Thanksgiving Day—Episcopal Hospital.

THE ATTENTION of the congregation is called to a Phonographic Concert to be held in the Sunday School Room, at the rear of the Church, on Wednesday, November 15th, at 8 o'clock. The proceeds are to be applied by the King's Daughters to the relief of the poor. Tickets can be had by applying to the Verger, Joseph Clayton, or any of the King's Daughters.

THERE WILL BE A GREATER DEMAND UPON THE POOR FUND of the Parish this winter than has been at any time for many years. The demand comes at a time, too, when the people of the Parish feel less able to give than they have for as long a time. The same hard times which throws people out of work also cuts off income and lessens dividends. More than one man who has been accounted "rich"—probably without good reason—now feels very poor. But it must be remembered that while the lessening of one's income is a very serious and painful thing, yet for many among us it only means retrenching a little, doing without some things which we would otherwise have, and which we can get along without very well; the loss of employment, if it be very long continued, means starvation. There are not only thousands of working men out of a job, but there are thousands of clerks, salesmen, stenographers, employees of every sort, who, according to their means, have always been willing to help the less fortunate ones, but who now have nothing to do, and nothing to live upon. We all hope and expect that the present condition of things will not last long. But conversation with many business men lead me to think that it is likely to continue for some months, at any rate. Now, if people will only reflect a little, they will see that a poor man or woman can starve just as dead in two weeks as they could in two years. It is nothing to the purpose to say to a family in need that the times will soon be better. They cannot wait. Rent goes on and hunger recurs regularly. The owner of houses can get along for a good while though his tenants pay him nothing; but the tenant must have food, clothing and fuel for himself and his children.

When people are in need they go first to the Clergy. It does not make any difference whether they are Church-goers or not. They will tell their distress to the Clergy before they will to their own nearest friends, to say nothing of the Societies for the distribution of Charity. They know that the Minister will help them if he can, and that at any rate he will be civil to them, and that he will keep quiet about it. The loving-kindness of Christ is still believed to have its home pre-eminently in the Church. The Offerings in St. Stephen's Church are always for some charitable purpose outside of its own support. There has not been a collection in this Church in twelve years for its own use. The ordinary Offerings, together with the gifts which the Rector asks annually from a number of individuals, have always been sufficient to enable him to do what he has thought ought to be done. Just now they are not enough. That is why he writes this. He has confidence in the people, a confidence justified by an acquaintance and friendship of a good many years, that they will not fail now, even though it put them to some inconvenience, not only to do what is right but what is generous.

ON ALL SAINTS' DAY, in the church, after Morning Prayer and a sermon by the Rev. Dr. McConnell, on the nature and significance of the Order of Deaconesses, the Rt. Rev. O. W. Whitaker, Bishop of Pennsylvania, in the presence of a large congregation, made Miss Emily T. Rodman a Deaconess in accordance to "A form for the setting apart of Deaconesses in the Diocese of Pennsylvania." The Rev. Dr. Rumney, of St. Peter's Church, Germantown, presented the candidate to the Bishop.

The Bishop then asked the following questions, to which the candidate answered for herself.

Have you well considered in your own mind your purpose to serve God in this office and ministry?

Answer. I have so considered it.

Will you endeavor, so long as you shall hold this office, faithfully to fulfill the duties of the same without fickleness or waywardness?

Answer. I will.

Will you diligently ask of God the grace to enable you to cling to this endeavor, and to make this purpose good?

Answer. I will.

Will you reverently obey your Bishop, and other chief Ministers, who, according to the Canons of the Church, may have the charge and government over you: following with a glad mind and will their godly admonitions?

Answer. I will endeavor so to do, the Lord being my helper.

Then the Bishop, laying his hands upon the head of the candidate kneeling before him, said:

Take thou authority to exercise the office of a Deaconess in the Church of God, whereunto thou art now set apart.

Blessed be thou of the Lord, my daughter. The Lord recompense thy work, and a full reward be given thee of the Lord God of Israel, under whose wings thou art come to trust. Amen.

After which the Holy Communion was administered to the Clergy, the newly made Deaconess and the Congregation. The Clergy taking part in the service, beside those already mentioned, were Revs. Dr. Snively, Dr. Rowland, Mr. Ely, Mr. Moses and Mr. Miller.

THE FOLLOWING IS A SAMPLE of a kind of communication which the Clergy of this Church constantly receive:—

PHILADELPHIA October 23rd 1893

REV DR MCCONNELL

I Saw your Picture In the Item Paper, I wanted to write to you to ask you, if I could be of any healp to you I am partley blind of Both eyes, and my right sholder is very badly hurt by lifting more than I was able, but with all the above I am able to work I can Sew by useing an needle that has a cut in the side, I am very handy could I do any work for my Board? I do not want money, only Board for what I will work for, I want to work do you know of any thing I can do

Your church is a rich church, I was thinking if you would speak to Some of the Ladies of your church that I would do mending, say two or three Ladies a week to do mending for them Just for my Board, and I am very handy

by you speaking for me would do good for me, In all your doing good remember me please I was confirmed by Bishop Steavens, and I have a certifcate, that I was confirmed by Bishop Stevens will you please try hard for me for work will you please write me

I had my letter addressed to Mrs Worton on account of I cannot say where I will be as I am trying very hard to get Something to do, the place I have been, the man has 2 days work, and he has his mother over 80 years old to keep, he could not by her coffee, and I had to Buy her coffee and eggs and Bread, and near Starve myself to do it if you could give any thing for the old Lady to eat it would be a blessing if her Son place suts down, I will have to take her to the Alms House.

Very Respectfully

THE FEMALE BENEVOLENT SOCIETY begins its winter work this month. The members of the various Committees will meet as follows:—

Cutting Committee, Tuesday, at 10.30 a.m., November 7th.

Parcelling Committee, Tuesday, 11.30 a.m., November 7th.

Distributing and Paying Committee, Wednesday, at 11.30 a.m., November 8th.

Selling Committee, Wednesday, at 11.30 a.m., November 8th.

The Board of Managers will meet on the first Thursday of each month, after Morning Service.

THE MISSIONARY BOX COMMITTEE will meet on Thursday, December 7th, at 12 o'clock, in the Parish Building, rear of the Church.

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE would like to call attention to the fact that more people than usual are out of employment, and, consequently, more demands than usual will be made upon the generosity of the giving public; therefore the Committee would request that old and new contributors, would kindly send in garments of all descriptions now, early in the season, so that when winter comes, a supply of clothing may be on hand, ready for the needs of cases coming under the immediate jurisdiction of the Committee.

Packages marked for Garment Committee will be received from 10.30 a. m. until 12.30 p. m., every Monday, at the Parish School Building.

The most recent contributions to be acknowledged this month are from:

Miss Edwards, Miss Geib,
Miss L. Bell, Mrs. Swayne,
Miss Veacoch.

Garments received in October,	- -	25

" 20th—Miss Dutilh,	Mrs. Stratton,
" 27th—Miss Cleemann,	Mrs. Reinboth.

THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY reports that on September the 30th ended the Excursions for the children. The inquiry now is, "When will the Concerts commence?" for they call all Entertainments Concerts. These Entertainments are one bright spot in the children's lives, and they are talked about all summer, as they do their Sea Shore trips in the winter.

November 22nd has been decided upon for their Thanksgiving treat; any of the Contributing Members of the Society will be gladly welcome on that evening, should they care to see their delight when Prof. Hoy introduces Mr. and Mrs. Punch and his Magic Tricks.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS of the Whatsoever Circle will have their next meeting Wednesday, November 1st, half past seven o'clock. The question has been asked, "What are they doing, working for the poor?" A suggestion was made and acted upon at the last meeting; it was, to have a shoe bag, in which second-handed shoes could be placed and kept until very cold weather, when shoes were scarce, and then given out to the poor.

This was done in other Parishes, and worked splendidly.

A Phonographic Concert will be given in the Sunday School room of St. Stephen's Church, November 15th, at 8 o'clock. The proceeds are to be given by the King's Daughters to the relief of the poor. Admission, 15 cents.

SELECTIONS.

THE RAMBLER.

The Rambler finds the following in the columns of The Examiner:

On Wednesday of last week an interesting service was held in Jackson Park, Chicago. A representative of each religious faith of the world, beginning with the most ancient, sounded the new liberty bell in the name of peace, unity, and liberty of all religions, and at the same time repeated a silent prayer to their respective divinities, asking blessings on the bell.

The Rambler has diligently searched the recesses of his mind and has failed to find anywhere a more conspicuous example of illustrious idiocy than is depicted in the above. To think of, one after another, the priests and bishops, doctors of divinity, califfs, and muftis, and bonzes and rabbis, and all the rest of them gravely skipping up one after the other to the bell, and each and severally giving it a yank and then in silent prayer to their respective deities asking blessings on the bell! What does the bell want of blessings; wherein does the blessedness of the bell inhere? If it is to be used for fires, perhaps it would be proper to pray that the firemen and the horses may respond promptly, and eke that the fire may be put out before they get there. When they do anything in Chicago, it is on a large scale. If they have a fire, it is a first-class fire; when they have a noisy ruffian for a mayor, they leave nothing to be desired—except that he should die or resign. When they get up an exhibition it whips the world; and when they resolve upon some scenic presentation of surpassing lunacy, they just out-do themselves.

At the New York City Club Bishop Potter observed that he had heard it said that "for a minister who claimed some lineal descent from the Apostles to have even an opinion, and certainly to express an opinion, about political reforms and the best methods of securing them, was a very unapostolic business." This sort of thing the Bishop very appropriately classified as "dismal rubbish."

There is a great deal of that sort of "dismal rubbish" abroad; and, unfortunately, all the rubbish is not on one side. It may be worth while to devote a few lines to rubbish of both sorts.

When a man becomes a minister, he does not cease to possess the rights, nor is he released from the obligations, which belong to him either as a man or as a citizen. The only difference is that, for example's sake, he is bound, as a minister, even more than other men, to a full performance of every public and private duty.—Church Standard.

CHURCHMANSHIP.

There is much talk always about "high," "broad" and "low" as applied to various classes of churchmen, that our readers will relish this little announcement in one of the parish papers, which we think expresses the sentiment of the mass of the clergy in the United States:

"If obedience to the faith and discipline of the undivided church be 'high,' our parish is high and getting higher. If personal holiness and an exclusive trust in our Lord Christ for Salvation be 'low,' our parish is low and getting lower. If large, inclusive views of truth, and the keeping in touch with life in all its modern phrases be 'broad,' our parish is broad and must be broadened.

"But why have 'ifs' and parties in the Living Church? A man who has any power to reason—nay, a man who can read English, and will read it—must see that the prayer book of our church is (1) Catholic, (2) Evangelical, (3) inclusive and adaptable.

"That ringing noble name, a churchman, means that a man possessing it is not 'high' only, for that were instability; nor 'low' only, for that were narrowness; nor 'broad' only, for that were shallowness; but that as a citizen of that city 'the length and breadth and height' of which are equal in the Angelical survey, has in himself the solid, stable, cubic symmetry of a perfect nature."—Exchange.

OFFERTORIES FOR DECEMBER.

Third Sunday of the month—Missionary Box Committee.
Fourth Sunday—Sunday School Festival.
Christmas Day—Aged and Infirm Clergy.
Other Sundays—General Charities.

A COURSE OF SUNDAY AFTERNOON LECTURES on the Life of Christ, will be begun by the Rector on Sunday afternoon, December 3rd. Seven or eight years ago he conducted a course upon the same theme. The theme is inexhaustible, however, and ought to be always of interest. Like the Sunday afternoon courses of lectures heretofore, they will be considerably longer than the conventional sermon. His idea has always been to regard the Sunday afternoon congregation as a large Bible Class, and to have the sermon take the informal and somewhat familiar shape of a Bible Class instruction.

THE LADIES OF THE PARISH HOUSE COMMITTEE, of St. Stephen's Church, intend holding, on the 7th, 8th and 9th of December, their annual sale of the handiwork of gentlewomen, who are obliged, by their own efforts, to support themselves.

In this sale will be found articles of useful and artistic needle-work, and delicious home-made jellies, preserves, pickles, etc., of superior quality and at most reasonable prices.

The ladies of the Committee hope it is understood that no commission is charged the depositors for selling their goods, and earnestly trust that the congregation will do all in their power to further this good work.

BY THE DEATH OF WILLIAM BROWN, the Bell Ringer, a well known figure in St. Stephen's has passed out of sight. For thirty-three years he has rung the Chimes. In all that time he missed but three days from his post.

Although a watchmaker by trade, Mr. Brown's chief interest for all his life had been concentrated in bells. Even in his earliest youth he displayed a love for such work, and it may be said that his talent was inherent, for he had no training to speak of. Born in Stony Stanton, Leicestershire, England, early in life he succeeded in obtaining a position as change-ringer in several of the churches in the neighborhood.

Shortly after his arrival in America, in 1851, he was instituted chimer at St. Stephen's, and since that time has taken a leading part in the installation of bells and chimes in this section of the country. Among the chimes which he opened are St. Marks', this city; St. Paul's, Cheltenham; Trinity Church, West Chester, and the Centennial chimes that were hung in the Cathedral at Garden City, Long Island.

It is not easy to find any one to take his place. Bell ringing seems indeed to be a kind of lost art. Even advertising for a chimer has failed so far to bring a competent chimer. For a little while the congregation, and the people in the vicinity of the church, will have to endure a little discord while a bell ringer is learning. He cannot ring without learning; he cannot learn without ringing; and he cannot ring without making a noise.

It would be a right and graceful thing to erect a tablet to William Brown upon the wall at the entrance to the tower. The Rector has an idea that many who have for many years listened to the music of his bells would gladly contribute moderate sums for this purpose. He has already received $10. for it; he would like $50. more.

FOR THE ACCOMMODATION of the Congregation and workers in the Parish House, a Messenger call box has been placed in the Altar Society's room (on the first floor), which can be used at any time for Messenger Telegraph Service or calling coupe.

UNIVERSITY EXTENSION IN OUR CHURCHES.

Since October 1st, 1893, the American Society for the Extension of University Teaching, has inaugurated a plan which ought to be of peculiar interest to our churches. The society will organize classes for systematic instruction in any subject that the class may prefer, the meetings to be held at the time and place which the class desires. The course extends over ten weeks, one meeting each week, and will be based upon a text-book, to be selected by the instructor and approved by the society. Thus, in Civics—the duties of citizenship; the work has been based upon John Fiske's "Civil Government in the United States" and Bryce's "American Commonwealth." In Literature, such books as Stedman's "Poets of America" are used for reference. The advantages of the plan are obvious—the instructor comes to the class, so that instruction is brought to the students, rather than compelling him to go far away to the college. Again, by leaving the selection of the time of meeting in large measure to the class, any conflict with church engagements is avoided: for instance, a class lately organized at the P. E. Church of the Holy Apostles will meet on Wednesday evening at 9 P. M., after the regular service. Again, a small number can undoubtedly do better and more satisfactory work than a large and promiscuous audience of three or four hundred. The total fee for these class courses has been fixed at $75.00, irrespective of the size of the class, so that for a large class the individual fee will be very small. In Civics, the fee varies from $25.00 to $75.00, depending upon the size of the class. Why should not each church in this city take hold of this movement and start work along University Extension lines? It will be another step toward the ideal when an education can be brought within the reach of every man and woman in the community.

A Representative of the University Extension Bureau will be present at the Parish House on Friday evening, December 8th, at 7.30 o'clock, to meet any persons who care to undertake a course of study under its auspices. It will then and there be determined what subject shall be undertaken, and times of meeting will be arranged.

THE GARMENT COMMITTEE are in need of canton flannel under garments for men, women and children, as well as infants' slips for day and night wear, and unbleached clothing for women, flannel shirts and sacks; and in fact, warm clothing of any description.

As 109 garments were contributed during November, and 109 were distributed during the month, the number of articles on hand remains the same as at the close of October.

SELECTIONS.

BISHOP HILL ON MISSION WORK IN AFRICA.

The Right Rev. Dr. J. Sidney Hill, Bishop of the Church of England in western equatorial Africa, writes in a most interesting manner in the Church Missionary Gleaner, concerning the great privilege of being a missionary in Africa, and the bright prospects in his own missionary diocese: "It was an African that rendered the needed service of bearing the cross of the world's Saviour to His crucifixion; may it not be that in the crowning day that is coming, the very brightest jewels in the Redeemer's diadem will be found to be some of Africa's suffering sons? It was in Africa that the Holy Child Jesus, the Son of God, found a needed refuge from the massacre of innocents; may it not be that ere the King comes Africa's blood-bought children may find in the loving Father's unspeakable gift of His Only-begotten One a recompense, a rest, a refuge for all their sorrows? It was in Africa that Arab and English, American and Portuguese, vied with each other in producing what Dr. Livingstone called the 'open sore of Africa,' and to-day the chief characteristic of that land of human woes is the familiar sight of innumerable heavy-laden burden-bearers—little children, feeble women, over-worked men—sighing from morn to night for the Rest-giver, and the ushering in of the kingdom of righteousness and peace."

THE Japanese Government is now closing the schools it has established for the higher education of girls. Missionaries think this retrograde movement is largely due to the fact that polygamy is sanctioned by the government, which fears that if Japanese women become educated and emancipated, they will oppose a custom so degrading to themselves and their children.

LIFE is short, and we have never too much time for gladdening the hearts of those who are traveling the same dark journey with us. Oh, be swift to love! Make haste to be kind.—Amiel,

IN 1850, it is said, there were about ten Norwegian pastors in the United States. Now the Norwegians in the Northwest have 682 pastors, and 1,700 congregations.

WHEN the missionaries first went to Uganda, sixteen years ago, there was no written language. Now 10,000 of the population are able to read their language.

A Happy New Year to each and every one.

Will the people kindly speak up a little more boldly in the Responses during the Service? Especially in the reading of the Psalter there is a certain affectation of timidity, which is all nonsense. In a church where there is so large a proportion of strangers as there is in ours, it is most desirable that our own people would respond full and strong. Strangers wait for those who are at home to set the key. It is not the idea that each one should whisper the responses to himself. He is not his own audience. It is not good breeding for one to talk to himself in company.

There has seldom been seen a harder working set of people than those who assembled at the Parish House on the Friday and Saturday before Christmas, to parcel out and distribute the mass of stuff which came for the poor people's dinners. Mr. Miller had to be every where at once. The boys of the Guild shouldered great baskets and marched off with them. The King's Daughters, with Mrs. Vanderslice and Mrs. Molloy to guide them, worked like grocery clerks. The Deaconess found that deaconizing is a laborious business. Good and capable friends came in to help. Mr. Harmon Robinson sent his wagon and came to load it. When one wagon was found to be insufficient, Mr. Clarkson went out and captured another one. When that was found to be still not enough, the Verger, whose clear head is always to be depended upon, came to the relief with his sable vehicle, filled it with a sort of burden to which it is little accustomed, and probably for the first time, an undertaker's wagon was welcome at many a house!

The response to the Rector's appeal for Christmas dinners for the poor was most gratifying. It would seem as though the people had been simply waiting for some opportunity to give expression to their good will to their poor neighbors. I have no doubt that this is the constant fact. People who have are always willing to share with those who have not, but the trouble is they do not know and cannot know who and where the needy are. This is why they answer so quickly to any Daysman who is in a position to reach out for alms with one hand and distribute them with the other. The Clergyman is probably better fitted to do this than is any other man, by reason of his situation. But even he can do it only imperfectly. The best of all possible ways would be for every well disposed man or woman to find out some unfortunate family, and undertake, personally, the task of putting them upon their feet. In nine cases out of ten, counsel and sympathy and moral bracing up are more needed than food or money.

But candor compels the confession that this seems to be practically impossible as things are. The well-to-do and the ill-to-do are really as unknown to one another as though they lived a thousand miles apart and spoke a different tongue. It is to establish the needed connecting link that there have been devised, of late years, all the societies and machines, and devices for the administration of charity. Some of them are good and some are very mischievous. But they all exist for the reason that people have found it impossible to administer their own charities. The loss is unspeakable, and the loss is greater to the rich than it is to the poor. The poor may lose the chance for the things they need, but the rich are likely to lose their humanity.

The condition of things just now is deplorable. No such wide spread distress and sense of hopelessness has ever existed in this country. It is not as bad in Philadelphia as it is in many other places, but, God knows, it is bad enough. People are not actually starving to death. That is not the form the suffering takes. There are probably a good many men in this town just now who would willingly exchange the anguish they bear at the sight of the helplessness and hopelessness of their families for the pangs of actual hunger, and think they had made a good bargain.

The Citizens' Permanent Relief Committee are dealing with the situation, upon the whole, as well and as wisely as any body of men who could be selected. For the rest of us there would seem to be open only two alternatives,—either seek out and carry some needy family personally, or give to the Committee the means to do it for us. The first way is beyond comparison the better one, where it is practicable. It is also much the more pleasant one. Miss Rodman, our Deaconess says in her report:—

"If those who gave so generously for the Christmas dinners of the poor, could have seen the surprise and delight with which their gifts were received, they would have been well repaid. Many a family would have had no Christmas dinner had it not been for the baskets sent out by St. Stephen's Church. People have come with tears in their eyes to express their gratitude, not only for the dinner itself, but for the kind thought and love that prompted the sending.

On Sunday morning a little girl stood waiting after Sunday School until the other children had gone; when the teacher went to see what she wanted, the child threw up her hands, and said: 'Oh! my mother wanted me to thank somebody for the loverly things sent to us, there is enough for all of us. Loverly things.'

At one house where a basket was taken late Saturday afternoon, two small children were sitting alone in the dark, waiting for their father and mother to come in. The lady who brought the basket put it on the floor and lit the lamp. As she turned around she saw that the little boy had seized the turkey in his arms, and was dancing about the room, with its long neck hanging over his shoulder, its yellow legs showing against his dark dress. He was shouting in glee, 'We've got a turkey, we is going to eat a turkey.' At another house the mother was sitting alone, the six children having gone to Sunday School. Her head was bent over her arms on the table. As she looked up to see who had come in, traces of tears were seen on her face. Such a change as came over it, when she saw the basket, and understood that it was for her! She looked ten years younger. She said she had thought there could be no Christmas dinner for them this year. One basket was taken to a family where there are six children, the father is blind. They too had made up their minds that 'Santa Claus would not remember them.' Words can hardly express the happiness which that basket gave; especially to the oldest child, a sweet faced girl of twelve, who had evidently learned many of the lessons that care and anxiety teach.

A dinner was sent to a man who is dying of consumption; he has a boy of twelve, a thin little fellow, who looks half starved, and an old father and mother. All that the family have had to live on for a year and a half, has been what the old man could earn by doing odd bits of work. The sick man was telling a friend afterwards about the basket. 'I had been thinking all day,' he said, 'that there was no one to give any presents this year, now that I could not work, and my mother was just saying that we should have no Christmas dinner this year, when just then that beautiful dinner came.' And then the old woman insisted on showing the friend the turkey, the packages of tea and sugar, the hominy and potatoes, and the apples put away in the drawer. And as each article was taken out, and shown, the old woman would exclaim, 'and ain't it beautiful?'"

The following is a list, as accurate as possible, of the gifts and the givers:—

Mrs. H. P. Taylor, box of oranges; no name, 1 turkey; Mr. B. R. Thomas, 5 dozen baskets; Mr. Cornelius, dinners; no name, potatoes, turnips, onions, turkeys, cabbage and butter; Miss Baird, large order groceries, Mrs. Bowden, 1 basket of potatoes; Mrs. S. B. W. THE SUNDAY SCHOOLS of the Parish held their Christmas Festival on Thursday, Holy Innocents' Day, at half past seven o'clock in the evening. The Christmas Carols were sung, a short service was held, and Dr. McConnell made an address to the children. After this was ended the school was entertained by Mr. Heath with ventriloquism, magic, and a Punch & Judy show. Then the teachers distributed boxes of candies, cake and oranges to the various classes.

The tree was beautifully decorated with the ornaments and glitter known only to Christmas trees, and stood forth conspicuously brilliant at the far end of the Sunday School room, reflecting the various colored lights thrown upon it from a calcium light reflector placed in the gallery. The carols were well sung, and the festival was greatly enjoyed by all present, including the parents and friends of the children of the school.

LAWRENCEVILLE, VA., Dec. 30, 1893.

MY DEAR MR. MCCONNELL:

Believe me, I would not trouble a busy man like you are, overwhelmed, too, I know, with appeals for help, with a letter, if my wants were not pressing and imperative. For the past two months we have had typhoid fever in the hospital; at one time twenty-one cases were desperately ill. This fearful infliction, with all the additional expenses it has entailed, is almost more than I can stand. I have eighty-five helpless people to provide for during the winter which is coming on so fast. Owing to the stringency in the money market, my friends cannot help me as generously as they have done formerly. I feel bewildered and overwhelmed, and would lose heart utterly, and sink hopelessly in these deep waters, if I did not remember Who stands at the helm.

Most sincerely yours,

PATTIE BUFORD.

THE MOTHERS' LOYAL CIRCLE of King's Daughters, composed mostly of women in the Mothers' meeting, held a Fair in the Guild room of the Parish house the evening of December 21st. The amount realized was not so large as from their first fair of a year ago. The proceeds go to the buying of material, which is made up and distributed to the worthy poor. Last month they sent thirty-two woolen garments of excellent material and good work, to the unemployed poor in the northern part of the city.

The first work they did after the circle was organized was to send thirty garments to Mrs. Buford's Hospital. The two following years to the City Mission.

They desire to thank Miss Stevenson for the very generous donation to their Fair, and also the Whatsoever Circle and Mrs. Fenton.

DONATIONS RECEIVED in December by the Children's Friend Society:

Miss Viola Pine,	$ 50
Miss Kate Burton,	2 00
Mrs. C. Wetherley,	1 00
Miss A. S.,	1 00
Miss Sidford,	1 00
Mrs. Joseph Davison,	5 00
Mrs. Moody,	1 00
Mrs. S. E. Russel,	1 00
Total,	$12 50

From Mrs. Sidney Evans, two large boxes of new clothing, dresses, mittens, stockings and many other useful and pretty gifts. From Miss Kate Burton, mittens, stockings and handkerchiefs. Garment Society, eleven garments. Miss Lowenberg, clothing. Miss Reede, bags for the Christmas tree. Mrs. Davison, dolls. Mrs. S. E. Russel, dolls. Miss Cleemann, candy. King's Daughters, mittens, stockings, books and candy. Mrs. Stratton, toys. Mrs. Judson, ornaments for the tree and many pretty gifts. Mrs. McConnell, toys and clothing. Mrs. McPheran, ornaments for the tree. Miss Kalbfleish, clothing. A little gift for each child, made by the children in Miss Rodman's Sunday afternoon class. Mr. and Mrs. Hall, Japanese toys. Miss Stevenson, Christmas cards.

What a bright and happy Christmas this has been for the poor children, so many of them have received Christmas baskets from the church.

Thanks have come from north, south, east and west; many have said, they would not have had anything to eat, had it not been for the good things in the baskets. Mamma and Papa cried, one little one remarked. A mother of eleven in family, said "we actually would not have had a thing to eat; I have $3.10 but that must go towards the rent, or we go in the street.

A little girl 14 years came to thank for the family, "thanks very much and wish all a Happy New Year." She had beefsteak in her basket, said, "there wasn't a tough piece about it; it was nicer than turkey," also remarked, that in her life, which was 14 years, they had but one turkey.

Another little one kept calling the turkey a bird, another took the turkey in her arms and hugged it. One poor child who was left out, said,

"we have nothing but sauer-kraut," which she did not seem to admire for a Christmas dinner; however she was made very happy, for there was a basket left over which was given to her.

More than twenty families have already thanked the church for their baskets, and they keep coming all the time.

December 29th the little ones had their Christmas treat, Mr. Hall, their good friend, had very kindly offered to entertain them, but unfortunately he was taken sick, however that did not hinder the children from having a good time.

The tickets said half past seven, but while some of the ladies were packing the last boxes and hanging a few things on the Christmas Tree in the Sunday School room, little feet were heard and two little heads peeped in, it was just half past six o'clock. This shows how eager they are to come and how very much they enjoy these entertainments.

Dr. McConnell, Mr. Miller and Miss Rodman very kindly assisted the ladies in making the evening a pleasant one for the children, whilst they did their part too, many of them reciting or singing their little pieces which they had learned. Kris Kringle was then introduced, then the fun began, such a laughing time and shaking of hands as he had, but the best of all was the distribution of gifts. Each child was given a bag of candy or orange, Japanese toy and some useful gift. All went home happy and said they had a good time. It was the only Christmas a great many of them had except their Christmas basket from the church.

WHAT THE KING'S DAUGHTERS of the Whatsoever Circle have been doing.

Thanksgiving, four large baskets of provisions were packed in the Parish House and taken by the members themselves to poor families down town; two other families were helped in other ways. Christmas, their little girl out at the Home of the Merciful Saviour, which they have promised to dress, must have a new coat, mittens and aprons in her Christmas box. The poor children in the Children's Friend Society were not forgotten. Dolls, monkeys, dogs and brownies were stuffed, mittens, stockings, &c. bought, and candy for the tree.

Money received by the King's Daughters:—

Cash,	$5 00
Miss Sidford,	1 00
Money for tickets,	1 00
Total,	$7 00

Their meetings will be held in the Parish House, January 3rd and 17th, at half past seven o'clock.

SELECTIONS.

L'EVANGILE ET ROME.

J'ai dit: Miséricorde, et non pas sacrifice,
J'ai dit: Donnez gratis ce qui vous fut donné
Gratis; Et cependant au peuple rançonné
Vous vendez le baptême au jour de la naissance;
Vous vendez au pécheur l'inutile indulgence;
Vous vendez aux amants le droit de s'épouser;
Vous vendez aux mourants le droit d'agoniser;
Vous vendez aux défunts la messe funéraire;
Vous vendez aux parents l'office anniversaire;
Vous vendez oraisons, messes, communions;
Vous vendez chapelets, croix, bénédictions;
Rien n'est sacré pour vous, tout vous est marchandise,
Et l'on ne saurait faire un pas dans votre église
Sans payer pour entrer, sans payer pour s'assesoir,
Sans payer pour prier. L'autel est un comptoir;
La papauté du Monde est la grande usurière:
Ma maison, ici bas, est maison de prière,
Et vous en avez fait repaire de voleurs!
De la vierge on y vend les banales faveurs,
Comme en un mauvais lieu l'on vend l'amour des femmes.
Tout reflète chez vous la laideur de vos âmes,
Les scribes, vos aïeux, étaient moins pervertis.
Vous n'êtes mêmes pas des sépulcres blanchis!

V. HUGO.

At the recent Keswick missionary convention, Mrs. Bishop, the great traveller, spoke and made a profound impression by her eloquent dealing with the consciences of well-to-do Christians. "You have no right to pray for money for your missions," she said; "you have got it, God has given it to you; you have only to use it in the right way."

In the midst of a famine a Hindo said to the native Christians who were starving: "If you will renounce Christ I will give you all the grain you need." Not one accepted the offer.
